Council members Shirley Roloff and Norm Probert continued to voice opposition to any change in the zone. "Leave it as it is," Roloff said. "If we are going to take it (the tax case) to court, we should do it on its merits."

Probert showed a map and slides of the area which indicated, he said, that much of the scenic reserve was eroded, under water or very wet. "I say we do not hold public hearings on changes in scenic reserve," Probert said, "or send it back to the planning commission which asked for time to study it."

Mayor Ralph McRae said in a final statement that many of the members of the Chicago Club were "supermillionaires." He maintained the club was not assessed on an equitable basis.

"I don't call it a scenic reserve, I call it a private reserve," he said.

AMENDMENT TO THE HAYES TOWNSHIP, CHARLEVOIX COUNTY, MICHIGAN
ZONING ORDINANCE
Ordinance # 87-1
NOTICE OF ADOPTION

IT IS ORDAINED that the Hayes Township, Charlevoix County, Michigan, Zoning Ordinance, adopted July 2, 1979, as amended thereafter, shall be further amended, shall be further amended as follows:

Article V

Section 5.13

A. Shoreland Protection Strip

No building or structure, except boardwalks, docks and launch ramps shall be erected closer than one hundred feet (100) feet from the shoreline at normal high water level of any lake, stream or creek within the Township. In addition, a strip of land thirty-five (35) feet wide from the normal high water mark bordering the body of water shall be maintained in trees and shrubs in their natural state. The vegetation and the soil shall not be altered or disturbed within the shoreline protection strip, as herein described. Trees and shrubs may be pruned, however, to afford a view of the water.

Any cluster of dwellings or multiple family dwellings, including condominiums, must be approved by the Planning Commission through a site plan review and the shoreline setbacks may be increased up to 150 feet, or more, to compensate for the increased density and impact on the shorelines. The lowest elevation of any part of any structure shall be a minimum of 590 feet above sea level, International Great Lakes Datum (IGLD). For lakes with no established high water mark a minimum elevation of 5 feet above the existing water level shall be required. Filling of land to meet these requirements is prohibited.

B. Limitation of Boat Dockage

Not more than one (1) mooring, OR One (1) slip, OR one (1) dock space for each one hundred (100) feet of lake frontage, as measured along the water's edge of the natural shoreline at the normal high water mark of the lake, may be provided for mooring or dockage of boats in any zoning district in the Township. "One (1) mooring," or "one (1) slip," or "one (1) dock space," as used herein, means space for a single boat which is powered by an engine, including a sailboat powered by an auxillary engine. This Ordinance does not intend to limit, and there is no limit on the number of row boats, dinghies, rubber boats, canoes or small sailboats which may be kept and used on lake or stream frontage provided that no such boat shall have engine power of any kind other than hand or foot power. In computing the number of feet of natural shoreline, as above described, the measurement shall be along the water's edge of normal high water mark of the lake at the natural shoreline undisturbed by any excavation, channel, lagoon or canal. The measurement shall not be made along any man-made channel, lagoon or canal.

C. Limitation of "Funnel Development"

Any development in any zoning district which shares a common lakefront or stream area may not permit more than one (1) single family home, cottage, condominium or apartment unit to the use of each one hundred (100) feet of lake or stream frontage in such common lakefront or stream area as measured along the water's edge of normal high water mark of the lake or stream. This restriction is intended to limit the number of users of the lake or stream frontage to preserve the quality of the waters, avoid congestion, and to preserve the quality of recreational use of all waters and recreational lands within the Township. This restriction shall apply to any parcel regardless of whether access to the water shall be gained by easement, common fee ownership, single fee ownership or lease. This restriction shall not apply to a "Public Access Site" as hereafter described.

D. Marine Sewage Pump-Out facility

Any dock facility providing dockage for four (4) or more boats with marine sewage holding tanks on board shall provide a marine sewage pump-out facility which shall be capable of providing pump-out service to a Health Department approved sewage disposal facility.

E. Modification by the Zoning Board of Appeals

The Zoning Board of Appeals may, upon petition and after notice and hearing as provided in Article VII, vary or modify the strict application of this section (5.13 A-D) if it shall determine that undue hardship will otherwise result and the spirit and intent of this Ordinance will be preserved by such variance or modification. The Board of Appeals may, as a condition of such variance or modification, impose such conditions upon the use of the lands and lakefront or streamfront as it shall deem necessary to preserve the spirit and intent of this Ordinance.

F. Public Access Sites.

Land abutting a lake or stream, which land is under the possession and control of a governmental agency including Hayes Township, the County of Charlevoix, the Charlevoix County Road Commission, the State of Michigan, or other governmental agency, and which governmental agency allows public access across the site to the lake or stream abutting the site, is herein described as a "Public Access Site."

Such Public Access Sites may be owned or leased by the public agency, or dedicated to the use of the public, but shall, in any case, be under the exclusive control of one or more public agencies which have the authority to impose regulations and restrictions upon the use of the site and upon access to the abutting lake or stream.

The restrictions of this Section 5.13 (A-D) shall not apply to a "Public Access Site," as above described, provided that such sites are subject to governmental control enabling the controlling governmental agency to limit boat docking, moorage and boat launching, prohibit overnight mooring, camping, vehicle parking, and other controls upon use of the site.

The governmental agency shall have the authority to impose such controls and restrictions upon the use of Public Access Sites and the abutting waters as are deemed necessary to protect the lake or stream and adjoining properties from pollution, congestion, other damage, or unreasonable impositions upon the use and enjoyment of others using the site, using other private property in the proximity of the site, or the waters which the site abuts.

If not otherwise prohibited by law, the Hayes Township board shall also have the authority to pass ordinances and adopt rules restricting the use of such Public Access Sites and the use of the abutting lake or stream in such manner as is deemed necessary in the future to protect the lake or stream, the users thereof, and properties in the proximity thereof from pollution, congestion, other damage or unreasonable imposition upon the use and enjoyment of others. Such ordinances may designate different rules, regulations and restrictions for each individual Public Access Site as shall be deemed appropriate for the protection of the particular site, the waters, or private property in the proximity of the particular site.

G. Shoreland Protection Strip Replanting Requirement.

A planted strip of land thirty-five (35) feet wide from the normal high water mark, bordering the body of water. The replanted strip shall consist of a mix of deep rooted trees (either deciduous or evergreen) and woody shrubs, with not less than thirty per cent of the replanting consisting of deciduous or evergreen trees.

Spacing Requirements: Deciduous trees shall be no further apart than 8'x8', evergreens (pine, spruce and cedar) no further apart than 6'x6' and woody shrubs no further apart than 3'x3'.

H. — Property owners may apply to the Zoning Administrator for permission to clear a section of the lakefront for recreational purposes under the following conditions:

1. The cleared area does not exceed 25% of the total frontage on the lake, and consists of no more that 50 linear feet and maximum depth of 35 ft. per parcel.
2. A shoreline protection strip or greenbelt of 35 feet in depth shall be maintained, or planted, if none exists, behind the area to be cleared.
3. In areas of wetlands, no sand or fill shall be used, but boardwalks or platforms may be constructed.
4. In areas where steep grades are evident, access paths to the body of water shall meander or curve to maintain erosion control.

I. — Violation of this Ordinance shall be subject to the Enforcement and Penalties as set forth in Section 8.07 of the said Hayes Township Zoning Ordinances dated July 2, 1979, as amended.

J. — This Ordinance shall be subject to the provision of Section 8.09 — validity — of said Hayes Township Zoning Ordinance dated July 2, 1979, as amended.

K. — This Ordinance shall become immediately effective upon publication hereof following adoption by the Hayes Township board.

Tennis team returns veterans, hopes to repeat as champs

The Charlevoix Rayder tennis team opened its court season at home on Tuesday against Harbor Springs and will travel around the bay to Harbor for a return meet on Monday, April 20, according to Coach Erik Lundteigen.

With the return of all but one starter from last season, Lundteigen is excited about the upcoming season. "If experience and numbers mean anything we should do very well. I have 45 kids out for the team including returnees who saw action and others that should come along well with another year behind them. I'm really looking forward to a good season," Lundteigen commented.

Among the players from last season are Mike Chew, Rusty Coolman, Jon Eakes, Dan Staublin, Quint Welker and Ty Wagner, all seniors; Marty Joy, a junior; and Wes Cumberland and Charlie Wilthoeft.

"Some of these people are beginning their fourth year and were members of the team that took the Class C regional title and placed seventh in the state last year. Their experience counts for a lot. Then I'm excited about the number, 45, which should result in some good players along the way," he added.

Others coming up and showing promise are F.L. Dammann, Robert Sell, John O'Brien, David Salmonson, Heather Dietrich, Tina Fershee, and Julie Brewster, sophomores.

Track squads open 1987 season

The Charlevoix Rayder track teams opened their 1987 seasons at Traverse City Wednesday. The boys had a dual meet with Traverse City which also had a dual meet with Benzie Central, and the girls were in a triangular with Traverse and Benzie.

The boys defeated Traverse City 45-92 while the girls placed third.

The teams will be at Petoskey Wednesday with Cheboygan and, on Thursday, April 23, at Gaylord coach Hal Evans said.

In Wednesday's meet, the Rayder boys took five first places. There were:

Mile - Scott Miller, a freshman, 4:46.77.

800-meter run - Pat Rajewski, 2:03.

300-meter low hurdles - Jason Whitley, 41:3.

400-meter run - 2, Gibbs.

Two mile - 2, Scott Miller. 3, Gehry Wiesner, also a freshman.

Records for all girls' events have been lost so all times, effective this season, will be considered as records, Coach Ken Plude said.

The results of the girls' meet were:

100-meter dash - 2, Barbie Boss. 4, Pease. 13.82.

Boat and barge proposal weighed by city council

by DOUG TRUAX

City Council Monday came up with new, tougher terms on a docking proposal for the Star of Charlevoix dinner-cruise boat and an accompanying barge.

Council proposed that City Manager Michael Wiesner work out a one-year contract with John McGoff's Star Line Corp. which would allow the new 150-person dinner boat and a 35 x 70-foot barge to be docked at the city marina at the end of Clinton Street.

Unlike a previous proposal that received a cool public reception last week, the current plan would be limited to one year, would not include alcoholic beverages or food on the barge and would require McGoff's organization to pay the costs of removing a city dock to accommodate the boat and replacing the dock if they did not renew the agreement after one year.

In return for the lease of space, the city would receive 1 percent of the gross revenues from the Star operations. Council also suggested a $5,000 minimum for the first year. The previous plan called for 2 percent of gross and $10,000 minimum.

The Star of Charlevoix would pay for all sewer, water and electrical usage. The company would also be required to submit a scale drawing site plan of the boat and barge.

Public reaction to the Star proposal was mixed. Many in the audience Monday objected to turning part of the public waterfront over to private interests. Others argued that the Star of Charlevoix was being given special treatment not given other businesses.

Karl Gilewicz, owner of Karl's Pastry Shop on Bridge Street, was among those protesting the proposal. "You're not dealing equitably with everyone in town," he said. The city manager, he charged, had expressed the opinion that the city was working to make the Star operation profitable. Where was the city, Gilewicz asked, when other businesses in town faced financial difficulties.

"It sounds like you are working for the Star rather than the city," Gilewicz told Wiesner.

Jim Mabee, owner of The Clothing Company, told council the Star of Charlevoix helped his business. With the state facing declining population and our schools looking at decreased enrollments, Mabee said, the jobs and financial benefits of the Star outweighed the difficulties.

"We need jobs. We need jobs for the kids that come home from college," he said.

Bruce MacArthur endorsed the one-year contract, noting that it would give both the city and the Star a chance to evaluate the project.

Kathy Etienne, a Charlevoix Township resident, said the city was giving away too much. "I'm in favor of developing business," she said, "but what you people are giving away is our most important asset. I think you are being taken advantage of in the name of the almighty buck."

Hagen Manker questioned whether the barge and the boat had to be accepted as a package. "I just don't see that the barge is necessary," he said, adding that the boat could be loaded from Clinton Street.

Mayor Ralph McRae opened Monday's discussion of the proposal by citing statistics on the Star Line's operations in Charlevoix and other ports. In 1986, he said, the Star of Charlevoix drew 34,000 visitors to town. Similar boats drew 84,000 in Chicago, 76,000 in Detroit and 34,000 in Milwaukee.

McRae said the Star provided 60-70 jobs in Charlevoix and last year had a payroll of $225,000.

Council voted 4-2 to have Wiesner and the Star Line Corp. develop a contract for council's review. Norm Probert and Shirley Roloff cast the dissenting votes.

Historic Horton Bay General Store sold

by TOM DAMMANN

HORTON BAY — The Horton Bay General Store, an area landmark first made famous in some of Ernest Hemingway's stories, was sold Wednesday to a former Charlevoix summer resident and his wife.

In keeping with more than a century of tradition that while owners come and go, the store maintains its unique atmosphere where the coffee counter serves as a community center, the new owners, Wyatt Gordon, 31, and his wife, Lenora, 25, promise to do nothing more than give the venerable building a fresh coat of paint, expand the food service and "beef up the inventory."

Gordon has lived in Santa Fe, N.M. for the past 10 years, "where I started a picture framing business which has been successful enough to permit me to make real my lifelong dream of living in Charlevoix County and sailing on Lake Charlevoix," he told the Courier.

"And we have the dogs (Russian wolfhounds) to help chase Windigo," he added, grinning.

The sale of the store by its former owners, Ray and Jan Eggers, was negotiated by Mark D. Kowalske and Lynda Christensen, of Centruy 21 Kowalske, Boyne City.

The Eggers will continue living in the vicinity and Mrs. Eggers will open her Key Hole Deli in Walloon Lake on Memorial Day weekend.

The Horton Bay Store changes hands: on the porch of the historic store, new owners Lenora Gordon (left) and Wyatt Gordon (standing) talk with Jen Eggers, former co-owner.

NEW PARKING AT LAST

Work crews last week began demolition of the old Erber building on Clinton Street in preparation for converting the area to a parking lot for downtown. The demolition was delayed for some time as the city sought the necessary permits to dispose of asbestos insulation. The site will allow for over 60 parking spaces.

School Board to ask voters for three millage renewals

by FRAN MARTIN

The Charlevoix Board of Education voted to ask the voters of the Charlevoix school district to renew a request for 15.25 mills for operational purposes and 1.25 mills to supplement the loss of funds to the DDA (Downtown Development Authority) and as the result of the Headlee Amendment. Both millages would be for one year.

Also requested will be a renewal of .5 mills for five years for the library.

The decision to ask for the renewal of the 1.25 mills for one year came after Vincent Olach, business manager, advised that the school district would lose approximately $188,000 to DDA and the Tax Increment Financing Authority (TIFA) and an estimated $39,000 under the Headlee Amendment which limits a school district's revenue of the cost of living increase.

Olach also discussed a proposed computerized heating system available from the Honeywell Corp. He explained its operation and the savings that would result. The board authorized him to submit a letter of intent to the company which will then do a survey of the schools and come up with what he termed "hard figures" relating to the cost.

In other action, the board:

–Approved requests for overnight trips for the Charlevoix High School Band which will leave for Lansing after school on Friday and return Saturday after playing at the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Festival; for the Charlevoix Middle School students, under Tom Sothard, to attend the future Problem Solving Bowl at Ann Arbor April 24-25 and senior members of the high school band for a trip to Chicago May 8-10.

–Approved the hiring of Becky Gengle as girls softball coach.

–Accepted a gift of three Sesquicentennial flags from the Charlevoix Kiwanis Club for use inside the school buildings. Ken Weller, Kiwanis president, presented the flags to Jan Raecke,

Problem solvers head for State Bowl

by ANNE KELLY

For the first time in four years of school participation four girls will represent the Charlevoix Middle School at the state level competition of the Michigan Future Problem Solving Bowl, held annually at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

The qualifying team of Amy Shupert, Angela Levengood, Mariah Brown and Stacy Tilton will tackle the problem of "illiteracy." In order to qualify for the state level, the team was required to solve three practice problems over a period of several months. The problems dealt with subjects of "Solid Waste Disposal," "The Changing Family," and "Water."

In order to solve problems, students are given a "fuzzy situation" involving the topic. They must then brainstorm the problem and create twenty related problems from which they narrow it down to the team's selection of the underlying problem. The same procedure is used to deduce the best solution to that problem. Results are evaluated by a team of judges.

The qualifying solution to the problem of water conservation which won the team an opportunity to participate at the state level was as follows:

"We, the Future Problem Solvers of America, will design a summer camp for kindergarten through high school age kids. This camp would promote water conservation. One of the major activities would be to win the "who can keep their part of the lake the cleanest" contest. This will combine learning with fun so that the future leaders of Aldara (the problematic hypothetical location) may fully understand water conservation. This will ensure that the residents of Aldara may always have a supply of clean, fresh, potable water and because this program will be so successful, the government will voluntarily fund it. This will be put into effect in the year 2035 on Aldara."

Team members will spend two hours pondering the problem of illiteracy when they compete in Ann Arbor on April 25. They will not know the specific problem until they walk into the room, and will be unaided by their coach, Tom Sothard.

Charlevoix Yesterday

These men and women were photographed many years ago on the old Charlevoix pier, apparently enjoying pleasant spring weather. Another generation will soon be relaxing on the new pier, but the bets are they won't be wearing hats and their other clothes will be less formal than those shown above.

New county map available

Copies of a new map of Charlevoix County are available at Chambers of Commerce, City Halls, and other places throughout the county.

The map was prepared under the direction of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners and printed by the Prestige Press of Boyne City. It shows all the roads in the county, as well as the location of township halls, campgrounds, public parks, public sites, skiing areas, golf courses, snowmobiling trails, parks, and cemeteries.

The reverse side of the map contains information about the three cities in the county, as well as Advance, Bay Shore, Beaver Island, Boyne Falls, Horton Bay, Ironton, Norwood, and Walloon Lake. There is also a road index, a schedule of county-wide annual events, and a table of county statistics.

Industrial Arts projects get showing in Charlevoix Friday

—by FRAN MARTIN

"It's an opportunity not to be passes up" is what Jerry Puhl and Jim Jinsky chairmen of the Regional Industrial Education Fair, are saying about the fair that will open at the Charlevoix High school gymnasium at 1:30 p.m. Friday.

At that time more than 900 exhibits in various fields of industrial education from northern Michigan north of Cadillac will be on display. There will be entries of woodworking, metal work, architectural drawing, pattern making and welding, plastics, electronics, electricity, graphic arts, welding plus numerous open division entries involving more than one category.

The exhibit will remain open until 9 p.m. Friday for public viewing.

The top four entries in each of the more than 60 categories will qualify for entry in the State Industrial Education Fair to be held at the Grand Traverse Resort Village the following weekend, Friday and Saturday, May 1 and 2.

All of the entries in the fair will be those made by students in the seventh through the twelfth grades.

A staff of judges will judge the exhibits after they are put in place Thursday evening and Friday morning in preparation for the open exhibit beginning at 1:30 p.m.

The Michigan Industrial Education Society will hold its annual meeting during the state fair at the Grand Traverse Resort Village when entries from throughout the state will be on display from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Friday and from 8 a.m. until noon on Saturday, May 1 and 2.

Among Charlevoix's entries in the Region 14-15 Regional Industrial Education Fair scheduled to open at the Charlevoix High School gymnasium at 1:30 p.m. Friday will be woodworking articles made by Charlevoix Middle School students.

Among them will be a Queen Anna table, left, of intricate design made by Ed McLanon, an eighth-grader.

Another is a coffee table (above) made by Scott Campbell.

Two St. Mary's students recently received savings bonds from the Charlevoix Knights of Columbus in an essay contest sponsored by the Catholic men's group. Winning first prize of $75 was Jenna McElroy (second from right, front row). Jerrie Lovell (center, front) received a second place award of $50.

The topic for the essay contest was "How am I a follower of Christ in my daily life?"

New title insurance company opens

Jean Rakoczy recently opened a new title company in Charlevoix. Called Great Lakes Title Co., the new business is an agent for American Title Insurance Company.

Rakoczy, who worked for Northern Michigan Title Co., for four years "just decided I'd try it on my own."

Her office is located at 215 Bridge St., above Trademark Clothiers. She will serve Charlevoix, Antrim and Kalkaska counties.

Title insurance companies, Rakoczy explained, work primarily through real estate agents and lending institutions to insure, for example, that the bank loaning money has the first lien on the property. Most of the chain of documents insuring the title are located at the County Courthouse, where Rakoczy and other title insurers do their research.

She has lived in Charlevoix four years since moving from Marquette. Her husband, Jerry, is employed as a research biologist with the Great Lakes Fisheries Station in Charlevoix.

She and Jerry enjoy fishing the Great Lakes for trout and salmon.

Dinner theater explores music in literature

Music in Literature – Hello Dolly to Charlie Brown, West Side Story to Cats, and many other familiar shows – provide the music with which the Charlevoix High School's championship Performing Arts Team will entertain guests May 16 at their annual Dinner Theatre.

A gourmet menu, centered on coq au vin, asparagus polonaise, boiled new potatoes and salad, followed by French cherry tart, will be served to 150 guests by the 60 member high school Performing Arts Team. A punch will be served prior to dinner. Coffee, tea and milk will be served throughout dinner, which begins at 6:30 p.m.

A delightful evening of song and dance will follow dinner, with music from shows based on famous literary works. A special highlight will be a revue of the shows with which Charlevoix won the Michigan Class C Drama Championship for the past four years: West Side Story, Sound of Music, Fiddler on the Roof, and Oklahoma.

Tickets for the May 16th dinner theatre are $10 per person. They are available at the Charlevoix High School office and through members of the Performing Arts Team. Early reservations are recommended.

St. Mary's Church offers renewal mission

The mission will be conducted by Father Thomas Donaldson, C.S.S.R. and Father "Turk" Rooney, C.S.S.R. from Grand Rapids. Topics which will be explored during the mission are: "The living, personal word of God which proclaims salvation," "The untimate state of the Father's love for us," "The light of Christ dispels all darkness and creates harmony in our lives," "Jesus is the bread that nourishes," and "We are God's servants called into ministry and sent forth to proclaim His word and His Kingdom."

On Wednesday, April 29 at 11:15 a.m. a special Mass of Annointing will be held at which time those with special needs may wish to come and be healed in mind, body and spirit. This sacrament may be received by anyone preparing for surgery, with chronic health problems, experiencing sever anxiety or mental stress or suffering from a physical handicap.

Editor's Journal

Last dance

by DOUG TRUAX

Editing a weekly newspaper is a little like marathon dancing. Once the music starts, it seems to never end.

The music keeps playing at all hours – evenings, nights, early mornings, weekends. Like marathon dancing, there is occasionally great exhilaration in keeping up with the beat and an wonderful sense of camarderie with the other fellows sharing the floor. Then, too, there are moments when you dream that nothing could be quite so sweet as a big easy chair in a soundproof room.

The music began for me two years ago ... and this week it ends. I'm happy about the job I'm moving to – to run an Orvis fly fishing and outdoor equipment store at the Grand Traverse Resort – but sad in many ways to leave the exquisite agony of small town newspaper editing.

The thing etched most clearly in my mind from these two years is the people. Through deadlines and controversies and seemingly endless meetings, the strength and goodwill of the people of Charlevoix is more remarkable than ever to me.

Unquestionably there are louts and deadbeats. There are everywhere. But Charlevoix has a healthy quota of good people who care and I've made many friends even among those who disagree with me on various editorial positions I've taken.

I'll miss, too, the battles over Charlevoix and its future. Condos, clean water, protection of the waterfront, development and similar issues have been constantly on the front page. And they have led to a little fur flying on the editorial page, as well.

I think there is new resolve in Charlevoix to control growth and development – to keep politicians and outside interests in check, to control the future rather than be controlled by it. I'll miss reporting and commenting on that struggle.

But it is time to step off the floor and let someone else dance with this fickle mistress for awhile. I hope they treat her well.

Obscene salary

Clockwise BY BOB CLOCK

I am sure the working men and women of Michigan were all delighted Saturday morning to learn in Saturday's newspapers that Lee Iacocca, chairman of Chrysler Corp., will not be drawing any food stamps for a while.

The papers reported that Iacocca received $20 million in salary and other emoluments for his efforts on behalf of his corporation last year.

The figure was $15 million more than his counterpart at Ford Motor Co. received and about $17 million more than accrued to the chairman of General Motors, both of whom also are overpaid.

And all of which raises the question: Is anyone worth $20 million a year?

Of course not. A salary in eight figures is ridiculous.

Furthermore, what is Iacocca going to do with all that money? You can only eat so much filet mignon, or drink so many dry martinis or wear so many hand-tailored suits a year. And if you're holding down a full-time job you can spend only so many hours soaking up sun on the Riviera or cruising the Greek Islands on a luxury liner.

What's more, Iacocca is not a poor man. If he never received another dime from Chrysler he would remain one of the richest men in the country for the rest of his life.

But he'll probably draw an even bigger paycheck this year — barring a collapse of the American economy.

Such grossly inflated salaries make a mockery of capitalism — an economic system the United States has been trumpeting around the world for the past 200 years. Yet the disparity between Iacocca's salary and the pittance paid other Americans ekeing out a living on the minimum wage certainly must give the followers of Karl Marx something to chuckle about.

And wouldn't you love to be a union negotiator going up against Chrysler this year?

Don't get me wrong. I believe in laissez-faire and free enterprise. It's the only way to go. But I don't think it's the function of any publicly held corporation to turn its executives into princes and potentates.

If Chrysler had $20 million to throw away it should have been divided among the guys on the line who built the cars — or to the long-suffering stockholders who get little enough return on their money, even in the best of times.

Better still, why not knock a few dollars off the price of every car sold and let the customer share in the bonanza.

Somewhere along the line corporate boards have acquired the notion that it is their bounden duty to create family dynasties among their top executives. Maybe they are afraid that hotshots like Iacocca will be pirated away by the competition unless they empty the company till in their laps.

In Iacocca's case, fat chance. There's no way Ford or GM could afford him.

But $20 million is an obscene salary for any hireling. I don't know a single person with tastes so extravagant that he couldn't live very well, thank you, on $1 million a year. Or even $500,000. Or even $250,000. Or even $125,000.

With corporate America obviously gone mad, it is now up to the Internal Revenue Service to restore a modicum of restraint to the field of executive compensation. A tax of 100 percent on income in excess of $1 million per year should turn the trick.

Under such a stiff income tax, corporations would be foolish to pay anything above the ceiling. They might even see fit to channel the surplus funds back into the economy via higher wages for the rank and file, bigger dividends for stockholders and lower prices for customers.

Letters to the editor:

Chicago Club president says tax settlement offers rebuffed by city

Dear Editor:

I have noted that there seems to be quite a bit of fur flying in Charlevoix over the question of rezoning scenic reserve land in and around Round Lake and Lake Charlevoix. Since it might appear that I have a conflict of interest in taking a position on the rezoning, I shall refrain from doing so in this letter. However, I would like to set the record straight on the tax case between the Chicago Club and the City of Charlevoix which, from what I've read, has become entwined in the zoning matter.

Frankly, in my opinion, they are two separate issues.

The Chicago Club, like any other citizen might, used its right to protest its 1980 and 1981 tax assessment. This protest went before the Michigan Tax Tribunal which supported the fact that the Chicago Club was overassessed. In order that we might save both the city and The Chicago Club the legal expense involved in fruther appeals, I met with the city and offered to settle those two years at an assessed valuation of 21 percent over the Tax Tribulan's opinion of the assessment. The city turned this down and determined that they would appeal to the Court of Appeals. It is a matter of history that the Court of Appeals upheld the Tax Tribunal's opinion.

The 1982 tax assessment on the Chicago Club is 75 percent over and above the opinion rendered by the Tax Tribunal. The 1983 through 1986 assessments continued upward as if nothing ever happened. I can't imagine any taxpayer in his right mind accepting that kind of an increase after having the due process of law rule in his favor. Therefore, we protested our assessments for the years following 1981.

We continued to be anxious to settle this matter in a friendly fashion and on February 4, 1986, I wrote the City Manager a proposal which I considered a very fair offer. I suggested we meet each other half-way between the Tax Tribunal's opinion of value (upheld by the Court of Appeals) and the city's assessments for those years. I should point out that this is in excess of the previous offer we made prior to our prevailing in the Court of Appeals on the 1980 and 1981 tax assessments.

We also offered that if the matter could be settled promptly on those terms, we would be willing to waive the interest and would be further willing to discuss easing the burden of the refund. I have not had the courtesy of receiving a reply to my letter written over 14 months ago!

Summer residents of Charlevoix, no matter where their residence may be, look at Charlevoix as a second home and most of us have a love affair with the area. We are supportive of you and your institutions but, like anyone else, we have a right to appeal what we consider incorrect or unfair tax assessments.

We continue to feel that we have made two very fair offers and that it is of the best interest of both the Chicago Club and the City of Charlevoix to get this matter settled without all the added expense of more legal process.

Thank you.

Change in scenic reserve would open north side for developers

Dear Editor:

How sad that Charlevoix's City Council chooses to proceed on its course of rezoning Scenic Reserve property in spite of over whelming public opposition and a unanimous decision of the Planning Commission not to do so. One has to wonder why a Planning Commission exists at all when their advise is so flagrantly ignored. For that matter, is it not the obligation of elected officials to listen to and do the bidding of their constituents? Perhaps our electorate made some grievous errors in their decision.

With all due respect to our learned mayor, city manager and council members, it seems to me that raising the taxes of Chicago and Belvedere Clubs is not at all the reason for rezoning. The major portion of the Scenic Reserve property on the north side is owned and-or optioned by developers. A rezoning to R1 is a hair's breath away from R4; which will allow massive development, condo's, marina's and the trailer park.

I have a hard time believing that the majority of residents of our fair city are interested in seeing the entire north shore turned into a Miami Beach of Northern Michigan, or in other words, a repeat of the Round Lake disaster. The purpose of the Scenic Reserve ordinance was to prevent that from happening. Developers chose to purchase these properties with the vision of exerting pressures on officials to change zonings and counted on their ability to do so. It appears their wallets are having a greater influence than public opinion.

I'd like to appeal to those council members with a conflict of interest to abstain from a vote on this issue. It's obvious that those individuals involved in the building trades have a great deal to gain from a major development. The question should be would it benefit the majority of our citizens and is that what they want, not how much certain council members can put in their pockets.

Realtors group supports scenic reserve zoning

To the Mayor and City Council of Charlevoix:

At a recent Board of Directors meeting of the Antrim-Charlevoix Board of Realtors we took a position on the Scenic Reserve issue currently before the city council.

It is our opinion the land currently designated Scenic Reserve represents unique appeal to the Charlevoix area and should remain in its current status. More importantly, it is the desire of the landowner to maintain its present use and that position should be both respected and encouraged by the governing authority.

Equally important is the issue of changing a zoning classification in order to raise taxes. While it is essential to achieve tax equity, it is inappropriate to use zoning as a method to accomplish this objective.

We hope you will give serious consideration to the wishes of the citizens of the Charlevoix area and allow the Scenic Reserve Zone to remain.

Respectfully submitted,
Stephen H. Andreae

Weddings

Mr. and Mrs. William Brodin

DeVries-Brodin

Barbara J. DeVries of Atwood and William C. Brodin of Charlevoix were married March 7 at the Belltower Reformed Church in Atwood.

The bride is the daughter of Henry J. DeVries of Atwood and Phyllis M. Walburg of Traverse City. The bridegroom is the son of William P. Brodin, Jr. and Genevieve Brodin, both of Charlevoix.

The Reverend James Heneveld officiated at the double-ring rites before 100 guests. For the occasion, the altar was decorated with four candelabra with white candles and silver metallic bows tied with pink satin. The pews were also decorated with bows.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father and mother, wore an organza gown fashioned with a high neckline trimmed with Venise lace, pearls, and a medallion. The fitted bodice and Juliet sleeves were also trimmed with Venise lace and pearls. The full skirt was edged with scalloped lace, and the train was semi-cathedral length. The bride's Juliet cap was covered with silk embroidered lace to which a finger-tip veil was attached. Her round bouquet was made of silk pink and white roses with baby's breath and green ivy in a lace background with satin streamers. The bouquet was fashioned by Shirley Tornga.

Kathie J. DeVries, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor, and Debra L. Erickson, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid. They wore floor-length gowns of rose brocade satin with elbow-length bouffant sleeves, and carried round bouquets of pink sweetheart roses, white carnations, and baby's breath in a lace background.

Nicole L. Erickson, niece of the bridegroom, served as flower girl. She wore a floor-length dress of pink dotted Swiss with a white ruffled pinafore and pink satin belt, and carried a small white basket of fresh pink sweetheart roses, small white carnations, baby's breath, and greens.

Casey Free, nephew of the bride, was ringbearer. Timothy M. Bruce served as best man; Jeffrey L. Brodin, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman; and Wayne Sharrow and "Butch" DeVries, brother of the bride, were ushers.

Irene Shooks provided organ music for the ceremony, and Don Heeres sang "We've Only Just Begun" and "The Wedding Song".

A reception at the Charlevoix Township Hall, catered by Genevieve Brodin, followed the wedding ceremony.

Following a wedding trip to the Tahquamenon Falls area, the newlyweds are at home in Charlevoix, where the bridegroom is employed by Davis Chevrolet Buick. (Photography by Jerrold Alexander)

Mr. and Mrs. Mitch Simons

Inman-Simons

Beth Inman and Mitch Simons exchanged marriage vows on Wednesday, April 1, in Phoenix, Arizona.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Betty Inman of Charlevoix and the late Harry R. Inman. Her bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Simons of Phoenix.

The twilight double-ring ceremony was performed by the Honorable Judge John Barclay in a citrus garden at the home of the bridegroom's parents. The couple's only attendants were Casey McDougell, who served as best man, and the ringbearer, Sam Duchamp, godson of the bride and bridegroom.

Contemporary guitar music was played throughout the ceremony.

A family dinner at Carlos O'Brian's in Scottsdale followed the ceremony, and a reception in northern Michigan in being planned for later this summer.

The newlyweds will be making their home in the Phoenix area after August. The bride is now serving as a special education teacher with the Charlevoix-Emmet School District, working in the Developmental Needs Program. She is also completing work for a master's degree in early childhood education at Central Michigan University.

The bridegroom is a sound systems sales engineer with the Electronic Specialties Company of Phoenix and owns a concert promotion company.

The Ace Hardware on Bridge Street, a business which has been in operation as a hardware for nearly 75 years, changed hands on Friday. Dave Hand (left), previous owner, handed over the keys to the business to Mike and Kathy Hilligen (center) as real estate agent Tom Erber looked on.

The Hilligans previously lived in Lansing where Tom was a computer engineering technician and Kathy was an R.N. Charlevoix is not new to them, however, as Tom has spent summers here all his life and his parents, Dr. and Mrs. James Hilligan, have been summer residents for some 40 years and permanent residents for the last five.

Hand, who owned the business for 11 years, says he is going to do a little fishing and consider all of his options.

Gumbleton to speak at St. Mary's

On Thursday evening, May 14, Bishop Thomas Gumbleton of Detroit will speak at St. Mary's Church in Charlevoix on the issue of peace and justice. Bishop Gumbleton has just returned from a visit to Nicaragua as part of a 14-member ecumenical group on behalf of Quest for Peace, a coalition of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish groups. The Bishop, pastor of Detroit's St. Leo Parish, is also president of the Catholic peace group, Pax Christi USA.

He is widely known as a justice and peace advocate and critic of world nuclear arms build-up. At Christmas time of 1979, he gained worldwide recognition when he was allowed to visit the American hostages in Iran.

Bishop Gumbleton is sharply critical of all U.S. military aid to the contras who are trying to overthrow Nicaragua's Sandiniste government. Quest for Peace, an organization of over 400 groups and 2,000 individuals, is now attempting to raise $100 million in "true humanitarian aid" according to the Bishop, consisting of medical supplies, food, clothing and cash donations to ship the goods.

Admission is free to the public and everyone is invited regardless of religious affiliation. A reception with hors d'oeuvres will be held at the church hall at 6:30 p.m. and the Bishop will talk at 7:30 p.m. in the church sanctuary.

The event is sponsored by Little Traverse League for Peace and Freedom. For further information please contact Bea Henshaw at 526-5285 or Bruce or Char Sanderson at 582-7592.

Yachting Notes

A. NONY MOUSE

It's good to be back.

After a balmy winter without snow and with near continuous open water staring at us, it's been difficult to look at the old boat sitting in her cradle and not dream of the hand on the tiller, the wind in the face and Carland yelling "Oh no, he's coming up!"

And to add to the injury, we had to watch all that late night TV when "Dennis" brought back the cup, watching near-endless hours of others sailing their boats.

The sail, cruise, race season is back with us and the CYC is sponsoring a two-part program beginning on April 24 and finishing May 1. David Irish and Josh Barnes are hosting a program entitled "Yacht Protests and Appeals."

The Mouse has learned that this duo has really packaged a program that calls for considerable audience participation, so show up at 7:30 p.m. Friday night, bring a USYRU Rules book if you own one and become a Judge Wapner for an evening. There will be a small admission charge for the program, but refreshments will be provided without charge.

Dave and Josh are hoping to stimulate our thinking and prepare us for the beginning of the Spring Series, 1987. Commodore Coolman and race Committee Chairman Dr. Dave Strawbridge have scheduled a CYC Skipper's input meeting for May 4 at 7:30 p.m.

This will be your only chance to suggest amendments or adjustments to fleet sizes, racing rules, etc. Two tune-up races will be held beginning at 6 p.m. on May 6 and May 13, with the opening race of the Spring Series scheduled May 20.

So grease your winches, tune your rigs and show up at CYC Friday, April 24 at 7:30 p.m. for the Josh and Dave Show, rated GP.

Watching the Western Skies,
The Mouse.

KCB plans petunia activities

At the regular monthly meeting Saturday, April 11, the Keep Charlevoix Beautiful Board of Directors appointed Sulane Hamilton to complete the unexpired term on the board of Kate Burlew who resigned. Hamilton is the former president of LexaLite Signal Products and has long been involved with KCB's Operation Petunia.

Having helped with the Petunia Acution the past two years, Hamilton said she is enthusiastic about this year's new Silent Auction format and urged people to participate in the form of more "quality donations."

On the petunia front, the KCB board finalized several fundraising plans for the coming summer months. They agreed to purchase a brand new Mustang convertible from Pat McKeown Ford to be offered as top prize in a raffle. As in last year's raffle, 200 tickets will be available at $100 each.

The drawing for the car will be held at a Labor Day Summer Finale. At the same event will be held a special Sesquicentennial Auction with no items less than $150 in value. The top item will be a trip for two to Germany including a week's stay on the Rhine River. The auction will take place at the soon-to-be-completed Edgewater Inn Conference Room.

Joan and Don Dannecker were named chairmen of the petunia planting picnic which will be held at 6 p.m. Thursday, May 21 in East Park featuring hot dogs and Tom's Mom's cookies, Jasper and the Tagalongs and the Charlevoix Trout Tournament's 40' by 100' tent for shelter if needed.

Raffle tickets for the Mustang will also be available at this year's picnic.

It was announced at Saturday's meeting that the old petunia watering truck has been sold to a group in Cheboygan where plans are to plant 800 flats of petunias this season, similar to Charlevoix's planting of 930 flats.

It was also announced that prisoners from the Charlevoix county jail will again be available to help prepare the petunia beds for planting.

In other business, the board approved a $150 expenditure for a flowering crab tree which has been planted in front of the Charlevoix Historical Society's Harsha House museum in the memory of local historian Bob Miles.

Attractions highlight Chamber dance

"The Attractions", a five-piece orchestra and a vocalist out of Lansing, will return, by popular request, to play at the annual Chamber of Commerce dinner dance to be held at the recently-remodeled Belvedere Casino on Saturday, May 2.

Dennis and Eilene Heck are co-chairpersons of the popular event which will be catered by Grey Gables Inn.

Wild morel harvest nears

Mother Nature should give morel hunters a springtime gift–an excellent crop of delectable mushrooms that could draw 600,000 persons to Michigan's forests and fields in May and June, reports AAA Michigan.

Michigan's mild winter and early spring showers have provided hunters with nearly ideal conditions. Traditionally, black morels appear first in early May, followed by the whites and then the giant species in early June.

Their brief season makes them treasured by hunters from across the nation who flock to primarily the northern third of Lower Michigan to gather the delicacy.

Morels are identified by deeply pitted caps attached to the stem. Black morels have deep dark-cream to brownish-black pitted caps. White morel tops vary from light cream to yellowish brown.

There are "false" morels which have pitted caps, but they are attached to the top of the stem, which like a shade on a lamp, and should not be eaten.

The morel's taste has been described as delicate, chewy, nutlike and reminiscent of a fine sirloin steak. Low in calories and cholesterol, morels are ideal for those watching their weight.

Morel hunters can find success in a variety of locations, including fields; woods; near old, young and dead trees; in desolate areas, in backyards and in both sunshine and shade. Some hunters have secret places they refuse to divulge.

Commercial morel hunters often compete with the hobbyist for choice sites. Dried morels can sell for about $200 a pound and a fresh pound goes for around $20.

Morels are so popular that legislation (HB-4768) has been introduced to name it Michigan's state mushroom.

Morels are the stars of festivals in Harrison (May 1-3), Mesick (May 3-9), Lewiston (May 9), Boyne City (May 9-10) and Grayling (May 9-10 and 16-17). Parades, cooking demonstrations, contests, craft fairs, and morel hunting are highlights.

Because morels are often confused with other mushrooms and many species are toxic to humans, AAA Michigan advises that the inexperienced and children be accompanied by expert hunters.

Hunters should only pick unblemished mushrooms and not pull the mushroom from the ground.

Band qualifies for state festival

The Charlevoix High School Symphonic Band, directed by Terry Isenbarger, will be in the Lansing area Saturday to compete in the Class C division of the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association festival.

Mr. Isenbarger was advised Monday that the band will play at Holt High School at 8:25 a.m. Saturday.

Accompanied by a corps of chaperones the students will be staying at the Harley Hotel on Dunkle Road in Lansing on Friday evening.

The band qualified for state competition by receiving a straight I rating in district competition at Petoskey earlier in the spring.

Womens Club needs books

If you're cleaning your book shelves and find books you plan to discard, call the Charlevoix Women's Club. They will be happy to pick them up for re-sale at the annual August Book Sale, Lucy Whitthoeft, president of the club, announced.

The club holds its annual book sale the second Friday and Saturday in August. This year the date will be Aug. 7 and 8.

The proceeds from the sale are used for community service projects sponsored by the club.

Call 547-6916 or leave the books at the Charlevoix Public Library in bags marked for the Women's Club book sale.

Scenic area dispute meets sudden death

by DON DIBLEY

Scenic reserve caused a bang but went out with a whimper.

A proposed change to allow some residential uses of the protected scenic area along Lake Charlevoix in the city limits drowned in a sea of protest.

Mayor Ralph McRae, bending to the overwhelming cry of protest, last week polled council and called off a public hearing slated for Monday.

The move ended a months-long debate between those – apparently a minority – who supported the move in an effort to win a tax battle with the Chicago Club and those – apparently a vast majority – who feared the move would lead to further condominium development on the lake.

"It was done for good reason and not to destroy the scenery over there," McRae said after abandoning the effort.

"We made the right motions, but people didn't want to understand our motives, I guess."

At an April 13 council meeting attended by about 100 people, virtually all of those speaking on the controversy were opposed to the move.

The city planning commission, which had been directed by council to draw up the change, balked at the idea. Keep Charlevoix Beautiful, which gathered petitions containing 276 signatures, and the Antrim-Charlevoix Board of Realtors both came out against the move.

The area of the city protected by scenic reserve is the entire shoreline of Lake Charlevoix from the Northwest Marine-Ferry Beach area to the north city limits off Mercer Boulevard.

Allowed uses include docks, beaches, boathouses, cabanas and other non-commercial uses.

The proposal to allow some residential uses was made by an attorney representing the city in the Chicago Club tax assessment controversy, which has continued throughout this decade.

Chicago Club has contended its property is assessed too high and has taken its fight to the state Tax Tribunal, where it won the dispute over the 1981 and 1982 assessments. Those decisions were upheld in the court of appeals.

Happiness is a perfect score at the state band competition. Charlevoix's joyful symphonic band returned to town Saturday after receiving an all-I rating at the competition in Holt.

Symphonic band perfect at state event

The Charlevoix Symphonic Band was all I's Saturday.

The band, directed by Terry Isenbarger, received top ratings at the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Festival for the first time since 1984. To receive the coveted rating, a band must receive top scores of I in concert and sight-reading.

While the band has received I ratings in past years, this was the first it got straight I's in state competition since 1984.

"The band played its three concert selections very musically and with great confidence," Isenbarger said. "The extra effort put into the last few rehersals before the festival made the difference.

"The second sight-reading number was especailly difficult but the kids didn't give up on it and were able to complete it in a manner deserving of a I rating.

Isenbarger thanked parents and business owners who changed family plans and work schedules so the students could make the festival trip to Holt on Friday and Saturday. He also thanked community members for escorting the band through town when they returned.

Selections played by the band at the state festival were "Diamond Jim March" by Maxwell, "Aria and Fugue" by Handel and "Dithyramb" by Mike Lackrone.

The band had been awarded straight I's at the Class C District Festival at Petoskey in February to qualify for state competition.

Don Flickinger of Ferris State College, Leonard Meritta of Michigan State University and Royden Swaffield of Pennifield were the concert judges, and Ronald Veenstra was the sight-reading judge.

Star weighs options

The Star Line Corp. still is studying the city's latest proposal relative to leasing space for the dinner ship Star of Charlevoix at the municipal dock, city council learned Monday night in a letter from Phil Lutzi Jr., general manager of the Star of Charlevoix.

Lutzi said the company's "primary concern is to stay in Charlevoix and hopefully this can be accomplished with an agreement that is beneficial to both parties."

He said the company had given a great deal of thought to the proposals set forth by the council April 20. The proposals would have the company prepare a site plan, paying all expenses, including utilities and the cost of removing an existing dock, restoration of the dock if the contract is not renewed and payment of 1 percent of the Star's gross as rent.

The council also said the company could bring in a 35-foot by 70-foot barge as a reception platform, if it removed an existing dock and agreed to replace it if the lease were not renewed.

Lutzi said the company needs more time to study the proposals and "explore other options that may be available to us."

Leasing city-owned dockage to the Star Line Corp. received a boost from the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce which conducted an informal opinion poll among 94 of the chamber's 275 members.

Mayor Ralph McRae said the poll indicated 70 members in favor of both the boat and the barge, 14 in favor of the boat only and 10 disapprove of both the boat and the barge.

The company asked for space at the municipal dock because of congestion at its former dock in front of the soon-to-be-completed Edgewater Inn.

City manager Michael Wiesner was mildly critical of the manner in which the council has handled the Star Line negotiations.

"You talk about making the downtown viable," he said, "but I think council is throwing away a real chance. The Star has been here six years and is doing a good business. The community needs this. I think you're losing perspective."

Basketball coach Dave Smith directs his troops during a game this season. Smith, who is also the high school principal, has stepped down from his coaching position.

Dave Smith steps down as basketball coach

by FRAN MARTIN

Dave Smith, varsity basketball coach at Charlevoix High School for the past six years, announced his retirement from the position.

During his tenure, he became one of the area's most successful coaches, piling up a 119-25 record that included the 1983 team that was unbeaten until the state Class C quarterfinals when it lost by two points.

In announcing his decision to retire, Smith said, "This is the best thing for me right now. However, don't count me out. I will be in some phase of the basketball program but not as varsity coach."

Smith leaves behind him some impressive records including four 20-victory seasons; five district titles, one regional title and four Michigan-Huron Shores Conference titles.

A 1965 graduate of Charlevoix High, Smith received his degree from Central Michigan University in 1970 and was at Saginaw MacArthur for 3½ years before going to Ida as head basketball coach for five years. While there he had a 65-41 record.

He returned to Charlevoix in 1979 as assistant principal, a position he held for two years. He served as middle school principal from 1981 until 1985 when he returned to the high school as principal.

"It has really been neat coming back to my old school to coach," Smith said. "It is an opportunity few people have, especially to be received as I have been.

"I've especially enjoyed working with Coach (Don) Carey. I sat on the bench as a player, as an assistant coach and later he served as my assistant. It is an association that is rare."

Smith said his years as a coach in Charlevoix have been "a very satisfying experience for me. We've had a lot of good athletes.

"I've always had the support of the parents. The community has always been supportive of its teams. There have been those people out there who would help you, no matter what the problem. I've been places where there wasn't the support I've had here. That's why I've appreciated it so much."

He will continue as high school principal.

Lake Charlevoix plan deals with present, future problems

by PEG OHLE

Members of the Lake Charlevoix Management Planning Advisory Committee talked in definite terms at their "finishing up" meeting Monday night.

They dealt, point by point, with recommendations growing out of many months of studying present and possible future problems of the Lake Charlevoix watershed and how to deal with them.

Some recommendations were accepted "as is"; others were changed to emphasize or de-emphasize content; and still others were rejected.

When the final wording of the recommendations is released, following changes as suggested, the long task of the committee will be completed. The recommendations will then be incorporated into a report dealing with the materials studied by the committee which, in the end, formed the basis for the recommendations.

The list of recommendations the Lakes Committee discussed begins with two assumptions: First, that existing situations are accepted as they are, with plans for change in the future as needed; and, second, that many situations can be mitigated or treated creatively by the use of "trade-offs" of various types.

Water and land are treated in two different divisions.

Noting that the present water quality of Lake Charlevoix "tends to be very good," it is pointed out that there has been a "slight decline in some of the parameters used," and to keep the lake from further deterioration, certain steps must be taken:

First, fish habitats may be jeopardized by dredging, filling, and other water and land use activities. They must be considered before undertaking any of these activities and a determination made on what the resulting impacts will be.

Second, Lake Charlevoix has a large amount of shoreline in relation to water surface and a large amount of undeveloped frontage, so there is a very real potential for overuse of the surface water in the future. To deal with this potential overuse, there must be limitations on the number of boat docks, slips, car and car-trailer parking spaces, both public and private, with due consideration given to those already in existence.

Third, an authority should be set up to schedule and coordinate mass activities on the lake, such as fishing tournaments, regattas, etc. Other responsibilities of such an authority would be to enforce water craft regulations, identify hazards to navigation, monitor water quality, set safety standards for docks and moorings, and approve all new marinas, marina expansions, new public access sites, public access expansions, and mooring fields.

This suggested authority would be set up under the auspices of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners. It would include representatives from the cities and townships, the Sheriff's Department, Department of Natural Resources, Coast Guard, and possibly the Lake Association, and commercial and sport users of the lake.

Local units of government would delegate jurisdiction for services rendered by the authority. Funding for the authority would come from a variety of sources, including user fees, private donations, in-kind assistance, grants, and tax revenues if necessary.

The Lakes Committee's plan acknowledges that activities which take place on land impact on the watershed so the plan makes recommendations for lands up to 1,000 feet from the waterline (area inside heavy line).

Charlevoix Yesterday

Many present-day residents of Charlevoix County were born in this building, the old Charlevoix Hospital on Hurlbut Street. The hospital building was replaced several years ago by a new facility on Park Avenue and Lake Shore Drive, overlooking Lake Michigan. The old hospital building has been converted into apartments.

Trout fingerlings released in lake

Lake Charlevoix received some 13,000 chunky brown trout Friday, an installment on the 60,000 expected to be planted this year.

The DNR plants, directed by Regional Fish Biologist Steve Swan, are roughly 2½ times larger than brown trout plants in recent years.

Swan and Jim Withers, director of the Lake Charlevoix Area Trout Tournament, predicted the brown trout plants would lead to a fine fishery in future years.

The browns planted Friday were from 8 to 10 inches long, compared to the 6 to 8 inch size of normal yearlings. "The hatcheries are getting better and better," Swan said. "They are kicking out a better product."

The fish were raised at the Wolf Lake Hatchery and then transferred to Oden.

They will grow to 1½ pounds in one year and 3-5 pounds in two years, Swan said.

"I think the brown trout is one of the gamest, most exciting fish in Michigan," said Withers, a charter boat captain. "I feel very fortunate to be part of it (the planting), especially since many communities in Michigan are lobbying for fish."

Swan noted that the increased brown trout plants are replacing the rainbow trout which have been planted annually in Lake Charlevoix. "The rainbows produced disappointing results in the number caught by fishermen," Swan said. Steelhead trout will continue to be planted in the Boyne and Jordan rivers, however.

The area will also get 100,000 lake trout plants this year.

Swan also revealed that a seven-acre walleye rearing pond has been created on the property of Norm Lawton just east of Holy Island in the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix.

The pond is 105 feet above Lake Charlevoix and water will be pumped into it from the lake.

Swan said the pond will be used to rear 300,000 walleye fry this year which will result in some 150,000 fingerlings for planting in the South Arm.

Lake Charlevoix will then be planted every third year, with other annual plants going to the Chain of Lakes above Bellaire and the north arm of Walloon Lake.

Citywide cleanup underway

It's time for annual spring cleanup in Charlevoix.

City residents will have a chance over the next three weeks to haul their unwanted brush, tree limbs, appliances, furniture and other rubbish to the curb and have it taken away for free.

Pickup in the First Ward (north side) is from April 27 through May 1. For the Second Ward (west of State Street) the dates are May 4 through May 8. In the Third Ward (east of State Street) it is May 11 through May 15.

Rubbish should be placed at the curb before the pickup starting date. Brush and tree limbs must be cut into four-foot lengths and separated from other rubbish.

Leaves should be placed in bags. Items should be placed in back of the curb or off the traveled portion of the road on streets without curbs.

Once the cleanup program is completed in each area of town, crews will not pick up brush, tree limbs or leaves from private property until after Labor Day.

If you have any questions on the spring cleanup, call the city manager's office at 547-3270.

Problem-solving team competes in state event

Charlevoix middle school's team of Angela Levengood, Amy Shupert, Mariah Brown and Stacy Tilton took 15th overall in the eighth annual Michigan Future Problem Solving Program State Bowl.

Thirty-nine teams competed in their division. There were 102 teams in the state competition.

The state bowl is a culmination of a year-long program where students are taught to creatively seek, attack and solve problems related to projections in the future.

More than 10,000 Michigan students worked on three problems during the 1986-87 school year. The problems involved garbage, changing families and water. Based on the third problem, the top teams from each grade division were invited to participate in the state bowl.

While the teams knew the general topic of this year's bowl — illiteracy — they did not know the specific nature of the problem they had to solve until the bowl began.

'Round Town

Long-distance 'job' for architect

EDITH GILBERT

IF YOU HAVE BEEN WONDERING why you haven't seen much of my neighbor, architect Hans Wiemer, around town for the last year and a half, here's why. He's been redesigning an old, 1920 Mediterranean-style house, on 3½ acres located on the Treasure Coast of Florida, in Stuart to be exact.

Hans was invited down by Chuck and Joan MacGillivray, Charlevoix summer residents, to help them decide which piece of property would be best suited for their needs. The magnificent setting at the juncture of the St. Lucie River and the ocean made the final decision easy. The challenge was to remodel an old house to fit the present needs of an active, extended family who wanted all the modern conveniences, without losing the original character; a house expandable enough for parties and entertaining, as well as comfortable at times for two.

When I asked Hans between trips, "What are you doing now?" he'd reply, "You've just got to see it for yourself!"

Last week was my lucky week and I saw the fabulous results! The house is white with Doric columns and a broad white terrace made of simulated coral reef cast stone. The palm trees that were moved from the circular drive in front, now shade the swimming pool and lead across the spacious lawn to the boat docks, which will accommodate a 97-foot yacht.

Inside the house I was "floored" by the resurrected Dade County Pine floors throughout the house. (These hardwood trees are no more!) I wandered into the gorgeous white kitchen, which Hans told me was the worst looking kitchen he'd ever seen. All the sleep he lost remodelling the dark long and narrow workspace was worth it. He removed the false ceiling, kept the original glass cabinets, and used red Mexican tile on the floor. The results were stunning.

But let me tell you about the spectacular bar! Off the dining room is a sun room with a 12-foot crescent shaped bar, made of one continuous piece of clear acrylic, lighted, and filled with colorful tropical fish!

If you can't relax lounging around the pool, or tickling your toes in pure white beach sand, or listening to the lapping of the water against the gazebo, then I guarantee that sitting at the bar you will be mesmerized by these graceful, darting fish, even while drinking lemon-flavored Perrier water. Cheers!

On my return to Charlevoix, I asked Hans, "What are you most proud of regarding this remodeling project?"

"Blending new conveniences with the old charm," he replied. "The present house is bigger than it was before, and more authentic, because I used the original style windows throughout, among other things."

The interior decor is also tastefully eclectic, worthy of a cover article in the popular magazine, The Architectural Digest. My regretful parting note in the MacGillivray's guest book was, "You did not make me feel at home, because home was never like this. This is heaven!"

PEOPLE ARE STILL TALKING about the Sotherby auction, where the Dutchess of Windsor's jewels brought in over $50 million. The closest I came to touching the life of the dutchess was via the duke, when I visited a former summer resident, the late tycoon Nathan Cummings, at the Waldorf Towers in New York City years ago.

Tossed on top of Nate's bulging wastebasket, I saw a note from the Waldorf telephone operator that "His Highness the Duke of Windsor called at 7:30 p.m." Being a social observer of etiquette, I was deeply impressed how well the telephone operator was trained. She did not write, "The duke called." With a terrible guilty feeling, I filched the note and filed it away all these years, thinking that someday it might come in handy as a training memo for a future article.

But with all these inflated prices on Windsor memorabilia--I'm seriously considering offering this little treasure to the Petunia Auction! How much do YOU think it will bring?

AFTER READING ALL the above, you should really be in the mood to live the life of the rich and famous! And you can too – if you buy a $10 chance to the Five Million Dollar Dinner for the benefit of the Crooked Tree Arts Council.

Three Charlevoix winners last year include Jan Biddick, and Mary and Lawrence Feindt. Mary Feindt says she "remains in awe in retrospect of the unprecedented extravaganza!" A fabulous meal was prepared by chefs from the Arboretum, the Crow's Nest, the Rowe Inn, Tapawingo, the Walloon Inn, Stafford's Hospitality, etc., with carefully selected wines by Linda Vigneau for each course.

The five winning couples will be chauffeur- driven to and from the beautiful Howard and Pat Webber home on Walloon Lake. There will be music and entertainment and guests will dine on the finest china, with the choicest crystal and silver.

Lots of people are selling tickets including the Kappa Sigma sorority and the Appletree in Charlevoix. The drawing is May 27 so don't dawdle. You could be a winner and participate on Saturday, June 6.

'Iris Sweepstakes'

Clockwise

BY BOB CLOCK

Someone should take the English language out to the woodshed and throttle it with a sturdy acronym. The mother tongue plays altogether too many tricks on the human ear.

Let me tell you a story.

Last Wednesday I received a telephone call from my friend and neighbor, Nomis Mol, assistant vice president of the First State Bank of Charlevoix.

"I have a couple of iris for you," Nomis announced.

"Wonderful!" I answered.

Iris is one of Judy's favorite flowers and she has been patiently tending a small bed of them at one corner of the garden for several years.

"There's one for you and one for Judy," Nomis continued. "And they both matured April 14."

"I don't know how to thank you," I answered effusively. "We have a few of them in the backyard but they're only about four inches high and I don't know when they're going to ... mature. (I almost said bloom, but I was choosing my words carefully.) You must have a very early maturing variety."

There was a long silence at the other end of the line.

"Well, yes," Nomis said finally. "You can pick them up whenever you want."

I hung up, swimming in the milk of human kindness. I have known Nomis and her family for years, but we have never been close enough to exchange gifts.

"What a beautiful gesture," I told myself, making a mental note that next winter I would pot some daffodil and tulip bulbs so I could distribute them to friends and neighbors at Easter. Of course there'd be one for Nomis.

I fully intended to trot down to Nomis' house that night to pick up my iris, but you know how Wednesday turned out — cold, windy and rainy.

"If the iris matured April 14, they still have a few days left," I told myself. "I'll wait until tomorrow."

Thursday was beautiful.

"An ideal day to transplant iris," I told myself as I headed home from Petoskey.

I was struck anew by Nomis' kindness and generosity. I knew she had a few daffodils in front of her house, but I didn't know she was into iris.

"I wonder if Lou Hollow down the bank had anything to do with it?" I asked myself. "Maybe the bank had some kind of drawing like they do at Christmas when they put everybody's name in a bowl. Only this time they gave away potted plants.

"I wouldn't put it past Lou," I continued. "He probably called it 'The Iris Sweepstakes.' That sounds just like him."

As bank president, Lou Hollow believes the hometown bank should be a warm and friendly place to do business. In the fall, Lou always has bowls of apples conveniently located throughout the lobby.

But I didn't recall any special Easter promotion at the bank involving flowers. And I didn't remember filling out any tickets.

I was becoming vaguely uneasy about my unexpected windfall.

"Iris, iris, iris," I repeated aloud as I passed the Boyne City Road and approached the outskirts of Charlevoix.

"Iras, iras, iras," I said again, changing the pronounciation slightly.

Suddenly the houselights went on inside my poor befuddied cranium and I almost drove into the ditch.

Saturday morning Judy and I went down to the bank and renewed our Individual Retirement Accounts (I.R.A.s), the ones that had matured April 14.

Letters to the editor:

Do not relinquish right to govern by default

"We the People, in order to form a more perfect Union..." So begins the Constitution of the United States of America. In the days when these precious words were written, roads were primitive and often impassable, and communication was slow and difficult.

Because of this, it was both practical and expeditious for the People to elect certain members of their community as representatives, and send them to a central place of government, to calmly debate and wisely decide what course our nation would follow. If honest and selfless men could be found who would consult with and listen to the collective wisdom of the People, then the lives, liberty and properties of the People would be secure when the legislature was in session, and these representatives, upon returning from the distant capital, could face the People with straight eyes and a free conscience.

To insure that this ideal State of The Union would long endure, Thomas Jefferson insisted that the elected representatives of the People be "bound with the chains of a Constitution.." and it is by this constitution, and its great companion piece, the Bill of Rights, that WE, THE PEOPLE, were given power over our government, and not the other way around!

So it was in the beginning of our Great Republic, and so it was for many years thereafter...but, in our time, while WE, THE PEOPLE were busy with personal affairs, our power over our government was quietly and cleverly being nibbled away...often by the very ones we had chosen to represent us!

Yes, for generations, the power of the People was being stolen from them – but today, WE, THE PEOPLE have awakened! All across this great land, WE, THE PEOPLE are once again demanding that our representatives pay heed to those who supported them, trusted them and elected them. This second great American Revolution of the people, by the people, for the people, was begun, among the people, in cities, towns, villages and at the township level. Today, communication is almost instantaneous and travel is swift, sure and comfortable. We can and are communicating with our representatives and WE, THE PEOPLE, are telling them."We elected you to represent us, but in matters that concern our lives, liberty and property, we require that you consult with us and listen to what we tell you!"

WE, THE PEOPLE have that constitutional right! We all can be a part of this growing revolution by writing our elected representatives, starting at the city and township level...by calling them on the phone, by visiting them in their offices, and especially by attending city council and township meetings every month. No one knows better than WE, THE PEOPLE, what is best for ourselves, our families and for our childrens future, and for their children, yet to be!

And yet there are those among us that would say, "What good does one vote do?" or "I'm not going to vote because you can't fight City Hall!" Nothing could be further from the truth. All across this great land, WE, THE PEOPLE have not only fought and won over city hall, but have triumphed in state, regional and national power struggles, by using the power of communication, through letters, phone calls, meetings and by voting. WE, THE PEOPLE, have discoverd that if we do not vote.. we are still voting.. for the opposition. By not voting we are giving our children as hostages to a future that we have decided to have no part in shaping. (This might be very difficult to explain to our children, in the years to come.....)

Therefore, always remember that WE, THE PEOPLE, have the right and the power to instruct our elected representatives as to the course we wish our future to take. Do not give this power to others by default! Write letters, telephone, attend meetings... and vote... every time. It was written by Edmund Burke, that "All that is necessary for the triumph of evil is that good men do nothing...." (or that good men and women do not become involved and vote)!

City council should say 'no' more often

Dear Editor:

Your fine "Viewpoint" editorial in the April 8 Courier prompted me to become more of an involved citizen! I grew up in Charlevoix, spend time there year 'round and am a property owner. I was pleased to be included in the random mailing of the Lake Charlevoix Survey. You can bet I completed and returned it.

I find it amazing that environmental issues of all kinds generate committee after committee plus weekly feature articles in the Courier and much heated citizen discussion; yet the people of Charlevoix remain "uninvolved" when it comes to letting city council act, according to you.

Can it really be true that Charlevoix's citizens are not coming through loud and clear with their views for council to hear, regardless of what that view might be? Who does have council's ear?

Year after year, decisions have been made by various city councils that have gradually resulted in the many buildings we now see around the lakes and elsewhere. Nearly each time decisions to build seem to lead to gradual (or not so gradual) ruination of our beautiful city. Each time the argument is much the same: more development leads to more tax dollars.

Ultimately, it is the decision makers who must accept responsibility for their actions. It was the council who approved each and every development in Charlevoix, including the latest condo on north Round Lake by the bridge and the Rysberg Inn. The real problems these two projects will be causing haven't even begun yet.

Now the question is to alter the scenic reserve zoning for more tax dollars. Here we go again. The day will come, given the present rate of lakefront growth, when there will not be a spot to put anything else.

How about a little more creativity with regard to where new buildings are to go; i.e., not on the lakeshores and not where congestion leads to even more congestion? And, how about saving some of what so many of us love about Charlevoix by saying NO more frequently rather than YES. Charlevoix's citizens and guests will thank you and its future generations will thank you even more.

Please keep the nice skating rink by the high school. Smaller rinks downtown are OK if the merchants there desire them; then the businessmen should fund them and leave the big rink for people who enjoy skating.

County property values climb average of 5.8%

Charlevoix County residents may find a slight increse in their taxes next year becouse of an increase in valuation of real and personal properties. If millage rates remain the same as this year, that increase would average 5.83 countywide.

In her annual report to the county board of commissioners last week, Equalization Director Joan Blanchard noted that property values had risen from $437,407,025 last year to $462,928,155 this year, or 5.83 percent.

The largest increase in property values, 10.60 percent, is in Evangeline Township, which Blanchard said has been equalized at considerably lower than the 50 percent of true cash value mandated by law.

In the City of Charlevoix and nearby townships, the valuations are up as follows:

City of Charlevoix, 8.09 percent; Charlevoix Township, 3.15 percent; Marion Township, 7.12 percent; Norwood Township, 1.78 percent; Hayes Township, 7.5 percent; and Eveline Township, 7.60 percent.

In presenting her report, Blanchard noted that 3.27 percent of the increase is for new construction and 2.56 percent represents inflation. This explains why there is considerable disparity among taxing bodies.

Monies raised by taxes on real property go to support county, city and township governments as well as local and intermediate school districts.

Schools receive the largest percentage of collected tax monies. The valuation of properties within each of the school districts in the county increased as follows: Boyne City, 6.57 percent; Charlevoix, 6.40 percent; East Jordan, 6.25 percent; Beaver Island, 4.03 percent; Petoskey, 1.86 percent; Ellsworth, 5.82 percent; Boyne Falls, 4.23 percent; Vanderbilt, .06 percent; and Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, 5.92 percent.

Weddings

Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Washburne

Klooster-Washburn

Charlevoix Assembly of God Church was the setting for the April 11 wedding of Brenda K. Klooster and Michael J. Washburne.

The Rev. Lowell Anderson performed the double ring ceremony before the altar decorated with lighted candelabra, ficus trees and ivory basket arrangements of pink and white gladioli and pink, white and aqua carnations.

Lighted hurricane lamps and satin bows marked the church pews and a unity candle was at the altar for the afternoon ceremony attended by 300 guests.

Robert and Eloise Klooster of Charlevoix are parents of the bride. The groom is the son of Thomas and Betty Washburne of Petoskey.

Traditional wedding music was offered by pianist Steve Stargardt and soloists were Dan Goebel and Sara Stargardt.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, wore an ivory satin gown with a Sabrina neckline, beaded bodice and long Renaissance sleeves trimmed with European lace.

Matching lace trimmed the skirt and cathedral length train. The skirt was also trimmed with scalloped European lace at the hemline. The bride wore an ivory beaded headband with teardrop pearls and a pouf of bridal illusion falling to the waist.

Attending the bride as maid of honor was her sister, Andrea Klooster. Bridesmaids were Melinda Lankford, sister of the bride, Lori Washburne, sister of the groom, and Roni Themm. Each wore an aqua mist long gown with a dropped waist which gave a cummerbund effect gathered with pearls. The girls carried bouquets of bridal pink and champagne roses with baby's-breath and wispy accents of illusion netting.

Flower girls were Sarah Dominic and Lori Jayne Stargardt. They wore ivory satin gowns with ivory pearl headbands. Each wore a wrist corsage of miniature pink roses, miniature white carnations and baby's breath. The girls each carried an ivory basket of pink and champagne rose petals that were scattered in the aisle as the bride approached the altar.

Mike Jaggi attended the groom as best man and groomsmen were Nick Jaggi, Scott Lankford and Charlie Stratton, cousin of the groom. Seating the guests were the groom's brothers Tom Washburne of Grandville and Jamie Washburne of Naples, Fla.

A buffet and reception, given by the bride's parents, followed the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. Bonnie and Charlie Elzinga were master and mistress of ceremonies. The bride and groom's table was decorated with an arrangement of pink and white gladioli and pink, white and aqua carnations with baby's-breath. The guest tables were decorated with mixed tulips and floating arrangements of pink, white, aqua and black balloons attached to the end of each table.

The rehearsal dinner, hosted by the parents of the groom, was held at the Weathervane in Charlevoix on April 10.

Following a Florida honeymoon, the newlyweds are residing in Charlevoix. The bride is employed at Bahnhof Sport and the groom is employed at Charlevoix Manufacturing. (Photo courtesy Tim Calloway)

The tea will be held at the home of Mrs. Joseph Morris Jr. at the Belvedere Club from 2 until 5 p.m. Sunday, May 24.

Cemetery work bee set in Norwood

The Norwood community will conduct its annual cemetery work bee on Saturday, May 2.

Workers, with their clean-up equipment, are asked to be at the cemetery to begin work at 9 a.m. A lunch will be served by the women of the church at fellowship hall at noon.

A meeting of the Norwood Cemetery Association will follow the completion of the work.

The work bee is being held earlier than usual because of the unseasonable weather which is making it necessary to start mowing earlier.

Church installing handicapped lift

Ground-breaking for the installation of a hydraulic lift at the First Congregational Church was held Sunday.

The Rev. Philip G. Schairbaum, pastor of the church who officiated at the special event, said the work on the project follows three years of planning and fund-raising.

The fund-raising has resulted in $35,000 in contributions and donations to be used to underwrite the installation of the lift.

Property tax sale scheduled

by PEG OHLE

Eight hundred-eighty five pieces of property in Charlevoix County will be offered for public sale on May 5 unless taxes for 1984 and previous years and other charges against the property are paid by that time.

A list of these properties has been published three times recently in the Courier.

The sale will be conducted by County Treasurer Joan Balch beginning at 10 a.m. in the County Building.

If and when bidders are successful, they then begin a period of waiting to see if the owners of the land intend to redeem it. Owners may do this any time within the next year by paying one and a quarter percent interest a month on top of the sale price.

If the property is not redeemed at the end of a year, the tax sale buyer receives a tax deed from the State of Michigan and files a re-conveyance which is served by the sheriff on the owner. The owner has another six months to redeem the property at the tax sale price plus 50 percent, plus the fees of the sheriff, plus $5.

If the property is still not redeemed at the end of this additional six-month period, the tax sale buyer is given the re-conveyance papers, which he files with the register of deeds. He now owns the property.

In recent years, only very few of the properties sold at tax sales are not redeemed in the allotted 18-month period, according to records in the treasurer's office.

The number of parcels in Charlevoix County brought to tax sales has decreased in recent years. Two years ago, it was 1,262; last year it was 959; and this year it is 885.

Lake plan looks at present, future

Until an authority is set up, it is recommended that the Charlevoix County Planning Commission assume some functions of the suggested authority.

The Lakes Committee acknowledges that activities which take place on land have and will continue to have the greatest impact on the Lake Charlevoix watershed. These include impacts on water quality, aesthetics, quality of life, and the ultimate economic well-being of the area. In the light of this, certain recommendations are made for lands within 1,000 feet of Lake Charlevoix or any other lake, river, perennial stream or creek in the Lake Charlevoix watershed. (See map).

There are recommendations for vertical and horizontal setbacks for various types of development, greenbelts, locations and density of future development, shoreline footage, use of wetlands, and site plan reviews.

Specifics of all the above recommendations will be reported when they are finalized, probably within the next few weeks.

Rayder boys first at statewide Chip Relays

Charlevoix's boys won the annual Chip relays at Central Michigan University for the first time since 1949, beating 18 other track teams.

The Rayders' girls squad finished fifth with 20 points, a significant improvement over last year's one-point effort in the event, which has been renamed the Lyle Bennett Chippewa Relays.

The Rayder boys compiled 55 points to hold off second place Benzie Central. The team also won a special four-leg Lyle Bennett relay which includes the 300-meter hurdies and 200 meters, 400 meters and 800 meters.

Their time was better than any in similar events by Class A and C teams during the day. Jason Whitley ran the 300-meter hurdle leg in :39.7, Paul Anderson the 200 in :24.4, Jim Gibbs the 400 in :52.2 and Pat Rajewski the 800 in 1:59.5.

The Lyle Bennett event gave the Rayders their only first in the meet. The team had three second, third and fourth places.

The girls team compiled 20 points to finished fifth among 20 teams. In 1986 the team had only one point. The girls had one second place, three thirds and one fourth.

"It was a great day. Everyone came through," coach Hal Evans said.

Added coach Ken Plude,"It was an outstanding job by both teams.... The pre-season training is paying off now."

"This is a boost for the girls track program. They really made a strong showing. The program has a bright future. I think we should make a good showing at the conference level," Plude said.

The event's name has been changed to Lyle Bennett Chippewa Relays honoring a 24-year CMU track coach and a member of the Helms Hall of Fame, a national track coaches hall of fame.

Boys sweep Elk Rapids

The Charlevoix Rayder tennis players scored a 7-0 win over Elk Rapids on the home courts.

Coach Erik Lundteigen said, "It was an easy victory for us because Elk Rapids is in the midst of a rebuilding program. I know how they feel. We were in a similar position before the sport caught on here. Given some time, they'll build a good program."

In the meet, the Rayders swept each set.

Ty Wanger defeated Tony Balogh 6-1, 6-0; Jon Eakes beat Brandon George 6-3, 6-1; Marty Joy defeated Kevin Quattlebaum 6-0, 6-0 and Wes Cumberland defeated David Hoadly 6-1, 6-0.

The Rayder baseball team split a doubleheader with Boyne City. Charlevoix took the first game 9-4 and dropped the second 15-8.

The Rayders scored nine runs on six hits in the opener, while the visitors had four runs on two hits, coach Brian Certa said. Shawn Putman, who went the distance, had four strikeouts. Baxter, the losing pitcher, had two strikeouts.

The Rayders got off to a 5-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning, and added two runs in the third inning and one each in the fourth and fifth. The Ramblers cut the Rayder lead to 5-3 in the third and added one in the fourth as Charlevoix remained in control.

Collecting hits for Charlevoix were Chad Thorp with three singles, Steve Hopkins with a two-run homer in the first inning and Dan Drury and Mike Himebauch, with one hit each.

Certa said the team played good defense and hit the ball well. Putman, he said, did an excellent job of pitching.

In the second game, Boyne City scored 15 runs on 14 hits while the Rayders had eight runs on nine hits. Corey Richardson started on the mound for the Rayders and, after one inning, was relieved by Derek Dutcher who went 4 1/3 innings. Hopkins pitched the last two as Richardson took the loss.

"Boyne City came out hitting and got away from us with nine runs. Though we played well after that, we never recovered," Certa said. Certa said Dutcher did a good job in relief.

Steve Mellios had a single and a double, Kent Seymour two singles and Hopkins, Mike Wise, Dutcher, Chad Morrow and Scott Denny one single each.

Baseball loss comes on big extra inning

The Rayder baseball team dropped its game with Kalkaska 18-7 after leading until the seventh inning when the visitors knotted the score 7-7 and then scored 11 runs in extra innings.

The Rayders fell behind after the starting pitcher, Mike Thompson, left the game in the fifth inning with a sore arm. He was followed on the mound by Corey Richardson, Mike Himebauch who took the loss, Scott Denny and David Loder.

They gave up a total of 12 hits and a number of walks. Dupie started for Kalkaska and after three innings was relieved by Reed who was credited with the win. They allowed 11 hits.

The Rayders went ahead in the third inning after trailing 2-1. The Rayders then scored four runs in the fourth inning for a 7-3 lead. Kalkaska cut the advantage to 7-5 and in the seventh knotted the score.

Kalkaska scored 11 runs in the eight, including two grand slam homers.

Chad Thorp had three singles, Steve Hopkins and Dan Drury two singles each, Scott Denny and Kent Seymour one double each, and Thompson and Shawn Putman each singled.

Coach Brian Certa said the team couldn't buy a hit after losing the lead. The second game was rained out.

Charlevoix will host Cheboygan Saturday, May 1, and Gaylord Tuesday, May 5.

Rayders win softball pair from Kalkaska

The Rayder softball team, playing at Boyne City, lost the opener 13-10 but came back to win the second game 13-8.

"We did a good job with the 10 players we had but many of our regular players were gone with the band, which left us short-handed," coach Becky Gengle said. (The symphonic band was participating in state competition.)

Boyne City took a 3-0 first inning lead, then Charlevoix came back with a pair in the second. Boyne went up 8-6 after three innings and added a run in the fourth.

In the fifth, Boyne scored four runs and Charlevoix five.

Hitting for the Rayders were Anna D'Angelo with a single and a double, Amy Antaya with a double and Jennifer Sell, Heidi Bolduc, Brenda Sutton, Beth Maue and Melinda Boss, with a single each.

Sell pitched, giving gave up nine hits and nine walks while striking out one.

In the second game, Sell allowed five hits and nine walks as Boyne City scored eight runs.

Charlevoix trailed 3-2 after the first inning but came back to score four runs in the second inning against a pair by Boyne. The Rayders added five in the third and Boyne scored three to give the Rayders an 11-8 lead. Charlevoix finished out the scoring with one each in the last two innings.

Collecting hits for the victors were Stacy Gebott with a single and a triple, Antaya a triple and a single, Kris Morrow and Sutton two hits each, Sell and Bolduc a double each and D'Angelo and Maue a single each.

Charlevoix will host Gaylord Thursday and Cheboygan Saturday.

Netters beat Harbor Springs

The Charlevoix Rayder tennis team made it two in a row over Harbor Springs, winning 6-1.

"The kids looked good. They've a lot of work to do but for this early in the season they did all right," Coach Erik Lundteigen said.

As in their first meeting, the Rayders won everything but the No. 1 singles which went to Doug Dickinson who won by scores of 6-1, 6-1 over Ty Wagner.

Yachting Notes

A. NONY MOUSE

Sailboat racers, look out!! Here we go again!! This year's three sailboat racing series are slated to begin May 20. Two tuneup races will be sailed May 6 and May 13 for those really anxious to get out of the blocks early.

For race instructions and entry forms please attend the skippers meeting Monday, May 4, at 7 p.m. at the Charlevoix Yacht Club.

An open forum was held April 17 concerning the Wednesday series with several ideas which will certainly be helpful. All boats will fly fleet designation flags to ease the race committee's task.

New courses have been added this year which will incorporate an early dead downwind leg to get the "slow" leg out of the way before the lighter winds prevail later in the evening. There will be three starts rather than four at five-minute intervals. There is even talk of a Saturday Fall Series so there's good wind and light at the end of the races. What do you think about that? Let us know May 4 at the skippers' meeting.

Finally, I would like to personally thank Jim Stewart for all of his work with this year's education program. There is one of those left, Friday evening with Dave Irish and Josh Barnes so plan on making the finale.

Changing face of Charlevoix

by PEG OHLE

Charlevoix's regular summer residents and visitors will find several visual changes in the city when they arrive in the next couple of months.

Some of the old landmarks have been demolished to make room for new facilities, and other buildings have sprung up on parcels of land that have been just "dirt" for some time.

The biggest change is just north of the bridge, where lumber companies did business for over 100 years. The Edgewater Inn, a hotel of 60 units, six retail shops and eight office spaces, is nearing completion of its first two phases along the Round Lake shore. The third phase will rise on the hill to the north.

Across the street from the Edgewater Inn, there's a large open space where once a commercial building (variously called the Fochtman Building, the Woodland Oil Co. Building and other names) stood for many years. This spot is being reserved for the Rysberg Inn, a three-story, 35-unit hotel, which has been in the planning stage for some time.

Further downtown (in "the valley," as oldtimers call it), the old Erber building is gone from Clinton Street, across from the library.

That space will be prepared for a parking lot to handle more than 60 cars.

The alleyway that once ran between Clinton and Mason streets to Bridge and State streets is now closed off at the State Street end. The new city Public Safety Building has taken over that area. Fire engines exit from the new building onto State Street now, sometimes surprising older residents who are used to seeing fire engines exit from the Mason Street side.

At 405 Bridge Street, the Market Mall has had not only a facelift, but also a complete body rejuvenation.

The interior walls have been painted white and trimmed with Williamsburg blue, giving the whole area a lighter, more spacious feeling.

Several new business have moved into the building or will do so soon.

These are the Cabana Club, Grand Bay Marine & Brokerage, Chocolates of Northport, Na-gon-a-ba North Boutique, Dapper Dick's Deli, The Beach suntanning parlor, Binshaw Insurance Agency, Sam Supernaw Accounting, Petroleum Resources Inc. and Promotional Management Services.

The large building at the northwest corner of Bridge and Antrim streets, across from the Chamber of Commerce, which through the years has been a grocery store, liquor store, bakery and most recently a candy store, will soon house a restaurant and bar. Terry Left, owner and operator of two adjoining restaurants, Whitefish Fish and Chips and Terry's Place, will open The Villager as a year-round business.

And, across the street, Oleson's is planning an enlargement and renovation of its downtown supermarket.

On the south side of town, the Shell oil station at the corner of Bridge and Carpenter streets, and the house next to it, disappeared in less than a day. The Alpena Oil Co. has applied to the city for a permit to construct a Shell Mini-Mart at that location. Bob Radamacher of Alpena Oil says he hopes to have the mini-mart operating by early summer.

Ron Gates, well-known archer and former manager of the Shell station, has moved across and up Bridge Street to the Mobil gas station.

And still on the subject of gas stations, the former Texaco station on South Bridge Street has been demolished and will open about June 15 as a Burger King restaurant.

On M-66, just around the corner from South Bridge Street, Glen's Market in the Captain's Corners shopping area has almost doubled its size to make room for a complete selection of food and household items and some clothing.

McLelland Home Furnishings has moved from its Captain's Corners location to a new building across M-66, while Little Caesars Pizza is moving into the shopping center, which also houses the expanded Rite-Aid pharmacy.

On the north side of town, the wooded area adjacent to the Chez Charlevoix Apartments on U.S. 31 now holds two buildings with a total of 12 apartments.

The small frame building next to the Charlevoix IGA, which has housed an assortment of deli-type businesses, will re-open toward the end of this month as a sandwich shop, operated by Jack Schmidt, owner of the IGA.

No report on new things in Charlevoix would be complete without mentioning the city's new water intake system, just off Lake Michigan Beach. Purified water from Lake Michigan now comes out of faucets in both the City of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township, replacing the old well system which was contaminated with a suspected cancer-causing solvent, TCE.

Garden spots available on city property

The city of Charlevoix is plotting – for you.

Garden plots are available again this year for anyone wanting a place to plant a vegetable garden. The city garden is near the airport.

For just $5 gardeners get a 24- by 24-foot plowed plot and free use of the city water system.

There's plenty of space available and gardeners can have up to two plots.

Plots are available until June 1 at the manager's office in City Hall.

Agreement reached on Star of Charlevoix dock

The dispute over where to park the Star of Charlevoix has been resolved – probably.

City council accepted Star Line Corp.'s latest proposal Monday, apparently ending a controversy which began in March.

The approval of one state agency is needed, but expected.

The dispute began when Star Line owner John McGoff asked council on March 30 to allow the tourist ship to dock at the end of Clinton Street instead of in front of the Edgewater Inn as in the past.

McGoff sweetened his request with a proposal to give the city two percent of the Star's gross revenues in exchange for dockage space and utilities.

A new Star, the fourth here, is being prepared for this summer – a $1 million paddlewheel cruise ship.

At first the council seemed generally receptive to the offer, but rough water lay ahead.

When word got around town that Star Line wanted to operate a full-time bar on a barge floating next to the Star, reaction from downtown business operators was strongly negative.

The crowd at council's April 13 meeting overflowed into the hallway, and several speakers criticized the barge plan. Others objected to the city leasing public space for private enterprise.

The city made a counter-proposal April 20 and the Star management Monday agreed to the plan, with one change.

In the one-season agreement, it is agreed:

– There will be no barge at the city docks.

– No docks will be removed; the Star had asked the city to foot the estimated $3,000 bill for removal.

– The Star will pay the city either $5,000 rent or one percent of gross revenue, whichever is greater.

– The Star will be allowed to use the dock on Venetian Festival evening; the city had wanted the ship away from the dock but agreed it would not be in the way of activities or spectators.

– The Star will pay to extend utilities to the site and for utility consumption.

– The Star will provide the city with a sketch of piling and loading ramp locations prior to execution of the contract.

– The Star will put in pilings and cleats as required and will remove them if necessary.

The only possible holdup may be with the waterways commission of the state Department of Natural Resources.

Since the DNR participated financially in work on the Round Lake marina, it has veto power over the proposal and has, in fact, already voted against the idea.

City Manager Mike Wiesner has talked with the head of the waterways commission, though, and believes the new agreement will satisfy the DNR's concerns.

Since removal of dock is no longer being considered, Wiesner said, and since the city is not allocating its maximum number of seasonal slips, he believes the waterways commission will informally approve the proposal.

The commission will meet again May 16 and then hold a meeting in Charlevoix on June 4.

The formal contract between the city and Star Line is expected to be ready for signing at next Monday's board meeting.

It has been estimated the cruise ship brings 35,000 people a summer to Charlevoix.

Several new business have moved into the building or will do so soon.

These are the Cabana Club, Grand Bay Marine & Brokerage, Chocolates of Northport, Na-gon-aba North Boutique, Dapper Dick's Deli, The Beach suntanning parlor, Binshaw Insurance Agency, Sam Supernaw Accounting, Petroleum Resources Inc. and Promotional Management Services.

The large building at the northwest corner of Bridge and Antrim streets, across from the Chamber of Commerce, which through the years has been a grocery store, liquor store, bakery and most recently a candy store, will soon house a restaurant and bar. Terry Left, owner and operator of two adjoining restaurants, Whitefish Fish and Chips and Terry's Place, will open The Villager as a year-round business.

And, across the street, Oleson's is planning an enlargement and renovation of its downtown supermarket.

On the south side of town, the Shell oil station at the corner of Bridge and Carpenter streets, and the house next to it, disappeared in less than a day. The Alpena Oil Co. has applied to the city for a permit to construct a Shell Mini-Mart at that location. Bob Radamacher of Alpena Oil says he hopes to have the mini-mart operating by early summer.

Ron Gates, well-known archer and former manager of the Shell station, has moved across and up Bridge Street to the Mobil gas station.

And still on the subject of gas stations, the former Texaco station on South Bridge Street has been demolished and will open about June 15 as a Burger King restaurant.

On M-66, just around the corner from South Bridge Street, Glen's Market in the Captain's Corners shopping area has almost doubled its size to make room for a complete selection of food and household items and some clothing.

McLelland Home Furnishings has moved from its Captain's Corners location to a new building across M-66, while Little Caesars Pizza is moving into the shopping center, which also houses the expanded Rite-Aid pharmacy.

On the north side of town, the wooded area adjacent to the Chez Charlevoix Apartments on U.S. 31 now holds two buildings with a total of 12 apartments.

The small frame building next to the Charlevoix IGA, which has housed an assortment of deli-type businesses, will re-open toward the end of this month as a sandwich shop, operated by Jack Schmidt, owner of the IGA.

No report on new things in Charlevoix would be complete without mentioning the city's new water intake system, just off Lake Michigan Beach. Purified water from Lake Michigan now comes out of faucets in both the City of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township, replacing the old well system which was contaminated with a suspected cancer-causing solvent, TCE.

Garden spots available on city property

The city of Charlevoix is plotting – for you.

Garden plots are available again this year for anyone wanting a place to plant a vegetable garden. The city garden is near the airport.

For just $5 gardeners get a 24- by 24-foot plowed plot and free use of the city water system.

There's plenty of space available and gardeners can have up to two plots.

Plots are available until June 1 at the manager's office in City Hall.

Agreement reached on Star of Charlevoix dock

The dispute over where to park the Star of Charlevoix has been resolved – probably.

City council accepted Star Line Corp.'s latest proposal Monday, apparently ending a controversy which began in March.

The approval of one state agency is needed, but expected.

The dispute began when Star Line owner John McGoff asked council on March 30 to allow the tourist ship to dock at the end of Clinton Street instead of in front of the Edgewater Inn as in the past.

McGoff sweetened his request with a proposal to give the city two percent of the Star's gross revenues in exchange for dockage space and utilities.

A new Star, the fourth here, is being prepared for this summer – a $1 million paddlewheel cruise ship.

At first the council seemed generally receptive to the offer, but rough water lay ahead.

When word got around town that Star Line wanted to operate a full-time bar on a barge floating next to the Star, reaction from downtown business operators was strongly negative.

The crowd at council's April 13 meeting overflowed into the hallway, and several speakers criticized the barge plan. Others objected to the city leasing public space for private enterprise.

The city made a counter-proposal April 20 and the Star management Monday agreed to the plan, with one change.

In the one-season agreement, it is agreed:

– There will be no barge at the city docks.

– No docks will be removed; the Star had asked the city to foot the estimated $3,000 bill for removal.

– The Star will pay the city either $5,000 rent or one percent of gross revenue, whichever is greater.

– The Star will be allowed to use the dock on Venetian Festival evening; the city had wanted the ship away from the dock but agreed it would not be in the way of activities or spectators.

– The Star will pay to extend utilities to the site and for utility consumption.

– The Star will provide the city with a sketch of piling and loading ramp locations prior to execution of the contract.

– The Star will put in pilings and cleats as required and will remove them if necessary.

The only possible holdup may be with the waterways commission of the state Department of Natural Resources.

Since the DNR participated financially in work on the Round Lake marina, it has veto power over the proposal and has, in fact, already voted against the idea.

City Manager Mike Wiesner has talked with the head of the waterways commission, though, and believes the new agreement will satisfy the DNR's concerns.

Since removal of dock is no longer being considered, Wiesner said, and since the city is not allocating its maximum number of seasonal slips, he believes the waterways commission will informally approve the proposal.

The commission will meet again May 16 and then hold a meeting in Charlevoix on June 4.

The formal contract between the city and Star Line is expected to be ready for signing at next Monday's board meeting.

It has been estimated the cruise ship brings 35,000 people a summer to Charlevoix.

Medusa awards scholarship

Daniel Staublin

The 1987 recipient of the Medusa Corp. Scholarship is Daniel S. Staublin, who will graduate in June from Charlevoix High School.

Each year Medusa awards scholarships to graduating high school seniors of dependent children of employees and retirees.

The competitive scholarships are awarded by a committee of three non-employees.

Daniel is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Staublin. His father is production superintendent of the Charlevoix plant.

This is the second straight year and the third time in five years that a senior at Charlevoix High has received the scholarship.

In 1986 Jill Raecke, who is attending Albion College, won the scholarhip and in 1983 David Batdorff, now a student at Huntington College, in Huntington, Ind., was a recipient.

The $1,500 award is for the freshman year, with annual renewals provided the recipient stays in a normal four-year college program, maintains high grades and a full schedule of classes and otherwise remains in good standing at the college.

Daniel plans to study business administration at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

He has been a member of the National Honor Society and its treasurer for two years and has received honors in district and state solo-ensemble festival competition. He was first chair for three years in the Michigan School Band and Orchestra Association District II Honors Band and received two varsity letters in tennis.

He has also been a student council representative for four years, symphonic band president for one year, a 1987 recipient of the John Philip Sousa Award for his contribution to the band.

He participated in the French club and the cross country and track programs. A featured soloist with the Little Traverse Community Orchestra, he attended Michigan Boys State as a junior and is active in the First Congregational Church youth group.

This year's scholarship committee included a professor from John Carroll University, an administrator from Case Western Reserve University and a suburban Cleveland high school principal.

Medusa corporate offices are in Cleveland.

New superintendent named for Big Rock

Thomas W. Elward has been named plant manager of Consumers Power Co.'s Big Rock Point nuclear plant.

Elward had been executive director of planning, training and administration for the utility's energy supply division in Jackson.

He succeeds David P. Hoffman, who was recently promoted to general manager of the utility's Palisades Nuclear Plant.

Elward, 38, earned a master of science degree in nuclear engineering from the University of Illinois in 1972. He also holds a bachelor of science degree in chemical engineering, summa cum laude, from the University of Detroit in 1971. Elward completed the Harvard Business School program for management development in 1983.

The appointment marks a return for Elward to Big Rock Point, where he served as technical superintendent 1976-1977. A native of Monroe, Elward joined Consumers Power in 1972 as an associate engineer at the Palisades plant. He became reactor engineer at Palisades in 1974, and, after his Big Rock Point assignment, was promoted in 1977 to technical superintendent at the Midland nuclear plant.

Elward served as operations and maintenance superintendent at Midland from 1980 to 1981, when he was named director of the nuclear planning and administration for the company's nuclear operations department in Jackson. He was named executive director of planning, training and administration in 1983.

Hoffman, superintendent of Big Rock since June 1982, succeeds Joseph F. Firlit, who is leaving Consumers Power to join a California utility.

He moved to Big Rock Point in February 1982 as assistant plant superintendent and was promoted to plant superintendent in June 1982.

The Palisades plant is located on Lake Michigan, five miles south of South Haven.

Excellent season predicted for morel mushroom hunters

The prospects look good for this year's crop of morel mushrooms, according to Peter Fitzsimons of the Boyne Country Convention and Visitors Bureau. The season is expected to peak in mid-May.

"We expect this season to be much better than last year, due to the early, warm weather and spring rains," Fitzsimons said.

Fitzsimons said some of the better spots for morel hunting are on state lands north of Harbor Springs, on the lands surrounding Boyne Falls and east of Petoskey.

The bureau has detailed maps of the best picking areas available to mushroom hunters, but Fitzsimons cautioned a land-owner's permission must be obtained before hunting on private lands.

The Morel Mushroom Festival in Boyne City, scheduled for this weekend, May 9-10, features the National Mushroom Hunting Championship. Participants may register in advance at the Boyne City Chamber of Commerce.

Friend of Court guidelines change

Friend of the Court staff members from Charlevoix and 13 other northern offices received training in the use of a recently approved Michigan Child Support Guideline set to be implemented statewide this month.

The guideline puts into effect a uniform schedule to be used by Friend of the Court offices when making child support recommendations in domestic relations cases.

The guideline is a result of more than three years of work by an advisory committee, a subcommittee and staff of the state Court Administrative Office.

Downtown traffic studied

Summer brings traffic congestion on Bridge Street, and the city is trying to do something to remedy the problem.

The Michigan Department of Transportation is reviewing traffic in the downtown area and will provide the city with a list of alternatives to consider.

This August, the department will conduct traffic counts at each intersection on Bridge Street (U.S. 31) from Belvedere to Park.

The highway department, City Manager Mike Wiesner said, could probably already make recommendations, but not be able to tell the city how much better traffic would be without the counts.

Traffic bottlenecks downtown as four-lane Bridge Street from the south narrows into two lanes and two parking lanes and as four-lane Petoskey Avenue becomes Michigan Avenue, crosses the bridge and narrows into parking and traffic lanes.

When the drawbridge is lifted in mid-summer, traffic often backs up for several blocks to the north and all the way through downtown and up the hill to the south.

The department is looking at several alternatives, according to Richard L. Blost, supervising engineer of the safety programs unit of the traffic and safety division of the highway department.

These include:

- Retain the existing parking and traffic lanes;
- Remove parking on one side of Bridge Street;
- Remove parking on both sides of Bridge Street;
- Operate three lanes with a center lane for turning;
- Operate three lanes with two northbound and one southbound;
- Operate four traffic lanes.

The highway department will not be looking at the possibility of diverting some traffic onto State Street, Wiesner said, because the city council said State was not an option when it ordered the study.

The traffic counts were scheduled for August so they would reflect any pattern changes caused by the addition of a 60-space parking lot where the Erber Building was recently torn down between Clinton and Mason streets.

While the state is studying traffic patterns, the city will be talking with the Coast Guard about the feasibility of changing drawbridge openings.

The final three pieces of property on Bridge Street that have not had petunias planted on them will join Operation Petunia this year. At two, pavement had to be removed last week. The third agreed Tuesday to join in the planting. Jesse King uses a diamond-bladed saw to cut through concrete in front of Fochtman Motor Co. so flowers can be planted Thursday, May 21. A 24-inch swipe, 60 feet long, was removed with the aid of Bob Washburn, who helped King, and Hugh Lambert, who donated his time and front-end loader. About 90 feet of asphalt was removed at Charlevoix IGA, said Bruce MacArthur of Keep Charlevoix Beautiful. The 7-Eleven store provided coffee for the workers.

4 advance to state math competition

Four of 10 Charlevoix Middle School students who competed in the regional competition sponsored by the Michigan Council of Teachers of Mathematics at Traverse City will advance to the state competition at Mt. Pleasant later this month.

"I think our students did very well," said instructor Kay Fiedorek. "They were among more than 200 students from all classes of schools in the region entered in the competition. Only 25 were named to advance to state competition."

The four are Nancy Dammann, Matt Smith and Anne Schairbaum, sixth graders, and Mike Ochs, an eighth grader.

Other members who competed were Jamie Pfluecke of the sixth grade; Luke Porath, Jason Pajtas, Dan Boss and Janet Kniat, seventh grade, and Mark Newman, eighth grade.

Fiedorek said each school is allowed two students per 100 enrollment per grade. Because Charlevoix's eighth grade is a small class, only two students competed.

GET A LIFT WITH CHARLEVOIX COUNTY STATE BANK AND SAVE $38,396.59* ON YOUR MORTGAGE.

You know there are many mortgage options out there. But they're all basically the same. You make monthly payments for 30 years, and then finally, you own your home.

Now you have a choice. Charlevoix County State Bank's new LIFT Mortgage.

A Charlevoix County State Bank LIFT Mortgage allows you to own your home in approximately 21 years, not 30 like conventional mortgages. At the same time, you pay substantially less interest.

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS:

Instead of paying monthly, you pay one-half your regular mortgage payment every 14 days. By reducing the principal more frequently, the total amount of interest will be dramatically reduced.

*For example, if your mortgage is $50,000 at 10% Annual Percentage Rate, you could save $38,396.59 in interest! That's money you can use to finance the kids' college tuition, invest in a second home or even to buy a new boat.

LIFT
Payment $219.39 every 14 days
Pay out period approximately 21 years
Total interest paid $69,558.25
$38,396.59 Interest Saved
Based on $50,000 mortgage and 10% Annual Percentage Rate

CONVENTIONAL
Payment $438.79 per month
Pay out period 30 years
Total interest paid $107,954.83

MAY 1987

Opinion

Thanks, Dave

March 23, 1983. Cheboygan High School. A trip to Crisler Arena in Ann Arbor is seconds away.

The Rayders have battled back from a 12-point deficit against the 1981 state champions.

They have the ball and a chance to tie the game, but time is running out. In their sights are Charlevoix's first state basketball tournament quarterfinal victory since 1948 and a shot at the state finals for the first time since 1938.

With three seconds left, George Smith puts up a shot from outside. It rattles off the rim and drops out.

The dream season has ended.

Until that point, no one had defeated Charlevoix in the 1982-83 season. Twenty-four games. Twenty-four wins.

Players had become celebrities, giving interviews on television and being tagged by a Detroit newspaper as "the team to beat."

Now, they would sit quietly in a locker room as Stephenson fans and players were dancing and shouting and hugging on a wood floor intended for dribbling and picking and rebounding.

Now, Dave Smith would sit on a step outside the silent locker room and talk about the 24 wins and the two-point loss.

"It was a great season," he would say, putting the emphasis on the way his players played.

It was a great season, too, for a head coach. Smith had taken a team that began the year as a star and many supporting actors and transformed it as the season progressed into a team of four or more stars.

In the beginning, it was Craig Klooster with all the fancy moves, outplaying the opposition, on his way to all-state honors.

But later it would be Chris Putman working the ball underneath, and Tim LaBlance developing as a playmaker, and George Smith becoming a strong outside shooter – all complementing Klooster's play.

It was a year to remember. But it was not the only achievement Dave Smith's six years as Rayder basketball coach will be remembered by.

The Rayders would roll to an impressive 20-3 record the next year and an equally laudable 22-2 in 1985.

And the teams of the past two seasons won more than two of every three games they played, putting together excellent 17-7 and 16-8 records.

Though people should be judged by more than their won-loss records, coaches are unfortunately often remembered only by the numbers they amass.

And by those numbers, Dave Smith excelled – 119 wins against 25 losses, four 20-win seasons, five district titles, one regional title and four league crowns.

Dave Smith didn't know it back in '83 when he said it was a great season, but he would be proven wrong.

It wasn't a great season – it was six great seasons.

Thanks, Dave.

The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce Dinner Dance is a signal of spring as natural as the first boat in the harbor, and first ferry to Beaver Island.

The annual dinner dance at the beautiful Belvedere Club Casino attracted a total of 200 guests. The newly remodeled casino was impressive with its new interior and the decorations were spectacular. The Dance Committee out-did themselves. They provided a new seating arrangement, placed the band and dance floor in a strategic location making it possible to dance or talk to others at their tables, and decorated with a aura of pure "glitz" (translated "glitz" means colorful splendor; brilliance).

This formal affair was catered by Grey Gables with guests being able to choose prime rib or whitefish for their entree, both of which were great. It appeared that everyone had fun, dancing to music provided by Attractions.

Denny and Eileen Heck, Lundy-Heck Co., did an outstanding job chairing this annual gala event. Members of their committee were Gordon Boydston, Ed and Penny Gregory, Chris Pfister, Judy LaFave, Lilly Matye, and of course all the Heck children.

Thank you for a wonderful party!

Labor of love

Clockwise BY BOB CLOCK

If you haven't signed up yet for a city garden this summer, you had better get a wiggle on.

The tract of land at the city airport will be plowed any day now and warm weather in May augurs well for a long and productive growing season.

For just $5 you can have a 24 by 24-foot plot of ground reserved for your tomatoes, potatoes, squash, lettuce, broccoli, eggplant, radishes, onions, corn, cabbage — or marigolds, if you prefer.

For $10 you can have adjoining plots twice that big.

The city gardens were launched in 1974 and since then have provided literally tons of produce for city residents.

Of course, there's a little work involved. The city does the plowing, but the soil usually needs to be turned a second time, either by hand or rototiller, before you plant your seeds or transplant your young cabbage. And of course you have to keep after the weeds and be sure your plants are well watered.

Water, incidentally, comes with the territory. Three stand pipes several hundred feet apart serve the entire garden.

But for most of us, hours spent at the city garden are a labor of love. In fact, I find few things in life more rewarding than turning a barren scrap of land into neat rows of green beans and lush hills of crisp cucumbers.

But it's not all work. I also enjoy leaning on a hoe and talking crops and weather with fellow gardeners while watching the sun sink slowly over the ball diamonds.

If you would like to raise some of your own produce this summer, indulge in some healthy outdoor exercise and make some new friends, just sign up for a city garden at city hall.

You won't be sorry.

I'M DISGUSTED with the news media, particularly the metro press.

Would you believe that a team of five Miami Herald and Knight-Ridder newspaper reporters had nothing better to do for 24 hours last Friday and Saturday than to keep an eye on the front and back doors of Gary Hart's Washington townhouse to determine if the presidential hopeful spent the night with a lady friend from Florida?

In fact, the Herald reporters said they had trailed the poor woman all the way from Miami.

All of which raises the question, "So what?"

Has politics in America reached the point where public officials can no longer enjoy private lives? If so, it's time for a change.

Are news reporters becoming little more than malicious gossips?

It appears that way, judging from the Fourth Estate's latest outrageous caper.

Hart says he is the victim of "character assassination" by unethical journalists who are "reduced to hiding in bushes, peeking in windows and personal harassment."

He is absolutely right. With the myriad problems facing the world — poverty, hunger, the arms race, the growing trade war with Japan, crime in the streets and other manifestations of man's inhumanity to man around the world — have these reporters nothing better to do than peek in Gary Hart's bedroom window?

Apparently not.

Such shenanigans not only diminish the stature of the press but also give ammunition to those who would like to see the press bound and gagged.

These five gumshoes who staked out Gart Hart's home offer the best argument I've heard in years in favor of press censorship. If the media refuses to police itself, someone is going to do it for them.

What Gary Hart does in his spare time is none of my business. And it shouldn't be any of theirs. Or yours.

What interests me is what Gary Hart does as a public figure.

Good Lord! Isn't this still the "land of the free" or have I missed something important along the way?

Good Friday service one not to forget

Dear Editor:

I wish to commend the Charlevoix Ministerial Association for the Good Friday Service in which they led the worshippers who paused to honor the Christ who spared no expense for our salvation.

The searching message of the Rev. Thweatt, the orderly communion service, the brotherly love and humility of our pastors during the deeply moving footwashing ceremony, the lovely music, the capacity congregation, all blended together to make this a Good Friday I'll not forget.

Thank you, pastors of our community.

Nuclear warheads spending obscene

Dear Editor,

In his "Clockwise" column, Bob Clock characterizes Lee Iacocca's $20 million earnings last year as an "obscene" salary for any hireling.

Truly obscene is the figure of $230 billion spent building nuclear warheads since the dawn of the atomic age at the end of World War II. That is only a small portion of what we spend on the military.

In many so-called Third World countries earnings of less than $500 per year per capita are common. Millions of men, women and children go hungry and without proper shelter. Shamefully, this is true also in affluent America.

Lee Iacocca will probably do some good with his millions such as funding his foundation for diabetic research. As world citizens, will we do some good by insisting that our vast sums of money will be used for the benefit of human beings and not for the enrichment of a few military contractors.

Beacons of Blessing

A devotional column prepared by the Charlevoix Ministerial Association

by Rev. Robert H. Piller
Bethany Lutheran Church

After the Sunday school teacher had spoken to her class at great length about the love of God, especially about how He showed His love for us by sending Jesus to be our Savior, she decided to ask a probing question.

In her general review she asked the children: "Why do you think God loves us all so very much?" There was a long, unbroken silence as each child "thought hard" for the proper answer. Finally a timid little six-year-old raised her hand and entured tentatively: "Because He has only one of each of us?"

What an answer – even though it ended with a question mark! Yes, among many other reasons, God loves us "because He has only one of each of us."

Does that sound like a childish answer – the naive reply of a kindergartener? It may at first seem so, but beneath those words lies a very special and deep truth. And the more we ponder it, the more it gives a deeper meaning to your life and mine. Suppose we repeat the little girl's reply: "God loves us all so very much 'because He has only one of each of us'."

If this is true, and it is, then those inevitable moments when we feel so insignificant, so unimportant, so lost in the teeming mass of humanity, we can always remember that, in the eyes of our heavenly Father, we are something special, something unique. He does have "only one" of each of us. And no matter who we are, rich or poor, famous or unknown – no matter what particular church we may attend, the great God of heaven speaks to our single, solitary self and says: "I have redeemed you; I have called you by your name; you are mine" (Isaiah 43:1). What an assurance! In the moments of loneliness, depression, or seeming defeat – throughout the changing scenes of life, we have a God who loves and cares for us as individuals, because, there is "only one of each of us!" What more could we ask for?

Volunteers sought for literacy project

The "Say Yes to Literacy" programs in Charlevoix County are recruiting volunteers to work in Charlevoix, Boyne City and East Jordan.

Sherry Black, coordinator-director of the Adult Learning Center at Charlevoix, and representatives from the libraries in the other communities were in Alpena recently to attend a workshop on literacy hosted by the Northland Library Cooperative, sponsor of the program for northern Michigan.

Patricia Frey, president of the Michigan Literacy Council, conducted the workshop, using as resource material her book, "LITSTART," a handbook for adult literacy tutors. This method is designed to supplement tutor training workshops in the Laubach method or any other now in use in the program, Black explained.

According to Frey, 20 percent of the U.S. population is functionally illiterate. This means they cannot read well enough to function independently in modern society. There are people at various levels of ability. It has been found that the Laubach method, which has been in use in the Charlevoix area by Betty Potter, former teacher in the Charlevoix schools is well adapted to beginners. Others are at the intermediate or advanced levels which call for a combination of methods.

Anyone interested in becoming a tutor in this method is asked to call Black at 547-5361. If you have already been trained in the method your assistance is greatly needed.

Learning to read is a one-on-one proposition, Black said, adding that is why individual tutors are needed at the senior center. It also frees the professional teacher to assist in other areas.

Reading classes for adults are offered at the Senior Learning Center in Charlevoix from 8 a.m. until noon every Monday. Anyone 18 years or older is welcome to attend.

The Rev. David Yingling of Charlevoix United Methodist Church was honored by the board of the Rainbow Shoppe when he was presented with a plaque citing his years of service in helping to establish the Rainbow Shoppe and later in serving as its president. The presentation was made by Rita Orlowski, current Rainbow Shoppe president. Yingling was dressed in farm clothing to celebrate Heritage Day at his church when the presentation was made.

Annual spring dessert slated by homemakers

Charlevoix County members of the Michigan Association of Extension Homemakers (MAEH) will host their third annual spring dessert Thursday, May 7, at 7 p.m. at the Hayes Township Hall.

Entertainment will be provided by members of the performing arts group from Charlevoix High School. Also included in the program will be a cultural arts display of hand-crafted items made by MAEH members.

Those attending are asked to take a dessert or appetizer to share. The public is invited.

For further information, call council president Frani Phalen at 547-5293 or Cooperative Extension Service home economist Janet Rathke at 582-6232.

Tickets ready for petunia fundraiser

A red 1987 Ford Mustang convertible is the prize in this year's Keep Charlevoix Beautiful fundraiser.

The fundraiser format is somewhat changed this year, with the Petunia Auction being replaced by an event that will take ticket-holders to the new Edgewater Inn, the Weathervane Restaurant and, tentatively, on the new Star of Charlevoix for moonlight dancing.

The Labor Day drawing may include some auction items, said Bruce MacArthur of Keep Charlevoix Beautiful.

Past holders of the $100 tickets may reserve their numbers by calling Sulane Hamilton at 547-5507 or mailing a check to KCB in care of Hamilton at 206 Michigan Ave. by Wednesday, May 20.

After that date, tickets will be sold on a first-come, first-served basis. Two-hundred tickets will be sold.

Ticket-holders will be allowed to invite one guest to the drawing festivities.

Engagements

Sherry Jensen and Michael Dankert

Jensen-Dankert

Mr. and Mrs. James Jensen of Charlevoix announce the engagement of their daughter, Sherry, to Michael Dankert of Petoskey. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Dankert of Carp Lake.

The bride-elect graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1981 and attended Anderson College in Indiana for three years. She will finish her degree in elementary education and physical science at Central Michigan University next fall.

Her fiance graduated from Pellston High School in 1979. He is presently employed as a dining room manager at Petoskey's Elias Brothers Big Boy restaurant.

The wedding will take place August 22 at the Charlevoix Church of God.

Developmentally handicapped field day events slated

The sixth annual field day for developmentally handicapped students and clients of Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District and guests will be held Friday, May 8, at Kipke Field at Charlevoix High School.

Hosting the event – which also features entertainment, dinner and a dance – will be Round Lake Lodge No. 293 IOOF, Charlevoix Lodge No. 282 F & AM, and Father Pierre Charlevoix Council No. 7172 Knights of Columbus.

Track and field events begin at noon. Ribbons are awarded to all those who participate in the field and track events.

The action will then move to the high school gymnasium where the band Peril will entertain. This will be the third year the band comprised of Jeff Hudson, Chris Groves, Mark Pulley and Rick Hudson has donated its services for the event.

A dinner in the high school cafeteria will be followed by a dance at the same site.

Shop owner featured speaker at arts center herb program

Mary Lee Huber of Charlevoix will be among six area residents who will present a luncheon and program focused on herb cookery and herb gardening.

The luncheon will be held in the McCune Arts Center in Petoskey at 11:30 a.m. Friday, May 15.

Huber, of Wintergreen Herbs and Potpourri of Charlevoix, is the featured speaker.

Co-sponsored by the Emmet County Extension Service, the luncheon will be served in six courses, each prepared by a differend person. The chefs are Ken Crane of Petoskey, Ruth Kalchik of Petoskey, Lucille Ruonavaara of Harbor Springs, Martha Breckenridge of Harbor Springs, home economist Julie Michael of the Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service office in Petoskey and Huber.

Huber will speak about planting and caring for an herb garden, harvesting, drying and storing herbs.

Pre-paid reservations are required by Monday, May 10, at the arts center in downtown Petoskey. The luncheon is $5 per person.

Industrial arts projects receive state awards

Edward McLenon displays the Queen Anne table that won him the "best of show" award at this weekend's Michigan Industrial Education Society state fair. Eddie's and other state prize winners are on display at First State Bank.

by FRAN MARTIN

Eighth grade industrial education student Edward McLenon was awarded the "best of show" award in the junior division at the annual Michigan Industrial Education Society state fair at Grand Traverse Resort Village last weekend.

"Eddie won this award in the toughest division of competition at the state level," said teacher Jerry Puhl. "There are few of these given each year."

Eddie's entry was a Queen Anne table of Honduras mahogany. "He showed talent, dedication and enduring effort," Puhl said. "He probably has from 50 to 60 hours of work in after it was roughed out on the band saw. It is made of one of the choicest of woods and has a hand-rubbed finish. He really earned the award."

Eddie, who is 14, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard McLenon.

It was the second time in three years a Charlevoix student received the award. Robert Coen received the award for a game table in 1985.

Eddie's blue ribbon entry will be on display all week along with other prize winners in the lobby of First State Bank.

Also winning blue ribbons were:

- Denis Mailloux whose entry was a clock of Honduras mahogany with curly maple inserts for the numbers.
- Matt Stargardt, a floor clock of American walnut with the face turned on the lathe and numbers made of curly maple inserts.
- Joe Prevo, for a machine-crafted metal hammer.

Others who received recognition were: Scott Campbell, third place for a solid red oak coffee table; Steve Kniat, fourth, for a lathe-turned Honduras mahogany nut bowl and attached nut cracker; Dan VanSoosten, sixth, for a Honduras mahogany candle lamp; Paul Wakulat, eighth, for a carved steer head; Ryan Smith, eighth, for an American walnut turned lamp; Steve Pond, ninth, for a carved mahogany fox head; and Gary Haines, 10th, for a Honduras mahogany candle lamp.

Receiving honorable mentions were Steve Pond for an exotic wood cutting board and Aaron Boris for a carved steer head.

Puhl said he was very pleased with his students and their accomplishments. The majority of the students, he said, were members of his special shop class. At the beginning of the year they selected a project, usually a challenging one, and devoted many extra hours to completing the work.

At the high school level, John Mills said six of his students entered 10 projects in the state fair.

Steve Mansen received a sixth for his utility trailer and John O'Brien a 10th for a screwdriver.

Those who received honorable mention were John O'Brien for a cannon model, Jerry Thayer for a C-clamp, Charles Steele for two drafting entries, Jason Wiser for three drafting projects and David Puhl for Brian Certa said six of his students received honorable mentions on their projects. They were Gene McClanathan, a tool box; Andy Dillerberger, a condiment set; Jason Jackson, a hammer; Matt Seeman, a marking gauge and a hose holder; Barry Loper, a screwdriver; and Robert Coen, a screwdriver.

Tree trimming, beautification effort under way

The city's $106,000 effort to take care of shade trees will be moving ahead this summer.

The city plans to maintain present trees along right-of-ways, plant new ones and beauty the entrances to the city.

A contract with Michigan State University's forestry department will provide the city with forestry expertise and with a graduate student for the summer.

Under the contract, MSU will update a street tree inventory done last year, supply specifications so the city can hire a trimming contractor and oversee the trimming operation.

The university will also develop a plan to beautify the entrances to the city, begin development of an annual planting program and recommend future projects.

The graduate student's first goal, said City Manager Mike Wiesner, will be to develop the planting program for the city entrances. He will also order trees for fall planting and inspect the on-going trimming operation.

The city has fallen behind in caring for trees in recent years, Wiesner said, necessitating the need for outside help.

"Once we catch up, we feel we can keep up with city crews," he said.

Shade Tree Commission member Pat Jackson will do some volunteer work with the graduate student, Wiesner said.

Erber parking lot plans fight time crunch

A joint meeting of city council and the Downtown Development Authority is set for 5 p.m. Wednesday, May 6, in an attempt to decide what type of parking lot will be constructed on the Erber Building site this summer.

The Clinton Street building, owned by the city, was removed in April with plans to put a 60-space parking lot on the site, hopefully in time for summer.

City Manager Mike Wiesner has expressed concerns about getting the project completed in time for the tourist season, though. Wiesner told the DDA on Wednesday and the city council on Monday that any timetable aimed at completion by July 4 weekend would leave little time for error or for making sure the job was done the way the city wanted.

Instead of paving, curbing and guttering the lot now, Wiesner suggested graveling and bringing the surface so it could be used all summer, then completing the project in the fall.

Paving the Erber site will involve relocating the alley close to the backs of Bridge Street businesses.

Council members were split Monday, and agreed to a suggestion from the audience that they meet with the DDA to see if a satisfactory plan could be agreed to in a short time.

At its meeting last week, and at an informal meeting Friday, some business operators with stores backing on an alley next to the Erber site were concerned about loss of the alley for deliveries and trash pickup.

Karl Gilewicz of Karl's Pastry said Monday his concerns had been satisfied. Wiesner told the Courier last week the alley was mostly on city property, with the stores owning from two to five feet out from their buildings.

Wiesner's plan would put a row of parking near the buildings, but leave a 22-foot wide driving lane between that and the next parking lane.

It was suggested at the DDA meeting, he said, that perhaps parking could be prohibited in the lane closest to the buildings in the early morning for deliveries and pickups.

"The odds are not in the city's favor to get the lot done by July 4," Wiesner told city council.

He said construction crews' heavy equipment could eliminate the use of 25 spaces adjoining the Erber lot as well as prevent use of the new lot at a time when parking space is at a premium.

Gilewicz said he and some other merchants were also concerned about dust and traffic congestion construction could cause all summer.

Wiesner estimated it would cost between $2,000 and $3,000 to take out sand, add gravel and brine the lot for use in the summer.

Railroad ties, he said, could be used to mark off the parking spaces and provide the city with the additional 60 spaces for the summer.

Twice-monthly mortgage payment plan unveiled

Charlevoix County State Bank has developed a bi-weekly mortgage payment system which allows the purchaser of a home to significantly reduce the amount of interest paid, as well as decrease the mortgage term, by paying one-half the regular monthly payment every 14 days.

Gordon Wellman, president and chief executive officer, said the mortgage called LIFT (Less Interest, Faster Term) could have a dramatic impact on mortgage lending in Charlevoix, Emmet and Antrim counties.

The banking industry has been a structured institution for the individual consumer for centuries, Wellman said, with monthly payment plans for mortgages, installment loans, credit cards and even utility bills the accepted standard.

"These traditional payment methods do not necessarily benefit the consumer and can be altered as we have elected to do," said Wellman. "There is a large convenience factor built into this method as the majority of people are paid bi-weekly. The LIFT mortgage helps couples to budget their income more evenly and gain a valued asset more quickly."

The bi-weekly mortgage plan follows a philosophy set forth by the bank's board of directors Wellman said, stressing innovative approaches to consumer banking and improvement of the financial position of investors.

"The bi-weekly mortgage can easily be explained in this way," said Wellman. "Based on a $50,000 mortgage at a 10 percent interest rate, a conventional 30-year mortgage would carry a $438.70 per month payment with $107,954.83 paid in interest at the end of the 30-year term.

"By using the bi-weekly payment method, a $50,000 mortgage with a 10 percent annual percentage rate can be paid for in approximately 21 years rather than the conventional 30-year term. A $219.39 payment (which is one-half the conventional monthly payment) paid every 14 days for approximately 21 years would mean $69,558.25 paid in interest, a savings of $38,396.58.

"Interest is calculated on the principal balance; therefore, increasing the frequency of payment reduces the principal at a faster rate and interest paid is substantially less."

Another benefit of bi-weekly payment is that equity grows approximately 166 percent faster than with conventional mortgage repayment.

The LIFT program can also be used for commercial and business mortgage loans, Wellman said.

E. Jordan parade dates scheduled

The 1987 Jordan Valley Freedom Festival Parade Committee has set the time and dates for this year's youth parade and grand parade in East Jordan.

The youth parade will be held on Friday, July 3, at 4 p.m. with the theme of Characters Then and Now.

The grand parade will be held on Saturday, July 4, at 4 p.m. The theme is Sesquicentennial Salute.

Any group, business, organization or individual wishing to participate or seeking more information may contact parade chairman Jean Pordee 536-2646 or the East Jordan Area Chamber of Commerce at 536-7351.

4-H members can compete in state events

Charlevoix County 4-H members who are interested in livestock may compete against other 4-H members from all over the state at the 1987 4-H Livestock Expo July 7-10 at Michigan State University.

"Participants can test their skills in showmanship, judging, evaluation contests, and a host of other events," says Jane Regenmorter, Charlevoix County 4-H agent. "Some events offer cash prizes, trips, and scholarships to the winners".

The top 20 4-H members will qualify for trips to the North American Agriculture and Livestock Expo, and the first and second place winners will each receive college scholarships.

While attending the Expo, 4-H members will get a taste of college life by living in dormitories and eating in the dorm cafeterias on the MSU campus.

More information about the Livestock Expo may be obtained from the 4-H office at 582-6232.

Professional photographer to help record Michigan

Terry Salmonson of Charlevoix, owner of the Aartvark Studio and a Certified Photographer, will be one of 30 professional photographers in Michigan participating in a project called "A Sesquicentennial Portrait of Michigan."

As the official representative of this area, Salmonson will spend the 24-hour period of June 1 traveling around the countryside photographing persons and places he considers of photographic interest.

In September, a traveling print show of 15,000 pictures taken by Salmonson and the 29 other photographers will open in Lansing and begin its travels around the state. A multi-media show will also be produced as part of the project.

This project is recognized by the Michigan Sesquicentennial Commission. Salmonson is open to suggestions about interesting photographic subjects.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON INCREASING PROPERTY TAXES

The City Council of the City of Charlevoix will hold a Public Hearing on a proposed increase of 3.4118 mills in the operating tax millage rate to be levied in 1987. The story of the good Samaritan came alive Sunday, May 3, as St. Mary School students performed "SAM... the Story of the Good Samaritan."

"SAM," directed by Jeanie Olach Lignell, is a musical for junior choirs tailored especially to the musical abilities and tastes of kids.

The cast included Jeff Hoffman as Jesus, Jenna McElroy as Martin, Carrie Wakulat as SAM, Steve Kang as the peddler, Marci Borths as the politician, Tiffany Palmer as the doctor, Zachary Pajtas as the gang leader, Jason Psihopaidas as the landlord and John Chase, Trina Holm, Jerrie Lovell, Chris Mailloux, Matthew Shindorf as the gang of thieves.

Instrumental accompaniment was provided by Scott Kelly on drums, Tom Wochrmann on bass and Jeanie Lignell on piano.

Beaver Islander getting inspected, new engines

The Beaver Islander has been taken to Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., for its regular five-year Coast Guard inspection and to have new diesel engines installed.

The Beaver Islander was built in 1962 and has been on the Beaver Island run for 25 years.

The Beaver Island Boat Co. expects the vessel to be back in operation in mid-May.

Major improvements have also been made at the dock facilities on Beaver Island for safety reasons and high water control. A new ramp has been built for safer loading and unloading of passengers, cars and freight.

Dock edges have been raised 15 inches to withstand any increase in the water level and the entire dock surface is expected to be redone this year.

Denny and Eilean Heck ware the hosts of the annual Chamber of Commerce dinner-dance. More then 200 attended the Saturday event at the Belvedere Club Casino.

Tom's Mom's cookie operation separates

by SARA GAY DAMMANN

The familiar Tom's Cafe sign has moved half a block down Bridge Street and its founder has moved to Battle Creek.

Ownership of the restaurant has changed hands and the nationally famous Tom's Mom's Chocolate Chunk cookies are on the launch pad of a franchise network.

The new Tom's Cafe, now owned by Pam and Jim Holmes, is open and offering Tom's Mom's Cookies and other foods from the site of the former soda-fountain and snack shop, Magpies. The location was long the home of Mont's Restaurant.

Tom's Mom's Cookies of Charlevoix, distinct from the cafe, has become a franchise operation of Tom's Mom's Cookies Inc. The cookies will be sold through the cafe and mail order. Charlevoix's franchise owners are Jim Holmes and Jack Uhrick.

Tom Kneeland, creator of the cookie, maintains corporate headquarters in Charlevoix, in the Market Mall, to oversee the development of the franchise operation, which has sold franchises for stores in Palm Beach, Fla., to Paul Lindberg; Mackinac Island and Mackinaw City, to Jim and Pam Holmes; Harbor Springs, to Julie Ellison; and Traverse City to Roberta Seeburger and Craig Ellison. Also pending are franchised stores in Petoskey and Boyne City.

A major Michigan franchise network of Tom's Mom's Cookies is being arranged with East Lansing businessman David Hayhow, who will be opening his first two stores in East Lansing and Saugatuck.

Tom's Mom's Cookies were born in Charlevoix in 1981, in Kneeland's The Yellow Submarine deli. Kneeland, collaborating with baker Ron Fairbanks, developed the oversized cookies using several special ingredients, the most obvious of which were large chunks rather than chips of chocolate.

The cookies were unnamed until the 1982 fall Apple Festival when a customer asked waitress Sarah Price what the cookies were called. Price, knowing Tom's mother Dorothy Kneeland was in the restaurant kitchen turning out apple pies, quipped, "Tom's Mom's, of course." The name stuck.

In 1983, on a whim, Kneeland mailed a batch of the cookies to his aunt Patsy Skidmore, a White House secretary. When he got a thank you note from President Reagan, Kneeland hung it in the restaurant. Local and national media picked up the story, describing the cookies as a threat to famous Oval Office jelly beans.

Kneeland donated cookies to a 12-nation Economic Summit Conference, held in Williamsburg, Va., in May 1983. Subsequently the cookies were featured at two White House congressional barbecues. More national publicity followed.

In 1984 "People" magazine held a chocolate chunk cookie contest, pitting Tom's Mom's against the likes of Mrs. Field's, Famous Amos' and David's. Tom's Mom's pistachio chocolate chunk cookies won the "fancy cookie" division.

In 1986, to develop the franchise operation, Kneeland entered a partnership with Diane Pace, Jack and Jim Uhrick and other stockholders. However, lease problems, Kneeland says, forced the closure of the cafe last year.

This spring, Kneeland arranged a stock purchase plan with Pace, the Uhrick brothers and Kneeland, separating Tom's Cafe of Charlevoix and several individual franchise locations from the franchise company. Thus, the Holmeses and Jack Uhrick took over the Charlevoix franchise, with Pam Holmes purchasing the cafe separately.

Terri D'Angelo, coordinator of Tom's Mom's Cookies Inc. (TMCI), also known as "Corporate Mom," said corporate partners will be: Kneeland, Ed Skidmore of Washington, D.C., Myrtle Chandler of Battle Creek, Carlo and Terri D'Angelo and Steve Kenifeck of Charlevoix."

D'Angelo added that one additional partner has yet to be announced. "All of this will be finalized in two weeks, which is our closing date."

Kneeland, who is working with Hayhow on new franchise stores, said, in a telephone interview from Battle Creek, "I will be traveling for TMCI, opening stores. We see a great potential for the franchise business.

"But, I am personally very sad about leaving Charlevoix."

INFRASTRUCTURE

Rebuilding city's skeleton

by DON DIBLEY

A few times a year, it rains so hard the pressure flips the cover off a storm sewer outlet in front of the Edgewater Inn.

Back when firefighters were battling the Wojan Aluminum blaze, the availability of water from city lines was so low all the water was sucked out of Nanny's Old Place.

Because some sewers on the north side carry both storm runoff and household wastes, heavy rains push raw sewage into the Pine River Channel a half-dozen times a year.

These are some of the reasons the city is embarking on a five-year, $1.6 million program of reconstructing what is called the infrastructure.

That includes storm sewers, sanitary sewers, streets and sidewalks.

"Of the 24 miles of streets in the city, one-third need re-doing, either resurfacing or a complete reconstruction," said Ken Staley, former mayor and chairman of the city needs study committee.

The 15-resident committee was formed in March and completed its work in April. It was the committee's job to evaluate the problems and recommend a course of action to city council.

Many of the problems that need to be remedied are evident to anyone who wanders about town. But many are hidden problems:

– Problems that cause firefighters to carry a map in their truck to tell them where the best hydrants are;

– Problems that caused the city to spend $3,250 last year for chemicals and pumping to treat storm water that flowed into the pumping station;

– Problems that cause sanitary sewer and storm sewer overloads to back up into basements.

The city staff put together a proposed 15-year, $3.9 million plan to put the city framework back in shape. The needs committee then decided a five-year, $1.6 million effort would be more appropriate.

That didn't mean the rest of the program was unwarranted, Staley said.

"We have 10 more years of proposals that have a lot of merit and certainly need looking at," Staley said, but the committee thought the city should not be locked into a long-time project.

Instead, the committee preferred for the council to re-evaluate the city's needs often.

City Manager Mike Wiesner said he will be providing the council with yearly updated five-year plans "so we don't get us in this condition again."

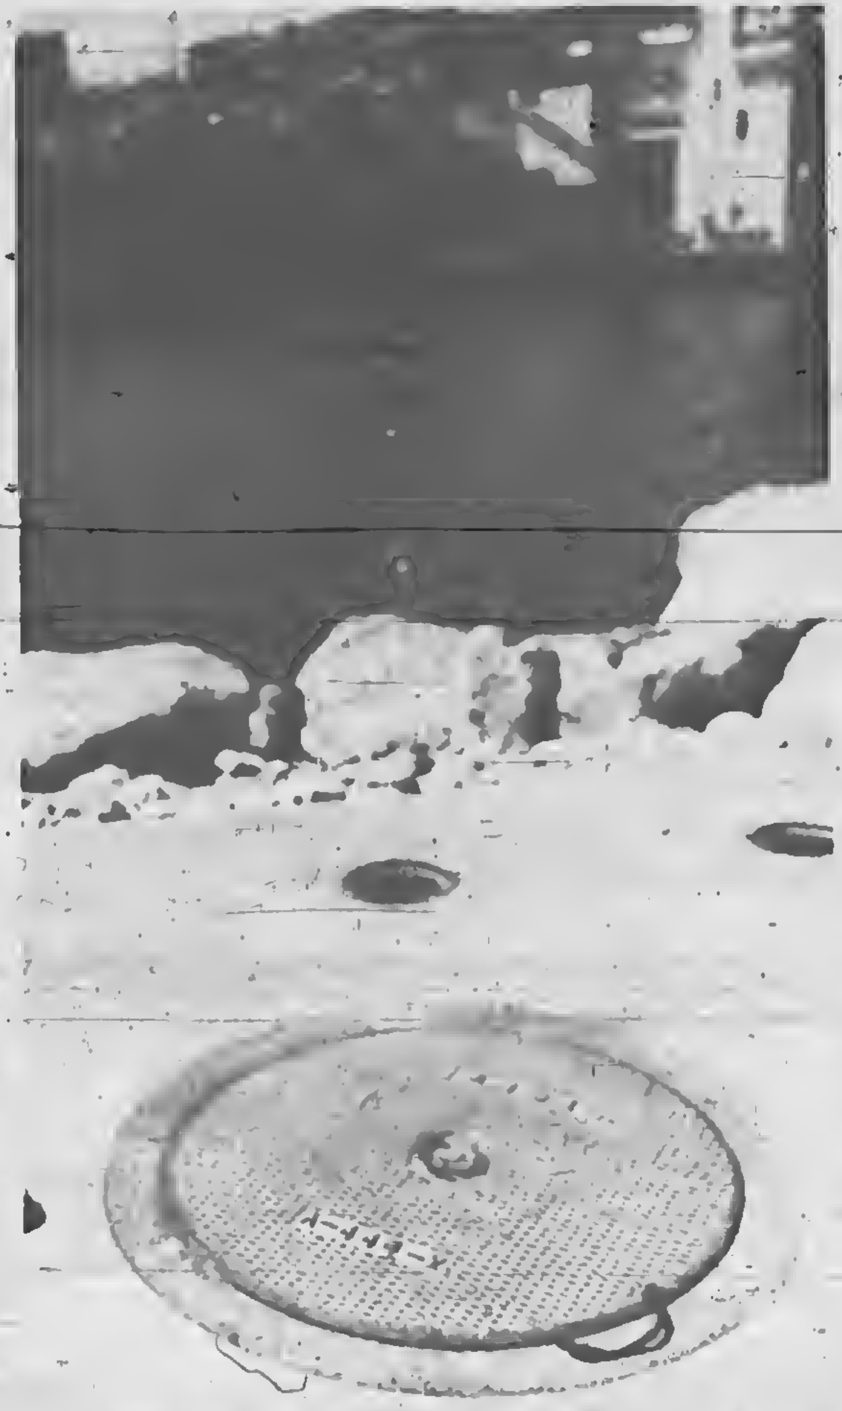
Wiesner said the condition of Charlevoix's roads and sewers is no worse than that of many other towns, noting that Boyne City voters just approved a multi-million dollar bond issue to do much the same type of work Charlevoix is looking at and Petoskey has much infrastructure work to do.

In the past, he said, cities would "build, build, build," and now they must bring their systems up to date.

Charlevoix is also addressing other portions of its "plant," he said, noting that an electrical system update is in the works and a tree planting program is getting under way.

The infrastructure has never really been dealt with on a continuing basis, Staley said, but has been upgraded and repaired on a piecemeal basis.

And, as the city has grown, the on-ground and underground services have become overworked or just worn out.



When rains hit the north side, water rushes toward this splitter box where two eight-inch lines flow into the Pine River Channel. A few times a year, though, the pressure gets so intense the backup of water lifts the cover right off this manhole near the Edgewater Inn.

This is the first time the city has looked at making improvements on a town-wide basis, Staley said, without regard for ward politics.

In the past, he said, care was taken to insure that each of the three wards got one-third of the maintenance or construction work. This did not always insure the greatest needs were addressed, he said.

There will be no public hearing specifically for input on the plan the needs study put together, Wiesner said, although hearings will be held when the council wants to transfer funds from one budget account to another to pay for the work.

The council is in the midst of approving a four-mill tax increase for five years to pay for the improvements.

Because a one-mill storm sewer construction levy is expiring and because of the state Truth-in-Taxation Law and Headlee Amendment the increase would actually be 3.4 mills – raising the city general fund levy to 14.6 mills.

The city charter allows the council to tax property up to 15 mills without a vote of the people.

One mill raises $1 in tax for every $1,000 in state equalized valuation – or roughly $1 for every $2,000 of market value. So, the owner of a property worth $50,000 would pay $85 more in taxes each year of the levy.

A Truth-In-Taxation hearing on raising the tax to pay for the road, sidewalk and sewer work will be held at 7 p.m. Monday, May 18, at city hall.

One of the committee's goals in making its report to council was to guarantee that the increased millage would go specifically for infrastructure repairs and would not become a permanent part of city taxes.

By working with the city auditing firm, Staley said, the committee was satisfied the funds could be earmarked just for the construction work. Any surplus, he said, could go toward the next year's work or could be used to reduce the next year's tax.

Working with Staley on the needs committee were Mayor Ralph McRae, council members Norm Probert, Bob Timms and Shirley Roloff, and residents Joan Hoffman, Gerald Staublin, Tom Sikavitsa, Tony Klieber, Roberta Whiticy, Vince Olach, I. Lee Moerland, Rhonda Siwarga, John Friedly and Alvin Ranger.

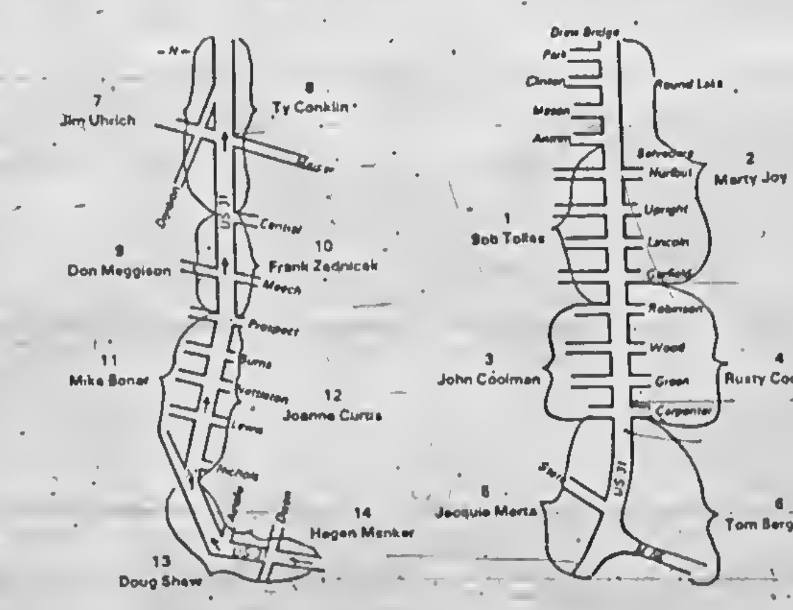
Operation Petunia — 6th year promises to be best yet



It's petunia planting time again – so grab a shovel and a friend and head for U.S. 31 at 5 p.m. Thursday, May 21.

But get there early. Keep Charlevoix Beautiful and its army of planters have the operation down to a science.

Back in 1982, during the first Operation Petunia, it took about three hours for 500 workers to plant 30,000 flowers.

Last year, 800 volunteers put nearly 50,000 petunias in the ground in just over an hour.

The planting will follow the same format again this year, with volunteers reporting to block captains at a site near their home.

Cissy Bickersteth is again coordinating the work of the planters and the block captains.

As in the past, there will be Big Mac certificates given to the largest family of workers, the oldest worker, the planter traveling the farthest distance and the first middle school student to arrive.

Following the planting there will be a picnic in East Park for all who participate. Don and Joann Dannecker of Mayfair again will be co-chairmen of the picnic.

Jasper and His Tag-Alongs will provide the entertainment as persons with tickets validated by block captains will be entitled to a hot dog dinner with ice cream and a Tom's Mom's chocolate chip cookie.

Oleson's Food Store is providing the hot dogs and rolls for the picnic, which will be held rain or shine.

Participating for the third year will be Charlevoix High School honor students who will be putting in petunias under the direction of block captain Marty Joy. They will be planting from Garfield north to downtown and in front of the high school.

There will be tours of the above decks of the Welcome, and the Mustang convertible prize of the annual fundraiser will be on display. Tickets will be available in East Park.

Coast Guard wives will have silent auction items on display in a tent for final bidding ending at 7:30 p.m.

The fish pond, chamber office grounds and East Park buckets are being planted a week early this year, so they will be ready for the Lake Charlevoix Area Trout Tournament this weekend.

Tom Bergmann and Jesse King prepare East Park for an early petunia planting. Jane Sooy and Petsy Ranger will plant the area on Thursday so it will be ready for the trout tournament.

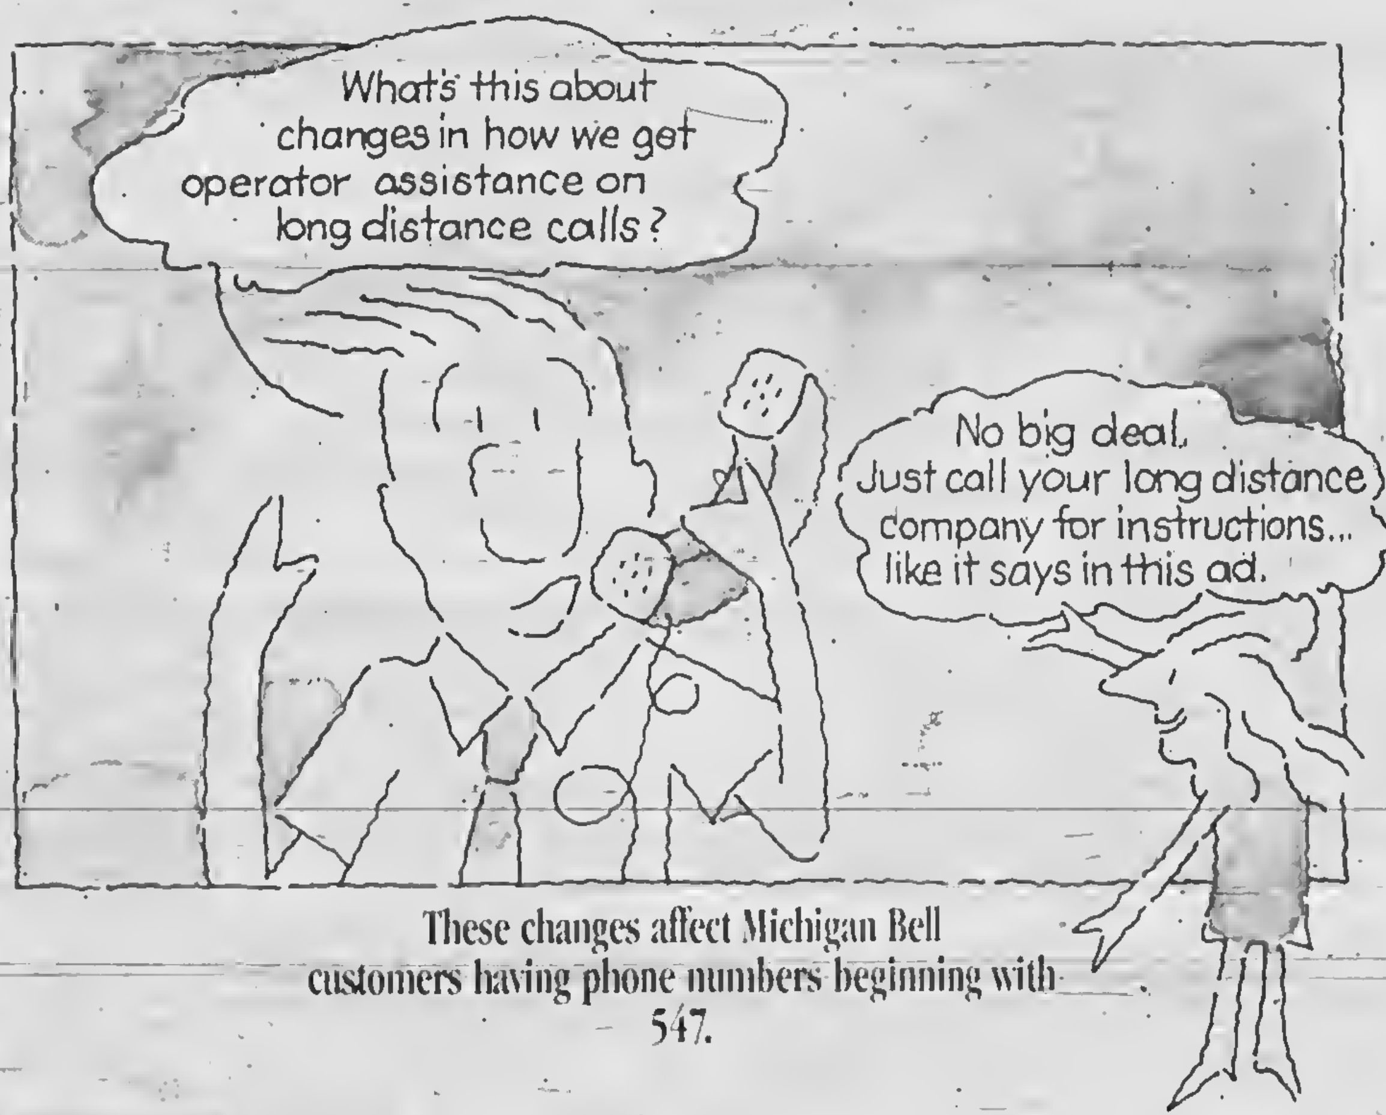
Charlevoix Yesterday

This group of native American young people from Charlevoix County are shown upon their return in 1896 from the Carlisle Indian Institute in Pennsylvania. Jay Oliver, who furnished the picture, explained that in return for lands taken over by the federal government, the government promised to educate native American children. These children spent five straight years at Carlisle without returning home for vacations or holidays. Standing, left to right, are Anna Boek, Isabella Oliver (Jay's mother) and James Smoke. Seated are Martha Sands and Susan Agoseh. They all lived in Hayes Township, in the Bay Shore-Susan Lake area.

Changes are being made in the way long distance users in your area place some operator-handled calls.



What's this about changes in how we get operator assistance on long distance calls?
No big deal. Just call your long distance company for instructions... like it says in this ad.

These changes affect Michigan Bell customers having phone numbers beginning with 547.

This is an informational message about your phone service from Mike Reid, your Michigan Bell Corporate Affairs Manager.

"These telephone service changes concern only operator-handled long distance calls outside your Michigan Bell long distance calling area. They apply to collect, credit card, person-to-person calls, calls billed to a third number, and requests for assistance. Some customers will need to contact their long distance companies for new instructions on how to place such calls. To find out if and how the service changes may affect your service, we ask you to read the following explanation."

An explanation of the changes in your operator-assistance service for calls outside your Michigan Bell long distance calling area (interLATA calls).

How operator-assisted calls were placed before. If you wanted operator assistance to place a long distance call, you dialed "0," or "0" plus the area code (if required), and the phone number you wanted and an operator put the call through for you.

How these calls are placed now. If the long distance service on the phone you are using is provided by a company that offers operator services and you want operator assistance to place a call, you dial "0," plus the area code (if required), and the phone number and an operator will assist you. To reach the long distance operator for additional assistance, you must dial "00." (Important: If you dial "0" without the phone number, you will get a Michigan Bell operator who can place calls within your Michigan Bell area only.)

If the long distance service on the phone you're using is provided by a long distance company that does not offer operator services, you must contact that long distance company to get instructions on how to place operator-assisted long distance calls.

Please note: If you dial "0," plus the area code, and the number, you may get a recording or no response. Further, if you dial "0" without the number, you will get a Michigan Bell operator who will refer you to your long distance company for further instructions.

If you are calling from a pay phone, continue to use the instructions posted on the phone.

Again, you should contact your long distance company for new instructions on how to place operator-handled long distance calls outside your Michigan Bell calling area. If you have any other questions about the changes, please call Michigan Bell's Let's Talk Center. The toll-free number is 1 800 555-5000.

Please watch your Michigan Bell bill inserts for further information.

Lakeshore residents get respite

by PEG OHLE

Last winter's milder-than-usual weather and lighter-than-usual precipitation apparently were better news than many people realized.

The weather's vagaries are at least partly responsible for the lower lake levels this spring, according to the Army Corps of Engineers and other professional lake-watchers.

The Charlevoix Coast Guard Station reports that the level of Lake Michigan (and Lake Charlevoix) is down 1.6 feet from last October. However, some of this change is seasonal, and, according to the Corps of Engineers, Lake Michigan is "expected to remain nearly two feet above mean levels for at least another six months."

But again, on the positive side, Charlevoix County Extension Agent Rod Cortright reports that light rainfall this spring, added to the light snowfall of the winter months, accounts for precipitation since the first of the year being down 30 percent. "The weather pattern so far this year has been good for the lake levels," he said.

John Campbell of Site Planning Development, who has repaired much of the shoreline damage along Lakes Michigan and Charlevoix, says that while he is still getting inquires from property owners about having their shorelines repaired, some for whom he did work last year are asking that the protective barriers be removed because the water is lower.

Site Planning repaired the erosion damage and erected a barrier around the base of The Lakehouse condominium unit just north of the Pine River Channel on Lake Michigan. Last year about this time, the Courier ran a picture of the erosion around The Lakehouse. That picture is repeated this week, along with one taken a few days ago, showing the lower water level and the work done by Site Planning.

Campbell explained that he designed the new barrier to handle a water level of 582.85 feet (above any previously reported level). He built a steel bulkhead barrier to retain the soil, added 1,000 to 1,500 large rocks to dissipate the wave energy, and finally constructed a plateau. "We've gotten very little wave action," Campbell says of his success with the project.

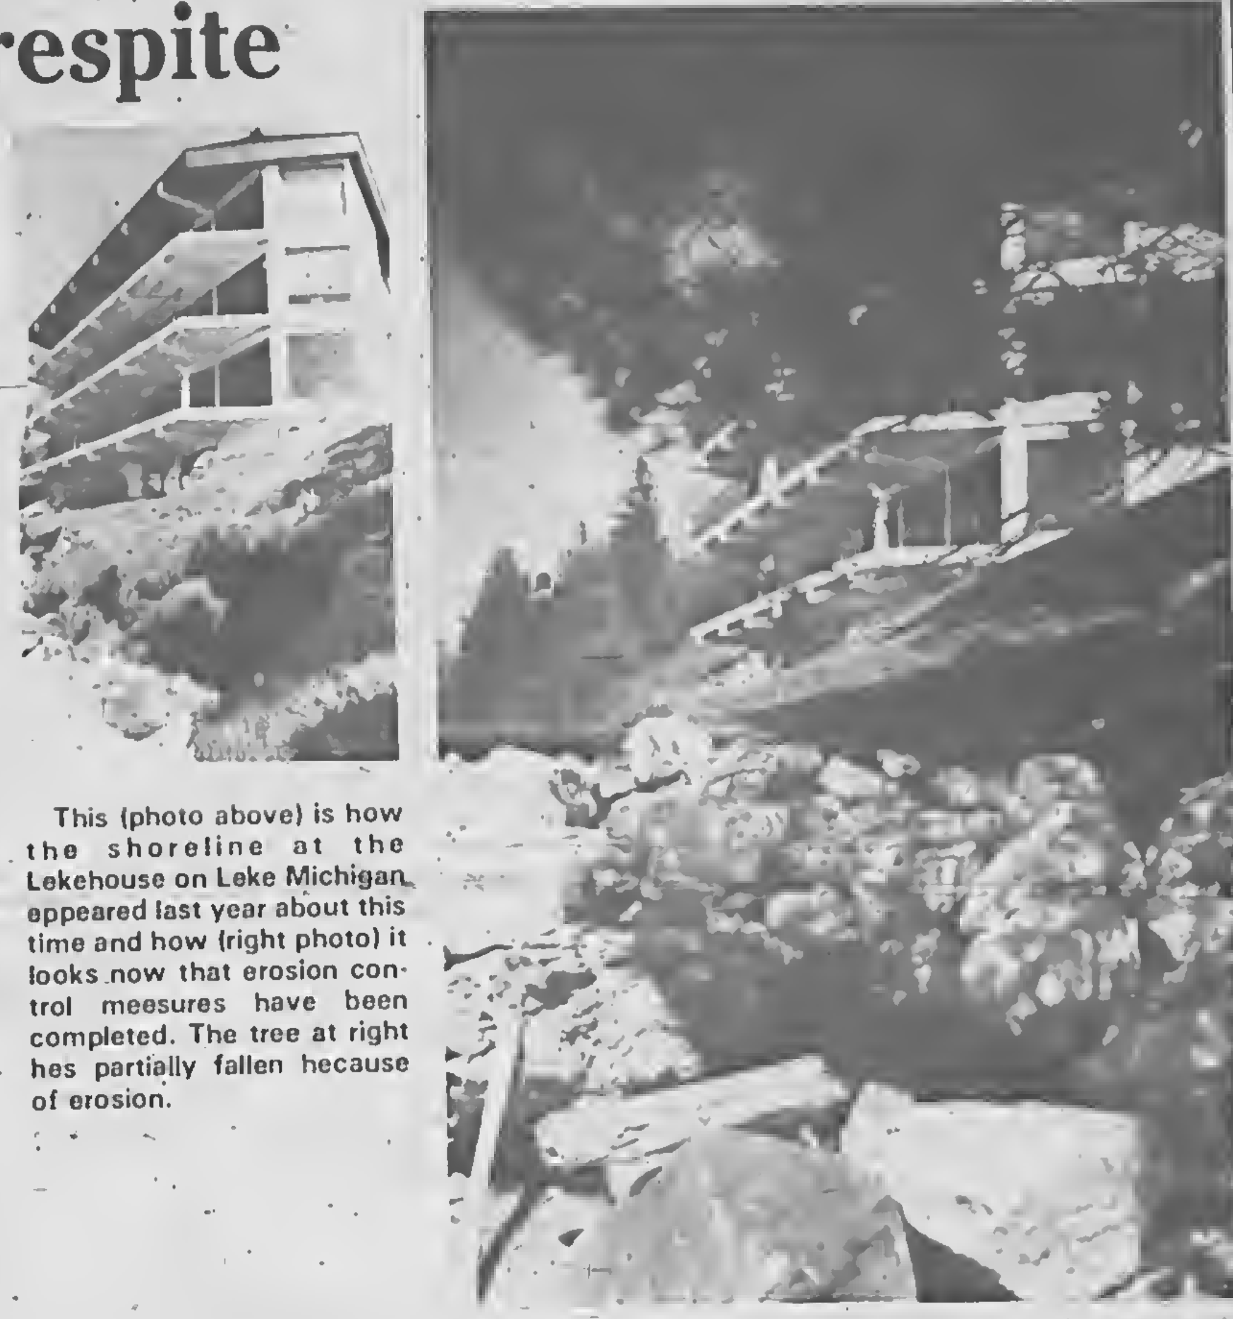
So far, so good, for the short range. However, many professionals predict that the present high water levels are just the forerunners of higher levels in years to come. One of these is Curtis Larsen of the U. S. Geological Survey.

Larsen discovered that 500 years ago Lake Michigan was four feet higher than it is today. That was during the years 1400 to 1600, known to geologists as the last "wet period." The past 200 years have been relatively dry. These wet and dry periods have been occurring periodically throughout history, Larsen and other scientists have found.

Lake Michigan rose about seven feet above its current level 950 to 700 years ago, with other high water periods occurring 1,500 and 2,200 years ago. Weatherwise, the periods of high lake levels have been cool, wet periods.

Dr. Frank Quinn, head of the Great Lakes Hydrology Group of Great Lakes Environmental Research Laboratory in Ann Arbor, recently spoke to a group of Great Lakes congressmen who wondered what could be done to keep the lakes from rising higher. He could not tell them anything encouraging. "Climate is the determining factor of lake levels, and because of the large size of the Great Lakes system, it responds to man-induced changes (such as opening and closing locks) slowly."

To illustrate his point, Quinn added that a change will take three to three and a half years to achieve 50 percent of its desired effect, and 12 to 15 years to achieve 100 percent of the desired effect ... that by the time 50 to 80 percent of the desired effect is achieved, the lake levels condition would probably have changed.



This (photo above) is how the shoreline at the Lakehouse on Lake Michigan appeared last year about this time and how (right photo) it looks now that erosion control measures have been completed. The tree at right has partially fallen because of erosion.

New state police chief has local ties

Ritchie T. Davis, a former Charlevoix resident who has maintained many local ties throughout his 24 years with the Michigan State Police, last week was named director of the state law enforcement agency.

Among the local residents who were excited about the appointment were Dick and Bev Smith who had seen Davis and his wife less than a month ago when they were in Lansing for the state band festival.

Bev Smith said at that time they knew he was a candidate for director.

She said her husband and Davis had been friends since they were kids and lived across the street from each other on Sheridan.

"The (Davis) family has had a mobile home on Mercer Boulevard for years and Ritchie and his wife often spend time here," she said. "His mother (Mrs. R.T. Davis, who now lives in Haslett) and his sister, Pasty (Llewellyn) of the Detroit area also come on occasion.

"We've been friends through the years. It's a friendship that just goes on."

Davis' father was associated with the Charlevoix Road Commission for many years before leaving the area for Tecumseh after their son finished sixth grade in Charlevoix in 1948. The family maintained a home on M-66 for a number of years after leaving northern Michigan.

Davis' appointment was made by Gov. James Blanchard. He succeeds Gerald Hough who recently retired.

Davis has been a lieutenant colonel and deputy director in charge of the department's 360-member Technical Services Bureau since 1981.

Prior to joining the State Police, he was a Michigan State University Department of Public Safety patrolman and an Ann Arbor Police Department patrolman.

Davis holds a master's degree in public administration from Western Michigan University, a bachelor of science degree in criminal and social science from Michgian State University and is a graduate of the FBI National Academy in Quanitico, Va.

In 1976, Davis was awarded the Governor's Distinguished Public Employee Award and a Director's Commendation for overall excellence.

City moves ahead quickly with parking lot plans

The city will attempt to have a new 60-space paved parking lot ready for the height of the tourist season.

Meeting with the Downtown Development Authority last Wednesday, city council voted to go ahead with plans to convert the Erber Building site into a paved lot by July 1.

City Manager Mike Wiesner and some business operators had earlier raised concerns that the project might not be finished in time.

If that were to happen, Wiesner said, it is possible the city would lose the use of an adjacent 25 spaces to construction equipment.

The alternative, he had said, would be to gravel and brine the lot for this summer, at a cost of $2,500 to $3,500, and complete the project in the fall.

Wiesner is expediting the bidding procedure by sending out information to some contractors who may be interested, and the city is advertising in the normal way through newspapers.

Deadline for bids is next Monday, May 18.

The lot will have storm sewers, curbs and gutters as well as meter and floral islands.

New shops popping up along Bridge Street

EDITH GILBERT

New shops are popping up like crocuses on Bridge Street. Topper Carey gave me a tour of the new "Cotton Harbor" shop he, wife Jacqueline, brother Randy and his wife, Penny are opening May 14.

They are carrying an exciting new line of resort wear, Topsider Clothing, all made of 100 pecent cotton fabric. It's a spin-off from the Topsider line of shoes that the Careys have carried forever in their boot shop down the street. Barbara Steele is the manager.

The Careys have done a super job in renovating this old building. How old? Well, Bruce Henley, retired postal clerk, was born upstairs 74 years ago. The storefront overlooking Round Lake is of course, painted yacht blue and white. Be sure to notice the original maple floor, inside after you've checked out the sweaters, pants, shorts, etc. for men and women.

Want to hear about the new Charlevoix Candy Co. next to Burnsides? It's owned by Dawn Carlson, who has the Fishtown Fudge store in Leland. But that's not all...her mother, Virginia Hibbard is managing the store this summer and her husband has run the Ironton Ferry for three years.

The most popular candies are butter toffee for adults and Jelly Bellies for children.

It's been a long time since I was in the Topside bar for one of their delicious hamburgers. Last week, the spirit moved me to have a nice cold glass of beer with my hamburger deluxe. I'm happy to report that the owners, Richard and Yolanda Reinhart (they've only been there a year and a half) served us a hamburger that was just as good as ever. My Michigan Avenue neighbor, Andy Essenburg, was there holding forth and his comic line of patter is as good as ever too.

The next time you go into the Weathervane Restaurant, notice the authentic Argo flour mill bags that Carol Hisey had framed. They're hanging all around the restaurant walls. Most people would assume the pictures are reproductions, but the inside scoop is that Bill Martin found about 20 assorted flour mill bags in perfect condition underneath the stairway. They were tucked behind a hole in the wall and discovered during remodelling.

There are still a number of people around town who remember the Argo Mill that used to be at the site of the present Weathervane Restaurant. John Hisey, history buff, is planning to donate some of these originals to the Charlevoix Historical Society. That's the good new's...

People everywhere in town are talking about the Edgewater Inn that's going up next to the bridge. Just wait until they finish Phase III. The height of the two-story building with a pitched roof rising along the sidewalk will be 24 feet and it will step up to 26 feet and then 28 feet as the building slopes done the hill – words fail me!

Travel tip: Most people tend to drive downstate instead of flying out of Traverse City. I've known people who've been routed from Traverse City via Milwaukee and Atlanta to Florida, for example. Flights are late, luggage is lost, planes are tiny and cramped, and the schedules are inconvenient.

That's why its news to report that I had a perfect flight to Florida via the Tri-City Airport (Saginaw, Midland, Bay City). I left Charlevoix at a civilized hour – 9:30 a.m. – and drove leisurely through some very pretty scenery and arrived at 1 p.m. at an attractive, small, clean airport, with easy parking. There are no stairs or ramps. Everything is on one level. No problem rolling my suitcase from the car to the check-in counter. There's a spacious cafeteria close to the check-in counter. My DC-3 plane was on time and in 20 minutes we landed in Detroit.

Fortunately the gates were close together and I left for Palm Beach without any problems, arriving at 7 p.m. The same good luck held on the return trip. I landed at Tri-City Airport at 5 o'clock, ate in the cafeteria and drove home, arriving in Charlevoix before dark, a little after 9 o'clock.

The next time you plan to fly somewhere, check it out. You might enjoy traveling this pleasant way.

City of 2 histories

Clockwise BY BOB CLOCK

Free-lance writer Tom Dammann of Hayes Township likes to keep his facts straight.

That's why he is chuckling over a discrepancy he discovered in the new Ameritech telephone directory for Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

In addition to phone numbers, the new directory includes a wealth of historical data about area communities. On page E of the yellow pages, the phone people wax eloquent about the early days of Charlevoix and how the city was named in memory of Pierre Francois-Xavier de Charlevoix, an early French missionary-explorer.

On page E1, the directory explains how Charlevoix County was organized in 1869 with the same namesake.

But turn to page F and you will learn that "Charlevoix ... means 'City on three lakes' which is an Indian name."

So much for Father Pierre Francois-Xavier, who probably never visited Charlevoix anyway. Historians can place him on Beaver Island, but he probably never set foot on the mainland.

I like to think of him as Northern Michigan's first tourist.

Pass the fudge.

GARY HART, frontrunner for the Democratic nomination in the 1988 presidential campaign until his resignation Friday, is now old news. I, for one, am sorry he has backed out because his candidacy could have shed important light on how much privacy Americans are willing to accord public figures.

Hart, as you know, was tailed by five Miami Herald and Knight-Ridder newsmen who reported to the world at large that Hart may have spent the night of May 1 with a woman not his wife.

Rather than fight, Hart quit, so maybe he wouldn't have made such a red-hot president after all.

I guess I can't blame him for stepping aside, however. Would you want to be president and live under intense public scrutiny the rest of your life?

We don't even let our presidents and ex-presidents run down to the drug store for a pack of chewing gum without a covey of Secret Service men in attendance.

It's an awful way to live.

LOTS OF GOOD news coming out of city hall. The Star Line dinner ship dilemma has been resolved to the benefit of all concerned. The Star of Charlevoix will dock at the municipal pier this summer — and hopefully for many summers to come.

I'll never forget the first time Judy and I rode the Star and enjoyed a delicious dinner while cruising on Lake Charlevoix. Then as the ship re-entered Round Lake, just after dark, the band started playing "Harbor Lights."

Memorable moments don't come much better. I'm sure other dinner cruise participants have packed away similar pleasant memories of their visit to Charlevoix.

Another scrap of good news is that the Clinton Street parking lot, site of the former Erber garage, will be paved before the July 4 weekend.

There had been talk of graveling and brining the lot until merchants and the city worked out an agreement on use of an alley behind affected Bridge Street shops. But those problems apparently have been resolved, because City Manager Mike Wiesner says the lot will be paved before the summer crowds arrive in force.

A good thing, too. That lot is as big, as flat and as dusty as Nebraska.

Beacons of Blessing

A devotional column prepared
by the Charlevoix Ministerial Association

by Pastor Duane Nelson
Church of the Nazarene

Most will be able to recall the Old Testament story of Joshua and the fall of Jericho. It begins with the Lord giving Jericho to the Israelites. He commanded Joshua to take the city. Joshua was to take his armed men and march around the city one time for six days. On the seventh day, they were told to march around seven times and when they heard the long blast of the trumpets all the men were to shout. After they had done all that was commanded, the walls of Jerioho came crashing down, and they marched straight in and took the city (Joshua 5:13-6:27).

There is a message found here for us. We are often surrounded by situations that keep us running in circles. We can't seem to find the peace we seek. We can't find the "promise land." However, when the walls of life are keeping us out, the Lord has promised to break down the walls. His promise has a set of conditions: 1) we need to find our purpose in Christ, 2) we need to work together, and 3) we need to obey God.

Our purpose. As with Joshua in getting to the promise land, we have our own "promise land." Our "promise land" is found when we ask Jesus Christ to forgive us for the sins we have committed. It is a "land" that is filled with peace in knowing we will have an eternal home surrounded by God. Our purpose is fulfilled when we seek Christ and His forgiveness.

Our unity. Once our purpose is fulfilled, we move on to unity with a body of believers. The Israelites would have never been able to overcome their situation if they had not worked together in marching around the wall. The same goes for us. After we've fulfilled our purpose, we need to find a support group of believers (a church) that can work with us to overcome those situations that tear us down. Remember, no man is an island.

Our obedience. Tied in to all of this is our obedience. If Joshua would not have obeyed God, those walls would have never come down. So it goes with us. If we don't obey God's commands, we are not going to get to the "promise land." The Lord puts a condition on His promises, and they are all built on the foundations of obedience.

We may have "walls" in our lives, but the Lord has given us a promise. And all we have to do is to plug into Him and His salvation. We really don't need those walls, do we?

Each year we produce and distribute the Charlevoix Directory. This directory folds out to measure 5½ inches wide by 38 inches long and gives the viewer a synoptic presentation of Charlevoix's services.

It has clever drawings of storefronts on one side and the other side has categorical listings of businesses.

This guide is in the process of being updated for 1987. This year it will be printed on peach colored paper with blue and green ink.

Forty thousand copies will be distributed to the Michigan Travel Bureau, AAA Automobile Clubs (55 locations), West Michigan Tourist Association, Chambers of Commerce and strategic Michigan resorts.

Other good news is that the 1987 price has remained the same as it was in 1986 and 1985 if you are a member of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

You should have already received an invitation to list in this very popular directory. If you haven't and would like to or if you need more information, call the chamber office at 547-2101.

'Invasion of the condominiums' horror story

Letters to the editor:

Dear Editor,

Can't you see it now? Movie cameras, cameramen, directors, actors; all walking around Charlevoix making ready for Stephen King's new film, "Invasion of the Condominiums."

What are the realtors and developers doing? Where is Charlevoix's Ralph Nader? I am but an outsider "reading-in" with the Courier being my guide, and I don't like what I am seeing.

While I was in Charlevoix High School I wasn't too keen on the idea of changing the cheerleading motions to the school song and-or the black graduation announcements of my graduating class of '73 but I dislike even more what is happening to the Charlevoix of '87.

When the condos (as they are so cutely referred to) went up on Petoskey Avenue overlooking Lake Michigan, the people weren't too thrilled. The view was destroyed and property owners were needless-to-say disgusted. Then the Belvedere Avenue condos (Round Lake) started their invasion and once again the population dealt with building vs. scenic beauty.

Now, you have a new addition to Round Lake, in front of the landmark Lodge, and I for one am going nuts! What are you doing? Is the almighty dollar so strong that the citizens of Charlevoix are looking the other way? "Open thou our pockets, and show forth thy profits?"

Come on, gang. I know there are more than a few people upset. You have got to stand up for your lives (if not for the lives of your children) and stop this development. Go to meetings. Get involved. Be proud of one of the nation's most beautiful areas. If you haven't had the opportunity to travel outside of northern Michigan, don't feel deprived. It is indeed "God's Country" and you have to cherish and protect it. You are neither too young nor too old to care and make a difference.

If a rebuttal is deemed necessary, please, as you write, give the readers a bit of credit. Don't use the argument, "with the influx of new people and families to the area, condominium life provides the private, social and economical living of the '80s."

Fine. But don't build at the expense of destroying the scenic and historical beauty of Charlevoix. Stay off of the lakes and scenic strongholds.... and that means the orchards, too!

A reminder: registration and payment must be completed before racing this year so don't wait to pick up the appropriate notice of races and registration at IBS, Gary Gleason's or Dave Strawbridge's office (303 Belvedere).

There will be one last meeting when skippers may turn in forms Monday, May 18, at 7 p.m. at the CYC. Also to be discussed at that time will be the fleet splits based on PHRF ratings, buoy placements and fleet designation flags.

All boats should be represented at this meeting to pick up flags as well as copy of race instruction changes.

The first of the tune-up races saw a greater participation than ever as it seems as though several skippers are really trying to get one leg up on the competition in the early going.

It's good to know that Captain Jack and his fearless band aboard Mint Julip plan to fly their chute again this year and we have to give the early designers award to Norm and Elaine Tolman et al for their royal blue sailing outfits.

It seems as though spectators will be taking a more active role in this year's activities as well as Mr. and Mrs. Billy K who loosed their "dock ropes" even for the early May race to keep tabs on mark roundings and ratings. I would rather see Plastic Fantastic but that's life I guess.

Until next week then, Dr. Dave.

Weddings

Karolyn and William Peebles

Bearss-Peebles

Karolyn Bearss and William Peebles exchanged marriage vows on Saturday afternoon, March 21, at the Harbor Light Chapel in Harbor Springs.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Bearss of Charlevoix, and her bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Peebles of Ellsworth.

The Rev. Bill Mindel officiated at the double-ring rites before 200 guests. For the candlelight service, the altar was adorned with ferns, palms, chrysanthemums, lilies, and blue Hawaiian flowers. Royal blue bows decorated the pews.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of taffeta, styled with Victorian sleeves, seed pearls and lace, chapel-length train, and a flowered veil. Her bouquet was composed of sweetheart roses, ivy, asparagus ferns, and lilies of the valley, with royal blue streamers.

Teresa Holt served her sister as matron of honor, and Jamie Johnston, Anita Peebles and Nona Peebles were bridesmaids.

They wore royal blue tea-length dresses of brocade taffeta, made with short puffled sleeves. Their headpieces were of floral designs, and each carried a single white rose, tipped in royal blue and tied with royal blue streamers.

Amanda Peebles, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl and wore a white satin tea-length dress. Nathan Bearss, nephew of the bride, served as ringbearer.

Brad LaPeer assisted the bridegroom as best man, with Steve Bearss, brother of the bride; Ken Peebles, brother of the bridegroom; and Gerald Powell, serving as groomsmen. Randal Bearss, brother of the bride, and Dan Ritchie were ushers.

Music for the ceremony was furnished by vocalists Neil Britton, Anne Heier and Nick Swanson.

The bride's parents hosted a dinner dance reception at the Holiday Inn in Petoskey following the ceremony. They were assisted by Linda Bearss, sister-in-law of the bride, who served the cake; and Sue Dozeman, cousin of the bride, who served the punch. The bridegroom's parents hosted the rehearsal dinner at Elias Brothers Big Boy in Petoskey.

Following a wedding trip to Canada, a gift of their parents, the newlyweds are at home at 1001 May St., Charlevoix. The bride is employed by Charlevoix County State Bank and the bridegroom works for Circuit Controls. (Photography by Philip Holt)

Stubborn Beaver Island fire doused

A fire of unknown origin destroyed 40 to 50 acres of state-owned forest land on Beaver Island over the weekend.

The fire was near Hannigan Road in Peaine Township about six miles south and west of St. James.

Fire Chief Tim McDonough said island residents were unaware of the fire, which had been burning for some time before it was sighted Friday by the crew of the South Shore which was returning to the island from a second trip to Charlevoix.

"If they (the crew) hadn't seen the glow in the sky and reported it as soon as they docked, I don't know what might have happened," McDonough said.

McDonough said his 15-member volunteer fire department rushed to the scene to find the fire being whipped by winds up to 40 mph burning everything in its path.

"Everything is so dry because of the mild winter and lack of rain that it was spreading rapidly," McDonough said. "Luckily, there were no homes in its path and it was located in a swampy area."

Men, high school boys and some women fought the blaze until it was brought under control just before day-break Saturday. However, with sparks igniting fires in all directions, the workers remained in the field until about 11 p.m. Saturday.

The ares that burned is in the west central section of the island. The forest has stands of maple, oak, beech and other trees and is being harvested.

"Everyone who could turned out. There were as many as 50 working in the woods," the chief said. "Buddy Martin brought his tractor, John Gillespie loaned equipment. It was a cooperative effort by everyone. The women brought food, hot coffee, cold drinks. Everyone pitched in. They're a great crew."

"We're mighty grateful, too, to the crew of the South Shore. I don't know what might have happened if it hadn't been for them," he said.

Kevin McDonough was the skipper and Dan Gillespie of Charlevoix, Mike Green and Kitty McNamara, who was giving the crew a hand after teaching all day, were aboard, McDonough said.

The Charlevoix High School performing arts department will present a dinner-theater production at the high school cafeteria et 6:30 p.m. Seturday, May 16. The theme is "Literature in Music," featuring scenes from such musicals as "Cats" and "Big River." Betsy Haggard, Jeff Skeel and Valerie Barnes rehearse a scene from "Cats."

Art show features kids' work

The annual art show featuring multi-media art projects from students in kindergarten through 12th grades will be held at Charlevoix Elementry School from 7 until 9 p.m. Thursday, May 14, and from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. daily on May 15, 18 and 19.

900-foot gill net found in lake

Illegal gill nets were removed from Lake Charlevoix Friday by the Department of Natural Resources after being reported by a local fisherman said Roger Bush, conservation officer.

Bush said three nets totalling 900 feet were tied together about 200 yards off shore a mile east of Hemingway Point.

The nets contained more than 200 rotting fish that included lake trout, small mouth bass, northern pike, brown trout and lawyers. Two live lake trout were also found, Bush said, which showed the nets remained a menace to the fishery.

The fisherman discovered the nets when his fishing gear became entangled in them while he was trolling.

Bob Russell was the winner of a drawing sponsored by the Cherlevoix Rod end Gun Club. He is presented first prize, two Big Jon downriggers, by Mark Simmons. Prizes were donated by Ace Herdware, Edward's IGA, Village Inn Pizza, Central Drugs and Advance Tackle.

Middle schoolers dedicate planting to dead classmate

by FRAN MARTIN

Sixth grade students planted more than 50 trees, shrubs and bushes at Charlevoix Middle School Monday as they opened Phase II of their beautification program.

The students dedicated Monday's project to Lisa Dixon, an eighth grade honor student until her untimely death on March 2.

Students in the sixth grade carried on the plantings after learning all the basics of the process from members of the Charlevoix Garden Club who had volunteered to teach the students prior to the plantings.

Anna Belle Webb, Joan Curtis, Lois Lewis, Inga Ledahl, Jolynn Hall, Marie Slone, Jennie Woods and Edith Close of the garden club assisted the students.

Dennis VanGuilder, principal, and Allen Dhaseleer, custodian, supervised the project and assisted with the planting.

In Phase I of the project, financed by a fund-raising campaign conducted by the middle school students, work was more or less confined to the front of the school on Grant Street.

Phase II was confined, in part, to the Mason Street area of the school, the portables and to the north and east area around the school, VanGuilder said.

"We will continue with Phase III in 1988, but it will not require as much as the first two," VanGuilder said. This year, he said, approximately $1,100 in trees, bushes and shrubs were planted.

Major investments were two Crimson King maple trees, a blue spruce tree and others including three varieties of flowering crab trees, Japanese maple, pyramid and global arbor vitae, golden vicary privet, forsythia, dwarf burning bushes, potentilla and rhodendron.

VanGuilder expressed appreciation to those who contributed toward the project in memory of Lisa Dixon and to Pine Hill Nursery of Eastport, Manthei Development Corp. and Jim Hoffman Landscaping of Petoskey for donations and discounts.

He acknowledged work done by Dhaseleer—in preparing for and assisting with the project and to the students for their fund-raising efforts and work.

A Garden Club member instructs middle school students in the proper way to make their plantings.

Eighth graders going to Chicago

Twenty eighth graders will leave Charlevoix Wednesday, May 20, for a four-day visit to Chicago.

Students from the honors program and advanced art class will make the trip, accompanied by Roxie Loding, Geraldine Brady and Tom Sothard.

This is the sixth straight year Charlevoix Middle School has offered this field trip to students. During the year the students conducted fundraising projects such as dances, candy sales raffles and bake sales to raise $225 each.

Students going on this years trip are Allison Boyer, Chris Burge, Scott Campbell, Anabel Dillersberger, Tim Ebenhoe, Ann Hogan, Heather Keller, Angela Levengood, Ansel Merwin and Sharon Muma.

Also: Mark Newman, Mike Ochs, Corey Ostrum, Wade Peterson, Amy Shupert, Tracee Smith, Matt Stargardt, Joshua Strzyzewski, Jeff Warner and Chris Yingling.

Seminar scheduled

A financial planning seminar for parents will be held at Charlevoix Elementary school at 7 p.m. Wednesday, May 20.

The seminar's aim is to help parents plan a sound financial program for their child's educational future.

The program will feature Ronald J. Agnello, certified public accountant, Thomas Bickersteth, comprehensive financial planner, and Louis J. Hollow, president of First State Bank.

Clean sweep: City-wide sand removal slated

"Every place you see dirt, pick it up."

With those words, Mayor Ralph McRae is proclaiming next Monday through Saturday, May 18-23, as Keep Charlevoix Beautiful week.

The impromptu cleanup week is aimed at getting a winter's worth of road sand off driveways, streets and lawns.

Because of the low-snow winter and the low-rain spring, sand is not washing away, city officials say.

If people will sweep dirt into the streets, City Manager Mike Wiesner said, the city sweeper vehicle will remove it.

The sweep-up effort grew out of a plea by Dale Boss at Monday's city council work session that something be done about sand that he says is in some places an inch deep on sidewalks.

The Coast Guard station sits at the far end ofg Round Lake from downtown.

Coast Guard station holds open house

The U.S. Coast Guard Station will hold an open house at its facility off Chicago Avenue Saturday, May 16, in observance of Armed Forces Day.

The open house is schedule from noon until 4 p.m. Crew members will conduct tours.

The station has 20 men assigned to it.

The Coast Guard has been a part of the Charlevoix scene since 1889 when the first station was built at the pierheads on Lake Michigan and manned by a forerunner, the U.S. Surfmen. That organization was replaced by the Coast Guard in 1914.

The present station on the upper channel between Round Lake and Lake Charlevoix was opened in September 1962 to replace an outdated station on the Pine River channel.

The facility is reached by taking Dixon Avenue to Chicago Avenue to the old railroad station yacht club. A right turn there leads about a block to the Coast Guard Station.

County workers get new policy guidelines

by PEG OHLE

Working for Charlevoix County is steady work. No one can remember the last time a worker was laid off.

The 100 or so county employees are working under a revised policy approved by the county board of commissioners.

Among other things, it sets:

– Hours of 9 to 5 with one hour off for lunch and two 15-minute coffee breaks a day.

– Ten and a half days of paid holiday time a year, permitted sick leave for illness, injury or medical appointment, and 20 days of accumulated leave time for child birth.

– Five days a year of paid vacation after one year's employment, 20 days after 10 years of employment, and up to a maximum of 30 days a year of paid vacation.

Except under "unusual or exceptional circumstances," all employees must be residents of Charlevoix County.

When hired, employees must pass a physical examination which covers weight, blood pressure, heart and lung diseases, hernias, eyesight, hearing, depression and anxiety disorders, and some other physical matters.

Full-time Charlevoix County employees receive full family health and dental insurance at no cost to them. They also are covered by state worker's compensation insurance for injuries that occur on the job and by Social Security. For retirement years, they may participate in the Michigan Municipal Employees Retirement System.

When county employees use their personal automobiles on the job, they are reimbursed at the rate of 21 cents a mile. Other reimbursable expenses incurred while performing services for the county include lodging, meals, auto storage and parking, taxi services, bridge and road tolls, telephone calls, conference or meeting registrations and air fares.

County employees are expected to do their part in earning these benefits, with the assumption that "every employee desires to accept the greatest responsibility possible to produce efficient service, and to provide the maximum degree of accountability".

Full-time salaried employees do not receive overtime pay unless approved in advance by the personnel committee of the county board of commissioners and the concurrence of the full county board, upon recommendation of the department head.

If an employee cannot report for work or will be more than 15 minutes late for work, he must notify his office of the reason for the absence or tardiness. Excessive absence or tardiness is dealt with by department heads and the personnel committee.

Charlevoix County employees are not permitted to engage in work outside their county job except under certain specific conditions: There must be no conflict of interest, including use of information only available to county employees; hours of work must not conflict with the county's normal working hours; and the outside position must not impair availability or ability to perform work assigned during the normal county work day.

Employees must not accept "loans, gifts of money or goods, services or other proffered arrangements for personal benefit under any circumstances, either directly or indirectly involving possible influence or appearance of influence on the manner in which the employee performs work, makes decisions, or otherwise discharges the duties of a county office".

For those who have complaints or objections about their working conditions or how they are being treated otherwise, there is a line of appeals beginning with department heads and continuing through the board of commissioners, whose decision is final.

An employee may be dismissed "for cause" by his department head, but a written statement of reasons for the dismissal must be submitted to the employee and the personnel committee prior to the effective date of the action.

Such an employee may appeal the dismissal to the personnel committee by submitting a written request for a hearing and outlining a rebuttal to the department head's statement. If the issue cannot be resolved within the personnel committee, the employee may, within 10 days, request a hearing before the county board. The decision of the county board is final.

Garden club tours nature preserve

The Charlevoix Area Garden Club will tour the Thorn Swift Nature Preserve at 6696 Lower Shore Drive, Harbor Springs, Tuesday, May 19.

Members will gather at the parking lot at Duffy's of Charlevoix at 12:15 p.m. where car groups will be formed. Members are advised to wear walking shoes.

Luncheon will not be a part of the program. Hostesses for afternoon refreshments will be Ann Mikulski and Nancy Porter.

Lake Charlevoix planning panel completing work

by PEG OHLE

The final recommendations of the Lake Charlevoix Management Advisory Committee have been put into print and are ready for dotting the I's and crossing the T's at the committee's final meeting, next Thursday, May 21.

Noting that the quality of the lake water "tends to be very good," the committee recommends that, to keep it that way, water and nearby land activity must be limited as much as possible.

For each lake lot qualifying for use by a single-family dwelling unit, only one seasonal boat dock would be allowed. ("Qualifying" refers to the size of the lot required by the local zoning ordinance).

Boat slips, rack storage of boats, car and car-trailer parking spaces at each existing private, commercial condominium and public marina would remain at their present number or at the number which has been "permitted" for construction when the committee's report is accepted by local units of government.

For all future multi-family development on lake lots, new marinas, marine expansions and other commercial uses, a maximum of one of the following would be allowed for each 100 feet of frontage: One boat slip, one rack storage unit, or one car-trailer space.

The number of car-trailer parking spaces at each public, private or commercial access site would remain at the present number or at the number "permitted" for construction at the time of the adoption of the report.

Projects which propose to exceed these standards would require recommendation and approval of concerned units of government.

The establishment of a system allowing for the transfer of dockage and-or slippage rights between properties is recommended.

The establishment of a Lake Charlevoix Authority having certain duties and responsibilities is recommended. It would be made up of local government authorities and interested users of lake facilities, as well as the general public.

Until such a time as such an authority could be set up, it is recommended that the Charlevoix County Planning Commission assume these functions.

It is stressed that the land surrounding Lake Charlevoix and in its watershed has a major impact on water quality, aesthetics, quality of life and the ultimate economic well-being of the area.

The following recommendations are made for land within 1,000 feet of Lake Charlevoix. In addition, recommendations No. 3, 4a, 5, 6, and 7 would apply to any other lake, river, perennial stream or creek in the Lake Charlevoix watershed:

1. The committee recommends that there be a vertical setback elevation of 587 International Great Lakes Datum for the base of lowest floor of any structure. Also, that the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners revise the Charlevoix County Sanitary Code as needed to reflect the historic data on the water levels of Lake Michigan and subsequently Lake Charlevoix.

2. The committee recommends that the following horizontal setbacks for new development or redevelopment be adopted:

a. Low density – 100 feet from ordinary high water mark.

b. Moderate density – 150 feet from ordinary high water mark.

c. High density – 200 feet from ordinary high water mark.

Low density is defined as a parcel of property having a maximum of one dwelling unit per 100 feet of frontage on a lake, river, perennial stream, or creek in the Lake Charlevoix watershed. In the same vein, moderate density is one dwelling unit per 70 feet of frontage, and high density is one dwelling unit for less than 70 feet of frontage.

3. Greenbelts (shoreline protection strips) of a minimum depth of 50 feet are recommended. They should consist of undisturbed natural vegetation and no maintained lawn would be allowed between the greenbelt and the water's edge.

A 10-foot wide path would be allowed through the greenbelt for every lot less than 200 feet in width at the waterfront that is in compliance with the zoning in effect for that parcel of property. For every additional 100 feet of lake frontage, an additional 10-foot path would be allowed. Paths would have to be at least 50 feet apart.

4. Location and density of future development would be based on a number of factors, the most important being the ability of the soils to handle such development.

a. Standards for development are recommended, based on soil types and slopes. Loamy and sandy soils would require construction of storm water retention basins designed to handle the runoff from developed areas.

b. A parcel of property having frontage on a lake, river, perennial stream, or creek in the Lake Charlevoix watershed developed or to be developed for multi-family residential purposes should have a miniumum width of 500 continuous feet at the water's edge. Density of development would be based on the criteria outlined in a. above.

c. A parcel of property must meet the following frontage requirement: 100 feet of frontage for the first dwelling unit and 50 feet of frontage for each additional dwelling unit having access at that site.

d. For every additional 50 feet of wetland water frontage purchased on a lake, river, creek or perennial stream within the Lake Charlevoix watershed, one additional living unit may be built on a site suitable for accommodating such development and meeting the criteria outlined in sections a. and b. above. Such development must be on the same lake, river, creek or perennial stream.

5. Development should only take place on those portions of existing parcels of property which are not classified as wetlands. (Wetlands are carefully defined.)

6. Future property splits should not be made in such a manner so as to create lots for development purposes that have no upland areas suitable for development.

7. It is recommended that land that cannot be developed be enrolled under the Farmland and Open Space Preservation Act; that the land be offered to a government entity or conservation organization for donation or purchase; or, if none of the above options are available, that the land owner go through the permit process to meet all rules and regulations as set forth.

8. Based upon concerns for public health, water quality and future development needs, the committee recommends that community sewer systems be expanded or new systems installed in Boyne City, East Jordan, Charlevoix and Ironton.

9. In keeping with a total view of Lake Charlevoix and its watershed, the committee recommends that a site plan review by the Charlevoix County Planning Commission be performed to examine proposed projects within the Lake Charlevoix watershed.

10. The committee recommends that all accepted programs, regulations and laws be vigorously administered and enforced.

11. In the interest of the protection of Lake Charlevoix and its watershed, the committee recommends uniformity in zoning throughout Charlevoix County.

The committee's recommendations are recommendations only and are not presented as a code or law.

Following next week's meeting, they will be incorporated into a full report and presented to the county planning commission, then to the county board of commissioners, and finally to the 15 townships and three cities in the county, for their comments and suggestions.

These suggestions will be considered by the Lakes Committee and changes made if the committee decides to make them.

The updated report will be considered the final report and will be presented to each local unit of government with the suggestion that the recommendations be made part of each local zoning ordinance.

Fishing nets millions for area

by Gerald P. Rakoczy
Great Lakes Fisheries Biologist

The Lake Michigan sport fishery in the Charlevoix, Petoskey and Harbor Springs area is worth approximately $2.8 million to the area economy according to a creel survey conducted during 1986 by Michigan Department of Natural Resources personnel.

The objective of the survey, which was conducted from April 15, 1986, through November 15, 1986, was to estimate the kinds and numbers of various sport fishes caught by anglers on Lake Michigan and to estimate fishing pressure.

DNR personnel interviews over 1,600 fishermen at local boat launch ramps, piers and along the Lake Michigan shoreline from Harbor Springs to Charlevoix, including Petoskey.

Survey data indicate that anglers made an estimated 51,227 fishing trips in the Charlevoix Harbor Springs area. Approximately 46 percent of this fishing effort, 23,593 fishing trips, took place in the Charlevoix area.

The economic value figures are calculated based on a recent Michigan State University study of Great Lakes anglers which shows that the average angler spends about $55 per fishing trip.

These figures include equipment expenses, such as monies spent on boats, motors and depth sounders as well as dollars expended on food and lodging.

Sport fishing on Lake Michigan, therefore, may bring in as much as $1.3 million to the economy of the City of Charlevoix. These figures do not include the Lake Charlevoix sport fishery or pleasure boating on area waters.

While fishing Lake Michigan waters, the survey estimates that anglers caught 1,800 rainbow trout, 9,400 lake trout, 14,000 chinook salmon and nearly 45,000 yellow perch.

Over 70 pecent of the salmon catch in the survey area, an estimated 10,000 fish, came from the Charlevoix area.

Also the Charlevoix area had 70 percent of the total lake trout catch. Approximately 6,600 lakers were taken off Charlevoix.

The Petoskey area had the largest share of the rainbow trout catch with nearly 1,300 estimated caught. The Harbor Springs area had the greatest share of the perch catch.

Group fights for waterways

The recently formed Northwest Lakes and Streams group is working on many fronts to improve and protect area fisheries.

The group was started as an outgrowth of talks with the Department of Natural Resources about increasing fish plantings.

Several area fishermen, concerned that the number of trout caught in last year's Lake Charlevoix Area Trout Tournament was low for the hours spent fishing, met with the DNR about possibilities of increasing plantings.

By their second meeting with DNR officials, the group has expanded from seven to 14. DNR officials suggested they may have more clout if they were organized, president Clem Olach said, and that's how Northwest Lakes and Streams began.

Since March, the organization has grown to about 50 members and a pending affiliation with the Northwest Bass Association in East Jordan is expected to increase that number.

Already, the organization has seen results.

Plans for a ramp and a fish cleaning station at Ferry Beach in Charlevoix are moving along, Olach said, and prospects for approval of a federal grant for the city's Ferry Beach facilities look excellent.

The DNR has provided the Northwest Walleye Ponds in Boyne City with 300,000 fry which will be large enough in July to plant in the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix, Walloon Lake and the Intermediate Chain between Ellsworth and Bellaire.

The DNR has doubled the plant of brown trout and the group has requested that spring-spawning Atlantic salmon be planted to make salmon fishing a two-season sport.

After the group spoke with DNR director Gordon Guyer about the lack of monitoring of gill net fish sales to wholesalers, Dlach said, the DNR began monitoring the catches.

One count near Leland, Dlach said, discovered that lake trout accounted for about 70 percent of the catch, even though they are supposed to be incidental catches.

"Our interest is that fishing be to such an extent that our kids and their kids can enjoy it," Dlach said.

That is why, he said, the group is especially interested in controlling gill netting. He said the treaty under which gill netting the Great Lakes is allowed was formed back in the days when the Indians needed to fish to live.

Present-day commercial methods, using diesel tugs and modern equipment, were not dreamed of when the treaty was written, he said.

The group has been writing to U.S. senators seeking to have the treaty nullified.

Northwest Lakes and Streams will work with any sports organization west of I-75 and between Traverse City and the Straits to try to improve fishing, Olach said.

The group is working with the DNR, Dlach said, because "they do work for us."

For information about Northwest Lakes and Streams, people may call Olach at 547-9729, treasurer Bill Tache or secretary Don Swartz in Charlevoix; vice president Pat Mitchell, Chuck Hawley or John Howard in Boyne City; or Dan Miller in East Jordan.

The group meets on the second Monday of each month, with meetings alternating among the three cities. The June meeting will be in Charlevoix, July's in Boyne and August's in East Jordan.

Tournament fishing tips

Want to catch that tournament winning fish? Here's some tips on how to do it.

Favored lures – Stingers, green peanuts, flat fish, cleos, locos, rapalas, j plugs and fire plugs. Cowbells and dodges also are used.

Preserving fish – Be sure and keep your trophy fish in cool water to eliminate loss of valuable weight.

Source of contamination pinpointed

by DON DIBLEY

Thrasos Eftaxiadis is putting the final piece in a puzzle that has had him jigsawing around town for 6 years.

He has pinpointed the source of groundwater contamination – at least narrowed it down to a cluster of three buildings.

Much of Eftaxiadis' time in Charlevoix has left him with little to cheer about. But this trip his work paid off.

"Friday we celebrated," he said Monday.

The source of his smile is a job well done. Or a well job done.

Eftaxiadis is a Department of Natural Resources geologist. He has been in the city on and off since 1981 looking first for the source of one contaminant in groundwater, then of another.

He and his drilling crew this week are wrapping up detective work that has staked out the probable source of perchloroethylene in the groundwater.

Perchloroethylene is the second contaminant found in city water, similar to the first -- trichloroethylene (TCE). The presence of perchloroethylene was discovered during the search for the source of TCE.

The state Department of Natural Resources and federal Environmental Protection Agency determined the TCE contamination began at the middle school. But the perchloroethylene was coming from someplace further from downtown.

With funding that allowed him to move the search further to the southwest than the EPA had allowed him to go before, Eftaxiadis has been able to zero in on the source of the perchlorethylene.

The chemical, also known as tetrachloroethylene, is referred to as PCE or Perc.

With a drilling crew from Williamston, Eftaxiadis has determined that the Perc came from one of three buildings – with one more probable than the others.

The three buildings identified by Eftaxiadis are between Grant and State, one facing Garfield and the other two facing Lincoln.

Eftaxiadis was leaning toward the building on Garfield as the source of the chemical contamination, but was making more drillings to be sure.

The building was built after World War II and was used as a dry cleaners by John Knight until his death in 1954, Fran Martin remembers. It continued as a dry cleaners for awhile after that, Eftaxiadis said – the type of establishment that often used solvents containing PCE or TCE for cleaning or degreasing.

As high school students used the space between the buildings as an after-school shortcut, Eftaxiadis retold a story he heard from a longtime neighborhood resident.

Kids used the pathway as a shortcut when the building housed the dry cleaners, she said, but back then they were careful to avoid two pipes sticking out of the side of the building – pipes that discharged some sort of solvent.

Eftaxiadis wasn't discounting the other two buildings as possible sites – or additional sites – since they both had been used by manufacturing concerns at some point.

Monday he had a hole drilled behind the Garfield building and planned to have one or two drilled in front of the Lincoln buildings.

Earlier drillings on Lincoln had produced unusual results, he said. A well directly in front of the westernmost building was mostly clear of PCE and one next to the second building was clear.

What made this strange, he said, was that a well directly down-plume on Hu[illegible] showed a high concentration of the chemical.

He was conducting soil tests, he said, to see if a layer of clay, perhaps, caused the Perc to move laterally for a distance before flowing with the groundwater.

The hunt for perchloroethylene grew out of efforts to find the source of TCE detected in city drinking water in 1981.

No perchloroethylene was found in the water supply, which has since been replaced by a lake water filtration system that has been operating for a little over a month.

Both chemicals were once widely used as degreasers and cleaning solvents and have been found in groundwater in several Michigan communities.

The PCE plume is narrower and longer than the TCE plume.

Though the grounds of Charlevoix Middle School was determined last year to be the site of the TCE contamination, based on earlier work by Eftaxiadis, no specific tank or barrel or other source has been determined.

660 go fishin' for a good time

The third annual Lake Charlevoix Area Trout Tournament drew a record number of entrants.

With 660 registered anglers, the tournament far surpassed the 1986 total of 450 entrants.

The winner of $3,000 was an 11-pound, 6-ounce, brown trout caught by Kenneth Wojan, which netted him $2,000 first prize and an additional $1,000 for catching it with a Stinger lure.

In second place was Fred Lakso, whose 10-pound, one-ounce, brown trout earned him a $1,000 check. Good for $500 was an eight-pound, eight-ounce, brown caught by William Fockler.

Jeff Novotny's 12-pound, four-ounce, lake trout won that division and $500. He will have his name inscribed on the Rex Blanchard Memorial plaque and will receive a trophy. Richard Bergmann was second and Rob McDermott was third.

In the steelhead division, the $500 first prize was taken by Dennus Hutton and his nine-pound, two-ounce, catch. In second was Carl Cavitch and third was Stuart Smith.

Louis Lamak won $300 with his 16-pound, 14-ounce, salmon. Brian Paters was second and David Lewin third.

Bergmann's The Big won the tournament within a tournament with a total catch of over 66 pounds. His prize was $1,100.

The 1987 Thompson boat and trailer valued at $17,500 were won by Nancy Mikulski.

Jane Sooy got Operation Petunia off to an early start by planting East Park and the Chamber of Commerce grounds.

Petunia planters — time to pick places

Thursday is Petunia Day.

The sixth annual Operation Petunia planting will take place at 5 p.m. along Bridge Street from the northern city limit to M-66.

To become one of the expected 800 volunteers who will plant 50,000 flowers in about an hour, check in with a block captain.

The block captains will be wearing blue petunia sweatshirts designed by Judy Mabee of The Clothing Company.

The planting will be followed by a picnic in East Park for those who participate in the event. Tickets for the picnic will be validated by block captains.

One late change in the festivities is that the silent auction is going "live" and will be held as a regular auction in the tent in the park at 6:30 p.m.

Sealed bids made as part of the silent auction will be opened and entered in the bidding, Bruce MacArthur of Keep Charlevoix Beautiful said.

Crews have been preparing the petunia beds along both sides of Bridge Street, so volunteers on Thursday will just have to do the planting.

Rod Cortright from the Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service inspected the beds and Tom Wieland provided fertilizer and spreading equipment from his dairy farm.

Wieland spread the fertilizer the entire length of the planting bed with traffic-control assistance from the city police and fire departments.

Some advance planting was done in East Park and in front of the Chamber of Commerce office last week by Jane Sooy and Jesse King so the park area would be brightened for the trout tournament.

Coordinating the work of the planters and block captains is Cissy Bickertsteth.

Block captains on the east side of Bridge Street south of downtown are Marty Joy from Round Lake to Garfield, Rusty Coolman from Garfield to Carpenter and Tom Bergmann from Carpenter to Captain's Corner.

On the west side are Bob Tollas from Antrim to Robinson, John Coolman from Robinson to Carpenter and Jacquie Merta from Carpenter to the airport.

On the east side north of the bridge, block captains are Hagen Manker from the bridge to Nicholls, Joanne Curtis from Nicholls to Prospect, Frank Zednicek from Prospect to Central and Ty Conklin from Central to the city limits.

On the west side are Doug Shaw from the bridge to Michigan, Mike Bonar from Michigan to Prospect, Don Meggison from Prospect to Central and Jim Uhrich from Central to the city limits.

Don and Joann Dannecker of Mayfair are cochairmen of the picnic, which will feature music by Jasper and His Tag-Alongs and a dinner of hot dogs, ice cream and Tom's Mom's

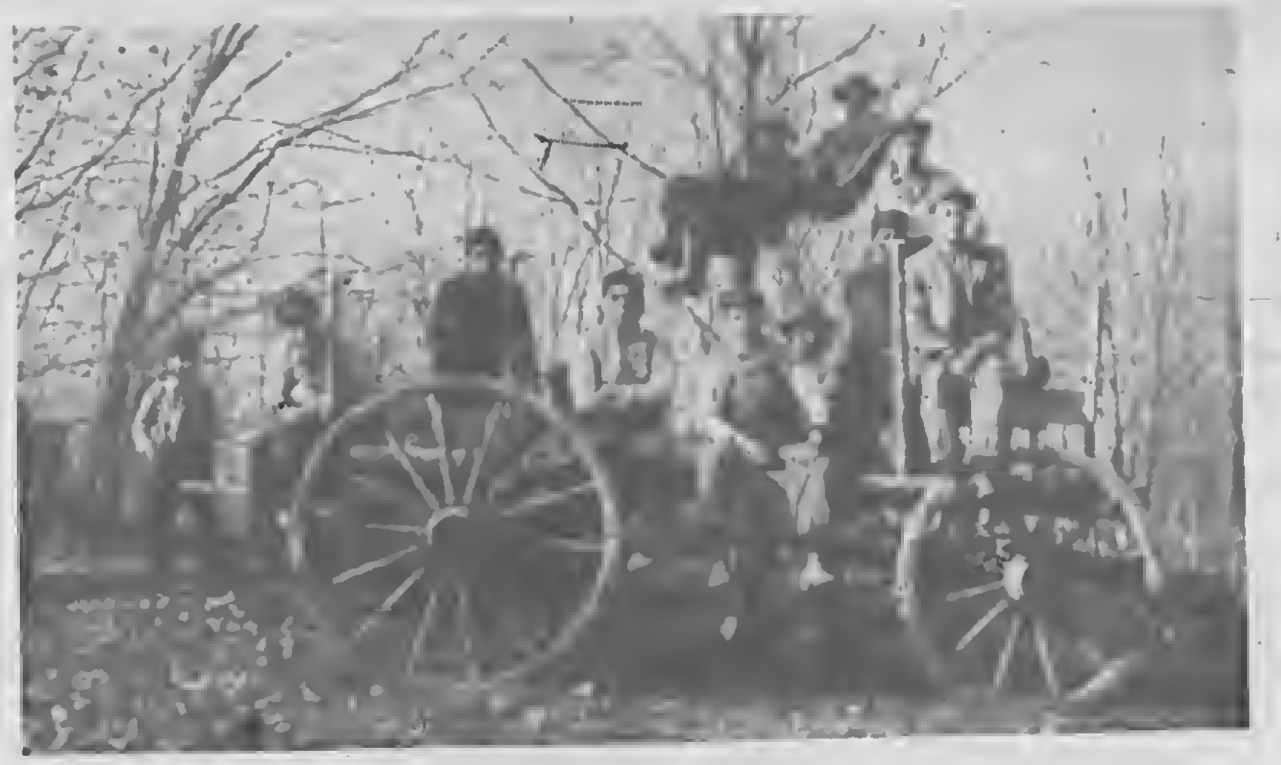
Art scholarship to be awarded

Once again this year, the Waterfront Art Fair committee is looking for a student to award a college scholarship to.

Applications may be obtained from Mary Ann Chew at 13151 Beechwoods or by calling her at 547-4157. The winner will be determined by the end of the month.

The recipient could be a high school senior or a present college student. The committee tends to choose a student who will attend an art school or a college with a strong art department, Chew said.



Charlevoix Yesterday

Back in 1912, this group of Charlevoix area boys found an old wagon an interesting place to "hang out," as this picture from Jay Oliver shows. The Courier is running short of "Charlevoix Yesterday" photos and asks anyone with old pictures to share to call or write. They will be well taken care of and promptly returned.

Memorial Day activities include annual parade, patriotic ceremonies

Retired Coast Guard commander Warren J. Shadko, a former Charlevoix resident now living in Memphis, Tenn., will deliver the Memorial Day address at Brookside Cemetery.

The Monday, May 25, ceremony is sponsored by the Leslie T. Shapton Post No. 226 of the American Legion and Charlevoix Post No. 1153 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Chicago Club tax assessment dispute settlement OK'd

A dispute over tax assessments of the Chicago Club association for the past six years has been resolved, but future problems may still exist.

The Charlevoix Schools board of education and Charlevoix city council both approved a settlement with the club at Monday meetings, but city officials wondered what course to take the next time private associations are appraised.

Besides the Chicago Club, there is the Belvedere Club to consider, they said. How assessors would procede has not been determined, City Manager Mike Wiesner said.

Under the settlement, the governmental units that get money from local taxes – city, school district, county and intermediate school district – must repay about $57,000 collected from 1982 to 1987.

The Chicago Club had taken the city – which is the tax-collecting unit for the others – to the state Tax Tribunal and had had its assessments for 1980 and 1981 lowered.

A club lawsuit over the later years' assessments is in the state court of appeals.

The city, as assessor, insists the club is severely underassessed, forcing other taxpayers to pay more. The club contends the city is overtaxing its property because some of its members have the ability to pay more and not because of the property's value.

One upshot of the argument was the city's attempt to make changes in the scenic reserve designation that protects lakefront property from development. Much of the Chicago Club's property – including Park Island – is protected by scenic reserve designation.

The effort failed under the weight of overwhelming citizen opposition.

School district Business Manager Vincent Olach said the club had agreed to a "reasonable figure."

Readjustment the State Equalized Valuations for 1982-86 from $5,689,600 to the settlement figure of $4,478,750 will require the repayment of approximately $31,000 in school taxes, Olach said. The school district receives the largest share of local taxes.

The city's portion of the refund is about $16,500, Wiesner said. The total bill for legal help – not including that for the earlier appeals – is about $15,700, he said, which will be shared proportionately by the governmental units.

Olach said that although he was not involved in the negotiations, he understood the adjustment would have been greater had the figures handed down by the Tax Tribunal been used in the settlement..

Under the agreement, the governmental units will not pay interest on the money being repaid and the school district will have as much as three years to return its share of the money.

Olach said he would not know until the budget is adopted how the repayment would be scheduled.

The school district repaid $45,000 after the Chicago Club won the earlier appeal.

City gets new treasurer

The city has hired a new treasurer to replace Jim Brinker, who resigned in March.

Rick Brandy, a Petoskey resident, will begin his $25,500 job on June 29.

He is presently manager of information systems with Great Lakes Health Care in Traverse City. Brandy worked for eight years for the city of Owosso, in accounting, personnel and computer installation capacities.

He was selected from five candidates interviewed Saturday by council members and a panel of non-government and former government area residents.

Brandy's appointment came on a 4-2 council vote, with Earl Muma and Norm Probert objecting. Muma said he favored a local candidate; Probert said the salary was excessive and he was concerned the city had not thoroughly checked Brandy's recent employment record.

Brandy's wife, Maureen Radke, is an employee of Emmet County.

Residents: Improvements needed but taxes too high

Although no one disputed the need for improvement in street and sewer systems, several residents Monday let city council know they do not like raising taxes.

At a public hearing on a 3.4-mill tax hike to finance a five-year, $1.6 million fixup project, Pete Philips said the city should do a better accounting of that's happened to past tax hikes.

He protested what he said have been eight to 10 percent tax hikes in each of the past five years, and said, "You guys aren't a service anymore, you're another evil we have to deal with."

Philips said he didn't understand the city's priorities, questioning why the council would order a $5,000 study into the feasibility of starting a city cable TV system upon learning of a $36 a year increase in rates from the private company serving the city.

"I can tell the cable people to take it out," he said. "I can't tell you that. I'd like to but I can't."

Mayor Ralph McRae said tax increases were not the fault of the city council, but the result of property value increases leading to assessment hikes.

Philips countered that it was up to the council to reduce spending to keep taxes down.

Dick Fotchman, representing the Masonic Building Association, said the tax bill for that building was $1,226 in December and would jump to $2,085 this winter because of a 70 percent assessment increase.

Adding the proposed millage increase would push the city portion of the tax bill to $2,633, he said – an increase of 215 percent in city taxes in one year.

Total property taxes, he said, have been in the $3,800 to $4,000 range for the past five years, but would leap to $7,315 if increases for the city and the intermediate school district are approved. Other tax-receiving units are the county and school district.

Two residents from Garfield had a specific gripe with the improvement plan – a sidewalk scheduled to be installed on the south side of their street in the neighborhood of the Pine River Place senior citizens apartment building.

The sidewalk was not needed, they said, and one questioned whether the city had the authority to order residents to pay for a portion of the construction.

The city has the right to special assess property owners for needed improvements, City Manager Mike Wiesner said.

Council member Bob Timms later pointed out that sidewalk installations included in the city needs study would follow the traditional formula for payment, with the property owner paying 60 percent and the city 40 percent.

Jeff Porter had a different kind of complaint – saying not enough work was planned for the downtown area.

Wiesner said the only projects needed downtown that would be part of the needs study were included.

Opinion

Natural and man-made attractions

Notebook

BY DON DIBLEY

I've lived in Charlevoix for just under six years now, and by some people's reckoning that makes me still a newcomer.

Sometimes I agree with them. Particularly when I discover some nook or cranny – or major feature – I didn't know about before.

These are the kinds of places that long-time residents sometimes take for granted, but which cause another gasp in that series of joyful gasps visitors experience as they walk around town.

The area – and this statement will come as no surprise to even those who have been here only for minutes – is a visual delight.

Natural beauty and man-made beauty are everywhere.

Natural beauty is almost too plentiful to try to mention. It's the lush Park Island across Round Lake from downtown and the Caribbean look of the crescent beach at Fisherman's Island State Park.

It's the piers and lighthouses, seen varyingly from the Boulder Park area and the lookout at the end of West Dixon.

It's sunset at the dunes on North Point. And it's the view from... well, from just about anywhere.

Man-made beauty, too, is everywhere.

First, of course, are the boats – from the historic Welcome to the ultra-modern speedsters, from the buildog Mesquite to the new paddlewheel Star (well, it promises to be a looker).

It's Earl Young's masterpiece mushroom houses or gnome houses – or Smurf houses, depending on your point of reference. It's the majestic homes of the Belvedere and Chicago Clubs.

It's East Park during a community band concert. It's the rows of pie-shaped wood balconies on the Weathervane Terrace addition.

And it's the bridge. Yes, that much-maligned bascule. Like the idea or not, it's the focal point of the town and certainly can draw a crowd.

Stop cursing for a moment and watch as its jaws yawn open, then rest gently back into place – a graceful gesture by a mechanical monster.

Then there's the Edgewater Inn, which is currently giving the bridge a strong challenge in the most-maligned category.

That the two are side-by-side seems significant.

Too tall, too wide, too close to the water, the detractors say.

OK, I might as well jump right in. Everyone else has already taken sides.

I like it. And I think it will be great for the city.

Yeah, it cuts off the view of Round Lake for people waiting for the bridge (yeah, that bridge) to go down. But it will be a much-improved view over that of the back of the remnants of the lumber yard that once sat there.

Anyone who thought such a choice hunk of property was going to wind up as anything other than a commercial establishment was kidding himself.

Too high, too wide, too close to the water? That may be a first impression, but take a better look.

High? The Edgewater tops off lower than the buildings on the bluff behind it. Much of the hotel is below road level and, therefore, lower than the downtown area.

Wide? It fits nicely into the contour of the property, and it has features built in to counteract the impression of width. Especially up close. Take a walk up close. There are strong vertical lines – maybe that's why some people think it's so high.

While you're taking that walk up close, see if it's really too close to the water. Except in the area near that snazzy indoor-outdoor pool, there's a generous grass area and a wide walk. And it appears no closer to the water than the Weathervane restaurant across the road.

Still think it's too close? Take a hike to the Belvedere Avenue side of the lake and try to walk between those buildings and the lake. But don't forget your swimming suit and water wings.

No offense meant toward the Weathervane Terrace or the Lodge, but the city needs another showcase place to stay.

With the Lodge and Weathervane filled much of the summer, people looking for something more than a standard motel have had to look elsewhere.

And, once lodged out of town, do they return to shop? Or do they stay in Petoskey or wherever they landed?

In past years have you watched those buses unload tours for the Star, return to pick them up right after the cruise and head out of town?

In most cases you can bet they left not because they didn't like it here, but because their rooms were elsewhere.

The addition of the Edgewater can only increase the city's tourist trade.

It will let more people spend more time enjoying the natural and man-made beauty we live among.

And it will let them spend more money while they are here.

Hotel ruins shoreline forever

Dear Editor,

While I was in Minnesota visiting my family the enclosed article came to my attention. I thought it was very interesting, especially since the building of our last horrible condo monster was put up by the bridge. Words cannot express my feelings about it and now that it is built I haven't heard a favorable comment. Too bad – it's done and will sit vacant for nine months each year, but our shoreline is gone - forever. How we allow these developers to get away with it is beyond me.

Body-building seems to be all the rage these days with health clubs, swimming pools, tennis courts, jogging courses and the like cropping up everywhere. There are even videotapes now with home exercise programs!

Granted, physical fitness is an important part of our overall well-being, and it is good that we take it seriously. But if we don't exercise ourselves in ways that make us "strong in the inner person" (Ephesians 3:16), then we miss the very most important aspect of keeping fit.

Here's a recipe that crossed my desk recently which suggests what we can "feed" on as we seek to be strengthened in our spiritual living:

Mix well into each day:
1 part partience
1 part work
1 part courage
Add to each day:
1 part each of hope, faithfulness, generosity, and kindness
Blend with:
1 part prayer
1 part meditation
1 part good deed

Season the mixture with a dash of good spirits, a sprinkle of fun, a pinch of play, and a cup of good humor.

Pour mixture into vessel of love. Cook over radiant joy, garnish with a smile. Serve with quietness, unselfishness, and cheer.

We know that Jesus Christ embodied and exemplified the best that life can offer and showed us the way to wholeness and fullness of life. "I have come that you may have life, and have it abundantly" (John 10:10). Let us follow Him in all our efforts to build up our spiritual life.

Heroism remembered

Clockwise

BY BOB CLOCK

You can't tell where the names of former Charlevoixans will show up in the news.

I received a call the other day from Hulda Cross, widow of the late Charlevoix fisherman John Cross, saying she had a newspaper story she would like to show me.

The paper was the El Cajon (Calif.) Daily Californian and the front page story in the Nov. 9, 1986, issue was about her brother-in-law, Clyde Cross, who was fishing out of Pentwater, Mich., on Nov. 11, 1940, when one of the most vicious storms on record turned Lake Michigan upside down.

In an interview with reporter Karen Barnett, Cross told of winds of 75 mph, 20-foot seas and sub-zero temperatures — the kind of storm that has claimed many of lives over the years on the Great Lakes.

One of the ships caught in the Armistice Day howler was the Canadian freighter Novadoc, that had run aground off Pentwater the night before.

After a night of fitful sleep, Cross, then 32, said he drove his car to the shore and scanned the water for any sign of life aboard ship.

"I had heard that other ships were going down," he said. "Two went down within five miles of each other."

He could still see the Novadoc, but it had broken in two and was laced with ice.

"Then I saw a light," Cross, now 78, told the reporter. "I said to myself, 'There's life aboard.' I didn't figure there could be life. There was ice everywhere. The crew had been out there since the day before with no food or heat. I knew their clothes would be soaked. I was worried about how long those men could last."

Despite the howling storm, Cross and two of his crewmen, Gustav Fisher and Joe Fountain, launched Cross' 40-foot fishing tug, Three Brothers II, into the teeth of the storm and eventually managed to pull alongside the Novadoc. After securing a line to the freighter, Cross said he "run her full blast ahead" until the line was taut. The Novadoc crew members then slid down the rope to the waiting tug.

"We got all that were alive — that was 17. One was difficult because of his broken leg. Two — the ship's cooks — had been washed overboard," Cross recalled.

"When there's life, you're interested in doing something to help," Cross was quoted as saying.

Cross and his brave crewmen were instant heroes in every port around the Great Lakes as well as among the families of the men he rescued.

The Muskegon Chronicle called Cross "Pentwater's No. 1 daredevil."

Novadoc First Mate Richard Simpell told Cross that his men couldn't have lasted much longer. Cross received letters and Christmas greetings from Simpell and other members of the crew for years. He also received an engraved silver platter from the Canadian government in recognition of his heroism.

Newspapers later called the Armistice Day storm the most disastrous in the history of commercial shipping on Lake Michigan. Three ships went down in all, claiming 59 lives. On one ship alone, the Anna C. Minch, 22 lives were lost.

In 1949, Cross and his family moved to California where he worked on tuna boats sailing out of San Diego and later on shrimp boats off South America. For the past 14 years he has managed an apartment complex in El Cajon.

Last Memorial Day, the State of Michigan erected a historical marker at the scene of the rescue at the insistence of the Pentwater VFW Post.

Cross attended the dedication ceremony, and he plans to return to Pentwater again this weekend to take part in the Memorial Day observance, according to his sister-in-law.

Contamination pinpointed

undertaken remains unresolved. The EPA and DNR said they had no plans to pursue a cleanup – partly because the city was replacing its water supply with the lake water system and partly because the amount of TCE reaching Lake Michigan and Round Lake is minimal.

But Gov. James Blanchard decided the EPA decision to let the contamination naturally take care of itself was faulty.

The EPA determined the best way to handle the TCE contamination was to monitor the flow of the chemical to Lake Michigan and Round Lake, where it would dissipate. That procedure could take about 50 years, the EPA said.

Blanchard called on the agency to clean up the contamination for "the protection of the Great Lakes," but the EPA said there was no danger to the lakes, fish or people.

That was in November 1985 and no further action has been ordered.

The plume of Perc poses even less of a hazard to the lakes, Eftaxiadis said, since levels are so low they are undetectable with the DNR's equipment, which will measure one part of contaminant in every one billion parts of water.

Eftaxiadis estimates that the Perc level when it enters the lakes is about one part per trillion. And then it diminishes even further when it hits the lakes, he explained, because the chemical breaks down when it hits air and light.

But the DNR is hunting the source, anyway, for two reasons, he said.

– The state wants to find out who is responsible for the contamination, and – If the governor orders a TCE cleanup and the Legislature appropriates funds for one, the DNR must have a plan to "purge and clean" the groundwater.

It is more difficult to extract Perc than TCE from groundwater, Eftaxiadis said, so a different plan would have to be developed if Perc and TCE were both in the groundwater.

For that reason, the DNR needs to know how much Perc there is, how long it has been in the water and, if possible, that the source has been cut off.

What action to take, if any, on cleanup of the Perc would have to be determined elsewhere in the DNR and state government, he said.

But there is no health hazard whatever is decided, said Eftaxiadis.

Judi Tollas

Ashe-Tollas

The First Presbyterian Church of Concord, N.C., was the scene of the wedding of Judi Lynn Ashe and David William Tollas, both of Mayer, Ariz.

Parents of the couple are Mrs. John R. Ashe Jr. of Concord, N.C. and the late Dr. Ashe and Dr. and Mrs. Robert Tollas of Charlevoix.

The Rev. James Holderness officiated at the May 2 ceremony before a background of greens. Music was by Mrs. Hugh Malone, organist, and a string quartet. Fran Tollas, mother of the groom, sang "The Lord My Shepherd Is."

The bride chose a gown of lace fashioned with a basque bodice with V-neckline adorned with seed pearls. The full skirt was drawn up at the hemline with satin rosettes and pearl filaments. She wore matching lace gauntlets.

An ivory tiara secured her finger-tip veil. She carried a European gardenized bouquet of coquette roses, stephanotis and Sonia roses interspersed with static and entwined with Gypsophilia English ivy and maiden hair fern.

Deborah Lafferty of Concord was her sister's matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Elaine Ashe Wohlner of Denver and Mrs. John Ashe Say of Concord, sisters of the bride; Diane Tollas of Mayer, Ariz. and Debra Tollas of Boston, sisters of the groom and Mrs. Terry Tollas of Philadelphia, sister-in-law of the groom; and Sheri Gilfory of Chicago.

Laura Say of Concord, niece of the bride was flower girls.

Dan Tollas of Philadelphia assisted his brother as best man.

Ushers were Dane Tollas of East Lansing, brother of the bridegroom; Dr. Elliott Wohlner of Denver, Dr. Resat Say of Concord, and Henry Lafferty of Charlotte, brothers-in-law of the bride; Steven Berlage of Chicago, and Steve Michael of Charlotte, N.C.

A reception, hosted by the bride's mother, followed at the Cabarrus Country Club.

After a wedding trip along the South Carolina coast, the couple will reside at Arcosanti, Cordes Junction, Ariz.

The bride is a graduate of Chatham Hall, Chatham, Va., attended Hollis College and graduated from Virginia Polytechnic Institute with a major in architecture.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Charlevoix High School and attended Kalamazoo College and Michigan State University. Both are employed at Arcosanti, Cordes Junction, Ariz.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the bridegroom's parents at Gus' Forty-Niner Restaurant in Charlotte, N.C.

Fowler-Hodgson

Susan Blair Fowler and Michael Marshall Hodgson, II exchanged marriage vows on Saturday, May 9, at the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix.

The bride is the daughter of David and Nancy Fowler of Charlevoix, and the bridegroom is the son of Richard and Lois Hodgson of Charlevoix and Sanibel Island, Florida.

The Rev. Philip Schairbaum officiated at the afternoon ceremony witnessed by 200 guests. For the occasion, the altar was decorated with a rope swag of live greens decorated with pink satin bows, eucalyptus, and blooming flowers. White wooden candlesticks with pink candles were also decorated with greens, flowers, and pink ribbons; and white antique baskets were filled with a variety of greens and branches of flowering almond.

The pews were marked with white heart-shaped grapevine wreaths tied with pink satin ribbons and accented with eucalyptus and white, blue, and pink statice.

The bride, who was escorted to the altar by her father, wore a floor-length gown of summer satin, fashioned with low-cut sweetheart neckline and short bouffant sleeves.

The sleeves and neckline were trimmed with Alencon lace, seed pearls, and appliques of organza, satin, and lace. The full skirt, hemmed in lace, ended in a semi-cathedral length train, and the finger-tip veil fell from a side arrangement of organza flowers trimmed with seed pearls and Alencon lace. The edge of the veil featured the same appliques as the sleeves.

The bride carried an all-white cascading bouquet of roses, mini carnations, freesia, and iris, combined with greenery.

Margaret Ellen Fowler, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor, and Barbara Fowler, sister-in-law of the bride, and Mary Hodgson, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids. Margaret Ann Hosmer of Breckenridge, Colo. was the wedding co-ordinator.

The bride's attendants wore tea-length dresses of printed chintz in pastel water colors. They featured bouffant sleeves and deep V necks. Each attendant carried a mixed bouquet of pale pink roses, blue iris, white freesia, and pink mini carnations combined with asparagus and tree ferns.

Mark Hodgson, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. James and Thomas Fowler, brothers of the bride, and Eric Hodgson, brother of the bridegroom, served as groomsmen and ushers.

Traditional organ wedding music was provided by Sean Ley.

The bride's parents hosted a reception at Stafford's Bay View Inn following the ceremony. They were assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Max Hosmer of Charlevoix and Mr. and Mrs. Lorne MacDonald of Grosse Pointe Farms, who served as greeters. Music for the reception was played by a trio organized by Steve Stargardt.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hodgson

The bride's parents also entertained the out-of-town guests for breakfast on Sunday morning.

The bridegroom's parents hosted the rehearsal dinner, catered by David Phillips, in their home on Friday evening. After dinner, they opened their home for a celebration honoring the bride and bridegroom, attended by their out-of-town friends who came from Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Ohio, Texas, Virginia, and several Michigan cities.

The bride attended the University of Michigan and Kellogg Community College, and has been employed as a dental hygienist. The bridegroom is a graduate of the University of Michigan as a nuclear physicist and is presently working for the Commonwealth Edison Company in Byron, Ill. Both bride and bridegroom graduated from Charlevoix High School. They are now taking a wedding trip to North Carolina, Florida, and Texas.

Child meningitis vaccine available in area

For years District Health Department No. 3 has offered vaccines to prevent diseases that have caused problems, especially in children. These diseases are whooping cough, polio, German measles, diphtheria and mumps.

Parents can help to prevent another serious type of childhood illness. A bacterium ("germ") called Haemophilus influenzae type B (or Hib). Hib attacks one of every 200 children in the United States before age 5.

Hib can be responsible for over half of all cases of meningitis in children. Hib may also be responsible for more than 90 percent of all cases of epiglotitis (a medical emergency that may cause choking) in children. Many infections that can cause joint problems and crippling forms of arthritis have also been linked to Hib infections.

One infected child may make many other children sick. That is why immunization against Hib is the best way to prevent children from catching and spreading this type of serious childhood illness, says the health department. A new vaccine has been tested and is up to 90 percent effective in the two- to six-year-old group.

The United States Public Health Service recommends this new vaccine for all children once they have reached 24 months of age.

Through an agreement with the Michigan Department of Public Health, District Health Department No. 3 is offering the early childhood meningitis (Hib) vaccine at all of its clinic locations at no cost. The vaccination is also available through many private physicians.

More information about the Hib vaccine may be obtained from the District Health Department in Charlevoix at 547-6523 or by calling a physician.

GET A LIFT WITH CHARLEVOIX COUNTY STATE BANK AND SAVE $38,396.59* ON YOUR MORTGAGE.

You know there are many mortgage options out there. But they're all basically the same. You make monthly payments for 30 years, and then finally, you own your home.

Now you have a choice. Charlevoix County State Bank's new LIFT Mortgage.

A Charlevoix County State Bank LIFT Mortgage allows you to own your home in approximately 21 years, not 30 like conventional mortgages. At the same time, you pay substantially less interest.

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS:
Instead of paying monthly, you pay one-half your regular mortgage payment every 14 days. By reducing the principal more frequently, the total amount of interest will be dramatically reduced.

*For example, if your mortgage is $50,000 at 10% Annual Percentage Rate, you could save $38,396.59 in interest! That's money you can use to finance the kids' college tuition, invest in a second home or even to buy a new boat.

LIFT
Payment $219.39 every 14 days
Pay out period approximately 21 years
Total interest paid $69,558.25
$38,396.59 Interest Saved
Based on $50,000 mortgage and 10% Annual Percentage Rate

CONVENTIONAL
Payment $438.79 per month
Pay out period 30 years
Total interest paid $107,954.83
Based on $50,000 mortgage and 10% Annual Percentage Rate

Boys win track regional, Petoskey Relays

The Charlevoix thinclads captured the Class C regional track title for the second year in a row.

The Rayders finished with 93 points, 50 of them in first places. Benzie Central finished in second place with 75 points.

The Rayders' Jason Whitley, with a time of :38.6 in the 300-meter high hurdles, and Jim Gibbs, with a :51.0 in the 400-meter run, took firsts in individual events.

The other firsts were in the 400-, 800-, and 1600-meter relays.

"Our sprinters saved the day for us, taking first in the relays," said coach Hal Evans. "Paul Anderson ran some great legs in the relays as did Gibbs and Whitley. Everyone did a good job. In fact, everyone ran well."

Whitley set a school record in the hurdles, bettering the former record of :39.8.

First and second place winners advance to state competition at Bangor on Friday and Saturday, May 29-30. If an individual or relay team has a time better than that set by the state for an event, that individual or team also is eligible to advance to the state.

Doug Bergmann's third place in the two-mile in 8:59 was better than the established time of 10:04, and the 3200-meter relay team, which finished in fifth in 8:25.7 was a full second faster than the state time. Relay members are Bergmann, Eric Moore, Scott Miller and Pat Rejewski.

Bergmann, in the two mile, lost his shoe a third of the way and ran the remainder of the race without it. "He was a bloody mess but he finished," Evans said.

In addition to Charlevoix, Benzie Central, Rogers City, Pine River and Kalkaska's two-mile relay teams qualified for state.

Meet results follow:

Long jump: 4. Paul Anderson; 5. Darrin Batdorff.

Pole Vault: 2. Jason Whitley.

3200-meter relay: 5. Charlevoix (Doug Bergmann, Eric Moore, Scott Miller, Pat Rajewski) 8:25.70.

100-meter dash: 3. David Miller.

800-meter relay: 1. Charlevoix (Rick Quinn, Whitley, Paul Anderson, Jim Gibbs) 1:32.30.

400-meter relay: 1. Charlevoix (David Miller, Gibbs, Mark LaBlance, Quinn). 45.70.

400-meter dash: 1: Gibbs. :51.20.

800-meter run: 4. Rajewski.

Rayders victorious in tennis regional 2nd straight year

The Rayder tennis team has captured the Class C regional title and will play at the state finals at Kalamazoo Friday and Saturday, May 29 and 30.

The victory was a repeat of last year's performance when the Rayders won their first titles since 1978.

"It was great," said coach Erik Lundteigen. "We won the No. 2 and 4 singles that we weren't too sure of plus all the doubles where we thought we might be a little weak and ended up losing only the first flight.

"Jon (Eakes) and Wes (Cumberland) defeated opponents they had lost to during the regular schedule. I couldn't be happier. They really came through."

The Rayders No. 1 singles player, Ty Wagner, won his first match but lost in the second round to Doug Keen of Leland who went on to a first place finish. "I guess if you're going to lose, it's good to lose to the winner," Lundteigen said.

In taking the title, Charlevoix had 24 points. Northport with 16 points, finished second followed by Harbor Springs with 13 and Boyne City with 12 among the 10 teams in the regional meet at Traverse City.

Tournament results follow:

Wagner defeated Brent George of Elk Rapids 6-3, 6-2 and lost to Keen 6-2, 6-4.

Eakes defeated Beth Keen of Leland 6-0, 6-1, John Judkins of Boyne City 7-6, 6-2 and, in the finals, defeated Greg Maskell of Northport 6-0, 7-5.

In the No. 4 singles, Cumberland defeated Chris Nelson of Leland 6-0, 6-0, Dan Stowe of Northport 6-2, 6-1, and, in the finals Darren LaPointe of Traverse City St. Francis, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Charlevoix then swept the doubles with Mike Chew and Quint Walker defeating Dave Bedells and John Walker 6-2, 7-5, Tallberg and Falls of Boyne City 6-1, 6-2, and, in the finals, Steve Craker and Bill Popp of Northport 6-2, 6-1.

Dan Staublin and Rusty Coolman defeated Coon and Hayes of Boyne City 6-0, 6-1, Brian Craker and Scott of Northport 6-4, 6-1, and, in the finals, Clare and Osterlund of Harbor Springs 6-4, 6-3.

Scott DeYoung and Ryan Holmes defeated Mullette and Tsumodori of Traverse City St. Francis 6-2, 6-1, and, in the finals, Paul Popp and Carnes of Northport 6-1, 6-1.

"It was a super day. I'm really proud. There were good matches, there were close matches, there were matches that we really didn't expect to win going into the tournament," Lundteigen said.

"Again, I say, it was great. Now we're looking forward to some good tennis in the finals."

Going into the regional tournament, the Rayders had a 12-2 record, losing only to Petoskey.

Frequent visitor killed in attack on ship

Joseph Watson

The brother of an area resident and frequent visitor was among the 37 sailors killed in a Sunday missile attack on an American ship in the Persian Gulf.

Joseph P. Watson, 25, of Ferndale was the brother of Kay Bartz of Charlevoix. His family was told of his death by the Navy on Monday.

Charlevoix Mayor Ralph McRae on Tuesday ordered the city's flags flown at half-staff in honor of Watson and other other 36 who lost their lives in the attack by an Iraqi warplane. McRae suggested others lower their flags for the rest of the week.

The serviceman's wife, Kristin, lives in Jacksonville, Fla., near the ship's homeport of Mayport, Fla. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold K. Watson, are residents of Ferndale.

Kay Bartz said they had waited all day Monday for some word of their brother. It was not until after 10 p.m. Monday that her parents were advised, probably by his wife, that he was among the 37 killed when the 445-foot frigate USS Stark was struck by an Exocet missile fired by an Iraqi F-1 Mirage jet.

Watson is the youngest of six children, Bartz said. The others are four daughters, including Bartz, and a second son.

Watson was a frequent visitor to Charlevoix during the 21 years the Bartz family has lived here. Bartz said her parents purchased a home in Charlevoix and plan to retire here.

Bartz said her brother is a graduate of Ferndale High School and a 1984 graduate of Michigan State University with a degree in engineering.

He enlisted in the Navy in August 1984 and was aboard the Stark when it toured the Great Lakes in the summer of 1985.

Char-Em celebrates 25th birthday

by PEG OHLE

An important local institution will celebrate 25 years of service to the community and local school districts this Friday.

The Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District will hold an open house from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. at its headquarters building on Mercer Boulevard. There will be all kinds of films and pamphlets and pictures illustrating the many services offered by Char-Em, as it is usually called.

However, the most important part of the open house will be the opportunity for the public to meet and visit with Char-Em personnel – the teachers, the consultants, the therapists, the psychologists, the social workers, the administrators, and the board members who render the general education and special education services provided by Char-Em.

Most people don't know much about the Char-Em Intermediate School District, but every school child in the area is touched by it in some way.

Char-Em is the liaison link between the state of Michigan and 12 local school districts, including all districts in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties, and Central Lake and Ellsworth in Antrim County. There are 9,800 students in these schools, down to the 50 on Beaver Island and 21 in Cross Village. Every one of these students has available to him or her a long list of Char-Em services as needed:

– Assistance in obtaining training in vocational-technical fields through the local school district. There is also assistance in other special career fields.

– Assistance in providing programs for gifted and talented students through local school districts.

– Assistance for pregnant teenage girls in receiving academic credits as well as pre-natal and post-natal care and counseling.

– Supplying instructional materials to local schools to help students in the learning process. These include films, reference materials, audio-visual equipment, and other learning materials.

– Helping to make operation of schools go smoothly by providing assistance in school finance matters, state reports, federal programs, legislation, property transfer, and teacher certification.

All of these services are general education services available to all school students. Char-Em special education services are designed "to meet the special needs of some students, to prepare them to function in society to the best of their ability, and to grow into productive members of society."

The Courier talked with Patricia Taylor, assistant to the superintendent of Char-Em; Susan VanWieren, assistant superintendent for general and vocational education; and Carrie Piehl, executive secretary for general education, who explained Char-Em's services more fully.

By statute, Char-Em is responsible for the special training of all persons from birth through age 26.

"We could get a call from the hospital shortly after a child is born reporting that the child will be in need of some kind of special training because of physical and-or mental disability," Taylor explained.

Most of these children receive the help they need in their homes until they are three years old, after which they may be assigned to a classroom program.

A staff of 44 professional people and 20 aides is available to provide the services needed by children under Char-Em supervision. They include psychologists, speech and language therapists, social workers, diagnositic consultants, preschool consultants, homebound and hospital teachers, occupational therapists and special needs consultants.

They all work in one or more of the programs set up for children of different ages and different needs: The program for handicapped infants and preschool children; the classroom program for handicapped preschool children ages 3 to 6, held at Resort School in Emmet County; the classroom program for hearing impaired children, held at East Jordan Elementary School; the highly individualized program for children with learning and-or behavior programs, ages 6 through 16, held at Charlevoix Elementary and Middle schools, Petoskey High School, and Pellston Elementary School; the severely mentally impaired program for children ages 12 through 26, held at Petoskey Elementary School, Boyne City High School and St. Francis School in Petoskey; and the severely multiply impaired program for children with two or more severe handicaps, ages 2 through 26, held at Ironton School and East Jordan Elementary School.

Some of the other schools have rooms in their buildings for handicapped children. Altogether, 160 handicapped children are now receiving training and education services from Char-Em.

Char-Em provides training for all handicapped persons through age 26, unless they receive a high school diploma before then. Van Wieren says Char-Em has a higher than average percentage of high school graduates among its special education students.

Char-Em is supported by millage levied throughout the area it serves. It operates with a one-mill charter levy, and in September the public will be asked to vote for another 1.16 mills. A requested millage of 1.20 was defeated in April by 30 votes.

Van Wieren explained that Char-Em cannot cut its services because they are all state-mandated, so, if the millage request is again turned down, local school districts would have to provide the services at their own expense.

Intermediate school systems were established throughout the state following enacting legislation passed in 1963. Prior to the establishment of intermediate schools, each county had its own school system.

Char-Em is governed by a popularly elected board presently consisting of Opal Goldsmith of Petoskey, Clayton Healey of East Jordan, Barry Anderson of Charlevoix, Robert W. Anderson of Charlevoix, Patricia Conkle of Ellsworth, Jane Roberts of Pellston and Gloria C. Wilhelm of Charlevoix.

The terms of Roberts and Wilhelm expire this year and will be filled in on election on June 8 by two of five candidates. Roberts is one of the candidates, as are Sulane Hamilton of Charlevoix, Betty Louise Luebke of Boyne City, Barbara M. Pratt of Levering and Janis Best Williams of Charlevoix.

Clayton Healey, vice-president of the Char-Em board, began his service in 1959, when he joined the Charlevoix School Board. He served as president of Char-Em from 1965 to 1980. His current term expires in 1989.

Panel endorses raise for city clerk

A pay raise for the city clerk – but none for the mayor or council members – has been proposed by the city compensation commission.

The commission's report, which was presented to city council last week, will go into effect May 30 unless the council takes some action to counter it.

The commission has recommended that the city clerk receive $7,000 a year. The clerk's job is scheduled for 20 hours a week.

Present clerk Arlene Staley is paid $6,000 a year. She requested that any salary adjustment be made now so anyone interested in running for the position in the August primary or November general election would know what the pay would be.

Besides the salary, the clerk is paid separately for several other services, such as overseeing elections and voter registration, certifying candidacies and serving as clerk to the board of review that hears tax assessment complaints.

The pay for these services would remain at $9 an hour.

The commission's recommendation is that the mayor's salary remain at $2,640 a year with a $600 car allowance. The mayor is also paid $35 for each committee meeting.

Council salary would remain at $1,320 a year, plus $35 per meeting.

The committee is comprised of Ed. Hansen, Hal Hill, Ray Wood, Jeannine Wallace and Bob Lieberman.

Candidate deadline approaches

Anyone who wants to run for city council or city clerk has until 4 p.m. Tuesday, June 2, to file a petition for the August primary.

Three council members' terms are up – one in each ward. They are Norm Probert in the First Ward (north side), Bob Timms in the Second Ward (west side) and Earl Muma in the Third Ward (east side).

Clerk Arlene Staley's term is also expiring.

All are elected for two-year terms and all posts are non-partisan.

Nominating petitions must have at least 25 signatures of city voters but not more than 40.

The primary is Tuesday, Aug. 4, and the general election would be held Tuesday, Nov. 3.

Taking time to serenade Charlevoix on his way to Mackinac Island is Bill Beier of South Bend, Ind., who plans to work the summer at the island resort in restaurants and as a banjo player.

Hospital nominations due June 6

Saturday, June 6, is the deadline for nominations for the Charlevoix Area Hospital board.

Terms of board members Walter Hufford, Mark Kowalske and Geraldine Brady will expire at the hospital's annual meeting Tuesday, July 21.

All three incumbents have indicated that they will be candidates for re-election. Board members serve three-year terms.

Nominations must be made by a member of the Charlevoix Area Hospital Association and directed to Thomas Carey, chairman of the nominating committee, by June 6.

Insurance agent earns national recognition

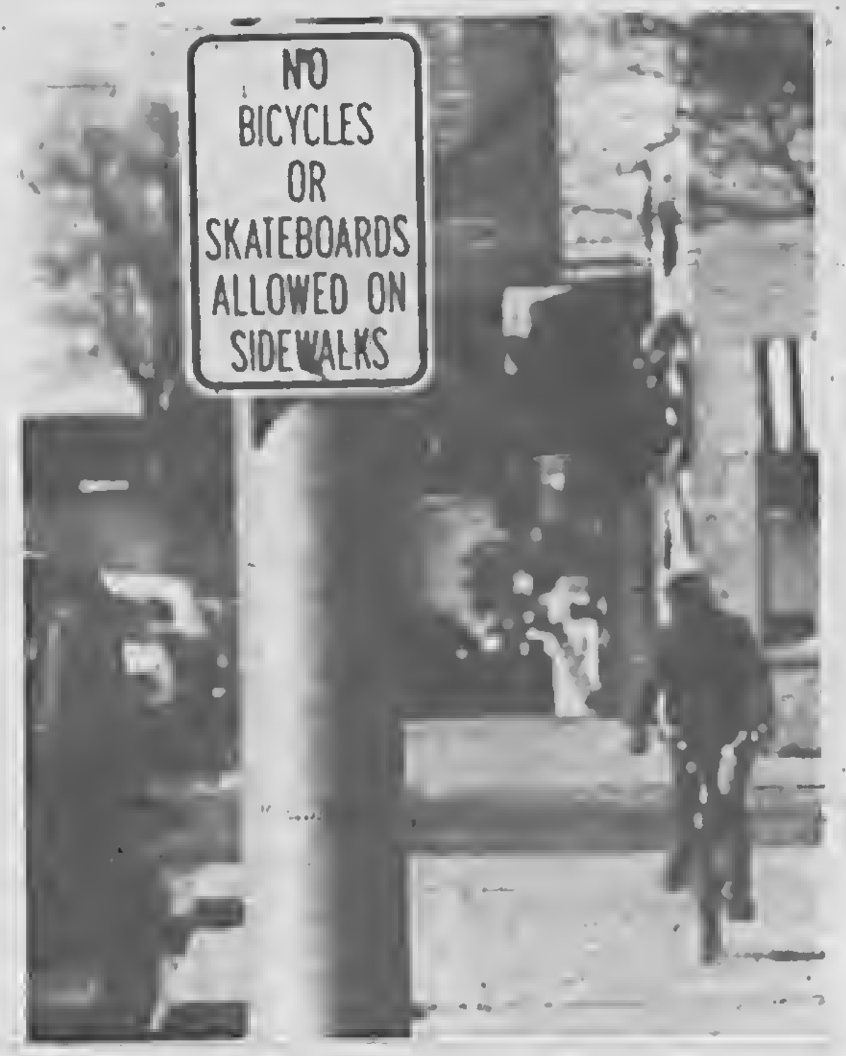
Charles Elzinga, 710 Bridge St., Charlevoix, local agent for Farm Bureau Insurance Group, has been named one of the company's top agents of 1986, based on his excellent record of sales and service for the year.

As one of the year's top agents, Elzinga received Farm Bureau Insurance Group's "All American" award during the company's recent annual sales convention in Grand Rapids. The award, reserved for the company's top producers, recognizes agents for their outstanding sales achievements and superior client service.

Elzinga was also honored at the convention for reaching 25 years of service as an agent and for earning three Seals of Excellence for the overall high quality of his insurance business.

Farm Bureau Insurance Group, one of the state's major insurers, has a statewide force of 400 agents serving over 300,000 Michigan policyholders.

Reliable Maid Service Inc. has begun operations in Charlevoix. The service, owned by Deenie Urben (left), does house, business and spring cleanings with insured and bonded crews of two or more. With Urben, from left, are Lisa Fuson, Debbie Angermuller and John Angermuller. For information, call Urben at 547-4908.



Watch those signs

New city Police Chief Dennis Helverson wants everyone to know these new signs on Bridge Street will be enforced. Bikes and skateboards can be dangerous to pedestrians on busy sidewalks, and city council has given the police authority to ticket violators and take away their wheels. The ban applies from Antrim to Park.

Bloodmobile visiting city next week

The spring visit of the American Red Cross Bloodmobile will be Thursday, May 28, said Nancy Fowler, coordinator for the visit.

The location will again be the American Legion post home, the time from 1 to 7 p.m.

Donors are being recruited by telephone and by post cards.

Esther Carey is scheduling registered nurses, Andi Matthews is recruiting volunteers and Marilyn Izor handles the publicity.

The Beta Sigma Phi sorority staffs the canteen, the Coast Guard Wives Club helps with telephoning and cookie baking, and the Lions Club unloads and reloads the bloodmobile. First State Bank provides coffee and Oleson's Food Store cookies and juice.

Erber lot work to begin

Work on the Erber parking lot on Clinton between Bridge and State should begin early next week, following acceptance by city council of the low bid for the project.

The $60,103 contract with Traverse Asphalt Paving Inc. of Traverse City calls for completion by July 1 or a $250 a day penalty will be assessed.

Steps will be taken to insure the health and safety of two maple trees at the site, city officials said after concerns were raised by the Shade Tree Commission.

St. Mary picks teacher for kindergarten

St. Mary's school has hired Anne Kelly of Charlevoix as teacher for its first kindergarten class in recent years, Sister Barbara Seymour, OP, school principal, said. Kelly has been hired as kindergarten and second grade teacher.

There are presently 13 children enrolled in kindergarten. Kelly will teach kindergarten during the morning [illegible] second grade in the afternoon.

Kelly has been a substitute teacher in kindergarten through eighth grade in Charlevoix schools and other area schools. She has taught at the co-op nursery school and in the adult education program at Boyne City.

A native of Cleveland, Kelly is a graduate of Ohio Dominican College in Columbus. She taught in Cleveland and at Traverse City prior to coming to Charlevoix.

Her husband, Richard, is superintendent of schools at Boyne City. They have five children who are in grades one through 12.

Old mill bags found

Louis Orlowski, president of the Charlevoix Historical Society, accepts a gift of several old mill bags from Carol Hisey (left) and Jeanne Martin, two of the co-owners of the Weathervane Restaurant and Lounge. The bags, from the Argo Mill, were discovered in a hole beneath the restaurant. The mill -- first the Charlevoix Roller Mills, then the Argo Mill -- stood on the site from the mid-1880s until the 1950s. The bags, which were bundled together, are in excellent shape, with the colors of the lettering still bright.

Leak causes shutdown at Big Rock

The Big Rock Point Nuclear Plant was taken out of service Monday so that repairs could be made to the plant safety system.

At approximately 5 a.m. calculations showed that the leakage of steam and water from the primary coolant system had increased to a level close to that which would require a shut down.

The leakage was calculated to be 0.75 gallons per minute. The plants administrator procedures require a shut down at 0.8 gallons per minute. A leakage of 0.3 gallons per minute is considered normal.

The decision to shut down the reactor was made following a power reduction and inspection of the leakage problem.

Shut down began at 3 p.m. and the generator was disconnected from the Consumers Power Company electric grid at 5:13 p.m.

The plant is expected to be out of service for only a short time while repairs are completed to correct the leakage problem.

PETUNIA PEOPLE

Fifty-thousand divided by 600 equals 70.

The equation was that simple during the sixth annual Operation Petunia, as community-spirited residents once again rushed through the five-mile planting.

An estimated 600 planters put about 50,000 petunias along the sides of Bridge Street from the airport to the northern city limits in one hour and 10 minutes Thursday.

That was about the same amount of time as it took in 1986 when two hundred more participated in the event.

Among the planters was 89-year-old Mildred Scott, who was helping to carry on the tradition of ailing Eleanor Carson, who for years planted snapdragons at her Michigan-Dixon home.

Scott received the award for being the oldest planter and the John Campbell family received honors for being the largest family to participate.

Following the planting, about 500 people gathered in East Park for a free picnic dinner provided for participants.

A fund-raising auction after the picnic raised $4,200 for Keep Charlevoix Beautiful, the sponsor of Operation Petunia. Another auction is planned at KCB's June 17 annual meeting and tickets are being sold for a Labor Day drawing for a 1987 Ford Mustang convertible.

Coast Guard boardings challenged

by SARA GAY DAMMANN

The Coast Guard and Charlevoix pleasure sailor Cliff Biddick Jr. may be headed for a lengthy court battle over the Coast Guard's right to board vessels and conduct routine safety and law enforcement checks.

Biddick maintains Coast Guard random boardings and searches, for safety inspections and for drugs, are violations of his constitutional rights. He angrily adds, "The Coast Guard is harassing pleasure boaters."

On the evening of May 14, Biddick took his four-year-old daughter Meghan for a pizza sail on his 32-foot sloop. As he cleared the Charlevoix breakwater to head into Lake Michigan, he realized the Charlevoix Coast Guard 44-foot search and rescue boat was approaching.

Biddick had been thinking about what he would do if the Coast Guard asked to board his boat. In fact, he admits, he has known since last fall he would deny the Coast Guard permission to board.

Boardings of pleasure craft have been a routine part of Coast Guard duties in all U.S. waters. Until last year these boardings, especially on the Great Lakes, generally consisted of occasional checks of boats for such safety devices as life preservers, fire extinguishers and flares.

However, the Coast Guard announced, in a press release dated Sept. 23, 1986, "The Coast Guard will be assisting other federal and local law enforcement agencies, as we work to stem the flow of illegal substances across the Great Lakes and enforce all applicable federal laws."

"Three years ago the commandant of the Coast Guard established a policy about armed boardings," Chief Richard When said last week in an interview.

When is a public affairs officer at Coast Guard Ninth District Headquarters in Cleveland. "Then there came a step-up order."

Biddick, vice president and general manager at Irish Boat Shop in Charlevoix, is a life-long sailor. He has cruised and raced on the Great Lakes and in the Caribbean.

Cliff Biddick Jr.

Two years ago he sailed across the Atlantic. He frequently teaches safety and navigation courses for the Coast Guard Auxiliary.

"I believe in boating safety. I always have all the regulation equipment aboard my boat. But I think they must have probable cause before they board. If they see me running without proper lights, then they can come alongside and ask to do a check. Otherwise it is harassment."

Biddick says he watched with alarm as increasing numbers of boaters on Lake Charlevoix and Lake Michigan were stopped by Coast Guardsmen carrying side arms and even long guns.

"If they are after drugs, they are not going after the right people," he states, noting that in all the boardings in the Charlevoix area last year no drugs were found.

In fact, according to Coast Guard records, only four small quantities of drugs were found on boats in the Detroit River during all of last year's boardings in that region. Fines were levied, but no jail sentences.

Biddick decided that when his turn came, he would refuse the Coast Guard and fight "all the say to the Supreme Court, as long as I can afford it."

Thus, Biddick said, he politely told

Charlevoix turns out to remember its victims of war

Three volleys by a firing squad in East Park honor war dead.

A crowd of 400 to 500 area residents gathered at Brookside Cemetery on Memorial Day to remember those who have lost their lives in defense of the United States.

With the deaths of 37 American sailors-including the brother of a local resident – in the Persian Gulf fresh in their minds, the audience listened to patriotic speeches and band selections and watched as a wreath was placed, Taps was played and a rifle salute was fired.

The ceremony followed a parade by veterans, auxiliaries, scouts, the Coast Guard and the high school band from State and Park to the cemetery.

Along the way the parade halted so tributes could be presented at Memorial Bridge, at the U.S. Submarine Veterans of World War II Memorial in East Park, on Round Lake and at Veterans Park.

The ceremonies were sponsored by Leslie T. Shapton Post No. 226 of the American Legion and Charlevoix Post No. 1153 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Veterans and families salute the flag during National Anthem at Brookside Cemetery.

Retired Coast Guard Commander Warren J. Shadko addresses Memorial Day crowd.

This Barnard Methodist Church building was built in 1895, making a permanent home for the congregation which had been meeting in the Barnard School building and, before that, in private homes. Dorothy Stoel, a long-time member of the church, says there are records indicating that as far back as 1872 the congregation was part of the Charlevoix Circuit, which also included Norwood and Horton Bay. One of the circuit preachers was her great-grandfather, Nilam Scofield, who wrote of holding joint meetings with a Baptist congregation in Norwood in 1873. The Barnard church building was remodeled and the grounds landscaped in 1974. Sunday, June 14, will be a special day at the church because a new organ, the gift of Carl and Vivien Beettie, will be dedicated.

Nursing home hearing moved closer

by PEG OHLE

The wheels of government action have been speeded up a bit so Charlevoix people could get an earlier chance to plead their case for a nursing home in the township.

Ralph McRae, local agent for the Liberatore Health Care Co., announced that hearings will be held in Lansing Aug. 25 and 26 and Sept. 1 and 8 to consider a certificate of need for the Charlevoix Health Care Center proposed by Liberatore. The hearings had earlier been scheduled for next March.

McRae gave credit to State Senator Mitch Irwin and State Rep. Ralph Ostling for urging the State Department of Public Health to move up the hearing dates.

In reality, the hearings are an appeal filed by Liberatore with the state after another company, Dehmel Ltd., was given the "go ahead" for a nursing home in the Charlevoix area last November. Requests for certificates of need were presented to the state by both Dehmel and Liberatore at about the same time.

McRae and many local supporters of the proposed Charlevoix Health Care Center felt they had made a better case for their project. They cited the location of the nursing home, which is very near Charlevoix Area Hospital and doctors' offices; the working architectural plans for the 107-bed facility at a cost of $24,439 per bed; and the dozens of letters from private and public persons citing the need for a nursing home in Charlevoix.

In contrast, Dehmel did not indicate it had a specific location in mind for its facility; its proposal was for only 80 beds at a cost of $27,500 per bed; and there was little apparent local support for the project.

Upon learning of the new hearing dates, McRae said, "It's the best news of 1987 for me." He had gone to Lansing last February to talk with Irwin and Ostling about the long delay for hearings.

Coast Guard challenged

the Coast Guardsmen be denied them permission to board. They insisted. He remained adamant. A two-hour stand-off followed, according to Biddick's log, during which time he and Meghan finished their dinner and read bedtime stories. Eventually a second Coast Guard vessel, carrying Charlevoix station Chief Mark Simmons, joined the flotilla two miles off Charlevoix.

Biddick was told he would be boarded, by force if necessary. He asked the Coast Guardsmen to note his protest, offered them coffee and proceeded to ignore them while they searched his boat.

In total the Coast Guard found three minor safety violations: life preservers in a cabinet, not on deck; flares outdated; and a stamp missing from the boat's documentation papers.

Biddick says he did not tell the Coast Guard where he kept his new flares or that the stamp for the documentation was on his office desk. He said he was looking for issues with which to test the law.

Station Chief Simmons confirmed Biddick's account, but refused to comment further pending decisions from district headquarters.

The federal law, Title 14, Section 89, granting the Coast Guard the right to board and search boats is nearly 200 years old, according to Coast Guard sources.

It was upheld in a Supreme Court ruling in 1983, U.S. vs Villamonte-Marquez. As a result, even people who live aboard a boat, calling it their home, are not protected from what on land would be considered illegal search and seizure.

Biddick's lawyers have advised him he has little chance of winning. Biddick meanwhile, is awaiting the Coast Guard's next step, which may involve prosecution in a civil court.

"I intend to be a pain to them. I am the little guy, fighting the government. I hope other boaters will join me," he said.

"Not only do I believe they must have probable cause to search a boat, I think enforcing safety is ridiculous. You teach safety, you don't enforce it with a gun."

60 years after quitting school, Otto Yemmans will graduate

by PEG OHLE

It took Otto Yemmans over 60 years to complete his school work, but the 73-year-old Charlevoix native will graduate from Charlevoix High School this June.

Taking up where he left off in his second year at Charlevoix High School many years ago, Yemmans is the only senior citizen graduating through the adult education program next month.

As Yemmans explains it, a "set to" with his English teacher forced him to quit school the first time around.

Beginning last September and continuing through this month, Yemmans has studied history, government, sociology, psychology, literature and general education courses to add to his earlier school credits and experience gained through seven decades of "just living."

Yemmans was born in Charlevoix, attended grade school and went to high school for a year and a half before quitting. Going to Detroit, the young dropout first worked for the Chrysler Motor Car Co., then for several tool and die companies in management and supervisory capacities.

Following retirement, Yemmans returned to Charlevoix, where he has been active in several organizations, including the Shriners. He helped with the Special Olympics last week and plays golf whenever he can.

Commenting on the time spent with his school work, Yemmans said, "I never wrote so much when I went to school in the first place!"

Government was his favorite subject, he says, because "I always liked politics." That interest resulted in his being elected constable of Charlevoix Township at one time.

A widower, Yemmans is the father of four children and the grandfather of 10. Two of his grandchildren will also receive high school diplomas this year, one from Benzie Central High School in Benzonia and one from Elk Rapids High School.

Yemmans will wear a cap and gown and be seated with the rest of the high school graduates on graduation day.

However, this may not be the end of his formal education. He told the Courier, "One of my sons suggested I go on to college. I may just do that!"

Memorial Day 1987

Memorial Day remembrances were held Monday in ceremonies sponsored by Leslie T. Shapton Post No. 226 of the American Legion and Charlevoix Post No. 1153 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Often, we think of patriotic holidays as times for the older folks among us to look back. But they can be a time for younger people to reflect, too. John Gray, a Charlevoix High senior, shared his thoughts with those present at the Memorial Day ceremonies, and we'd like to share them with you.

There will be a day, sometime in each of our lives, when we will mourn for a loved one; some of us already have. There are days of remembrance, such as this one. A special day set aside, not only for the loved ones we have lost, but a day of letting the memories live, of all the young men and women who gave their lives to defend every one of us and our Constitution.

Whether they gave up their life in the most honorable way possible or if they were severely wounded, mentally or physically, they are the reason we still live our lives as American citizens. From the Revolutionary War, where we became a nation, to the Vietnam War, which divided our nation, they gave up their lives and livelihood.

Because of this, the price of death, the memories of them shall never die. Not all men and women give up their lives in a time of war. There are 37 families mourning today the loss of sons because of unprovoked actions in the Persian Gulf. These men are as much a part of this service as any man that died in time of war.

For me, Memorial Day isn't just one day out of the year, but every day of the year. When I was four years old, I visited the state veterans facility in Grand Rapids. I remember this so well because something happened to me while I was there; I would like to share it with you at this moment.

I saw an older fellow in a wheelchair, so I went up to him and began to talk. This man started to scream and yell at me. I didn't understand this at the time but now I think I do. It wasn't me he was yelling at. In his mind, he was still in the war. This man would never forget the war and he would remember its tragedies every day. Everyone who fought in the war remembers his-her buddies they lost every day of the year. For them Memorial Day isn't once in a year, it is 365 days a year. It should be for us too!

Jesus Christ gave his life for us and we remember him and the spirit of his soul everyday. The men and women who died while defending our nation also gave their lives for us. Let's remember them and the spirit of their lives every day.

Memorial Day is one day, there are still 364 days left. Let's remember everyday. Because they didn't die; they do live forever.

As a final thought, I would like to read a poem titled, "I Live forever."

Do not stand at my grave and weep.
I am not there. I do not sleep.
I am a thousand winds that blow,
I am the diamond glints of snow.
I am sunlight on ripened grain;
I am the gentle autumn rain;
When you awaken in the mornings's hush.
I am the swift uplifting rush of quiet birds in circle flight.
I am the soft star that shines at night.

Do not stand at my grave and cry.
I am not there.
I did not die.

–ANON.

They're back

It's that time of year again. Time when making a left turn onto Bridge Street is impossible and even making a right turn is an adventure.

Time when walking the length of downtown is often quicker than driving it, but not necessarily any less dangerous.

That's right. They're back.

The tourists. We love them and we hate them.

They provide much of our livelihood but they steal our solitude. They drool over the delights in our shop windows, but they trample our petunias. They are welcomed with open arms, but they cause us to lock our doors.

But that's all right. At least they're back.

Now if the evening temperatures will warm up a little. Then, when they troop down to the beach to soak in one of those patented sunsets, we won't have to call them Fudgsicles.

Cheer for pier

Clockwise BY BOB CLOCK

I have a hunch that not too many Charlevoixans are acquainted with the North Pier, because I see very few of them out there unless they are fishing.

But North Pier has become a favorite destination on my evening walks.

To tell the truth, I really didn't discover the pier until last summer when my niece, Mary Held, spent a week with her family at one of Oscar Stroud's cabins on Lake Charlevoix.

For Mary, the day couldn't end without a stroll to the end of the pier to get a good, long, close look at Lake Michigan. Mary lives in Plymouth and finds a beauty and tranquillity in the Great Lakes that most of us take for granted.

What's there to see from the pier besides miles of open water?

Lots.

Fishing boats returning to Round Lake after a day's outing.

The twinkling lights of freighters far out in the shipping lanes.

The connect-the-dots lights of the Medusa Cement Plant across the bay.

The intermittent signal of South Point beacon.

Spectacular sunsets.

Turn around and there are the lights of Charlevoix's waterfront condominiums — the Dunes, La Croft, the Lakehouse, the Sandcastle, the Captain's Watch.

Of course there's alwayss Pine River Channel, with its mysterious rippling currents traveling both east and west at the same time.

After a storm it's fun to see what new debris the waves have deposited on the massive rocks that protect the pier. You'll find parts of wrecked boats and docks, tree trunks, and assorted pieces of wind and water scoured lumber that once were a part of something nautical somewhere on the lakes.

After the next storm they'll be gone, but additional flotsam and jetsam will take their place.

FOR YEARS, of course, the North Pier was not exactly a place to take an evening walk, unless you were a mountain goat. The entire length of the pier consisted of rock cribs with a platform at the end.

A few years ago, however, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers reconstructed the pier, adding a substantial concrete cap with sturdy tubular steel railings.

Unfortunately, the railings — particularly along the section past the "dog-leg" — haven't been sturdy enough to cope with spring storms and their multi-ton ice floes.

Several sections of railing have been folded almost flat by massive floes that have been dropped onto the pier by towering waves.

Two winters ago, the standard for the flashing white light at the end of the pier was so badly damaged that it had to be replaced. The old four-footed standard has been succeeded by a pedestal model, which seems to work better. At least it's still standing.

Ice has tilted the lighthouse housing the steady red beacon on the South Pier seven degrees out of perpendicular — but the light still serves its purpose in guiding mariners into the channel. But even that slight variance has been duly noted in the official Notice to Mariners.

Of course a walk on the pier can be dangerous when winds are howling, seas are high or the surface of the pier is slicked with ice and snow. Furthermore, little children shouldn't be allowed on the pier at any time unless accompanied by an adult who also is a strong swimmer.

However, during the mild winter just ended I have made at least one excursion to the end of the pier every month, with the exception of February. And I didn't even get my feet wet.

The pier can be reached from downtown by taking the underbridge walkway in front Edgewater Inn, and following the lighted sidewalk along the channel.

'Round Town

Watercolor painting captures Round Lake

EDITH GILBERT

Mike Holmes, owner of the Appletree, is pretty excited about the new Kathleen Chaney Fritz print that's displayed in the store window. It's the companion picture to the popular Waterfront Art Fair scene, which sold like hot cakes! The watercolor is a view from Round Lake of East Park, including city docks, sailboats, Bridge Street, and the water tower off in the distance. Predictions are that the limited, signed and numbered edition will be all gone before the end of the summer.

It's time we talk about auditoriums! Last week I attended the most delightful performance of "The Music Man" in the Petoskey High School auditorium. It was so well done, one had to constantly pinch oneself to remember that these actors were high school students. True, our talented Charlevoix students have also received thunderous applause when they performed "Oklahoma" and "Fiddler on the Roof." Then what was the big difference? It was the fact that in Petoskey the play was given in an auditorium on a stage with lights, curtains and the kind of seats that produce an effect that isn't possible to achieve in any gymansium.

Is Charlevoix too small a community to afford an auditorium? Wrong! Last week I attended a marvelous jazz concert at the Boyne City Elementary School that has a fine auditorium.

Besides, if you want to turn back the clock, both Charlevoix and East Jordan had opera houses at the turn of the century for a variety of touring performances.

Isn't it strange that with all our growth–all the developments, the condos, the industry, the shops–that there is no auditorium with comfortable seats in Charlevoix? An auditorium where the public can attend lectures, plays, concerts; dance performances, operas and graduation exercises? Think about it while you are sitting in the bleachers on Sunday, June 7 when they hand out diplomas.

A salute to a savvy woman, a woman who proves you can have it all–career and family.

Pat Ranger was very surprised and thrilled when she was selected teacher of the year by the student body of North Central Michigan College. A bronze and walnut placque was presented to her at the graduation ceremony. A full-time instuctor of sociology, political science and speech, Pat says it was an exciting year to teach. The class was outstanding because it was composed of students of all ages and of varied backgrounds, and they had so much to offer, with a high percentage going on to get their BA's.

It's interesting to note that 24 percent of the graduates come from Charlevoix.

Pat herself is an outstanding product of the Charlevoix school system. She was valedictorian in 1954 and received a scholarship to Sarah Lawrence. She spent her junior year in Paris at the Sorbonne, graduating in 1958. I attended her beautiful wedding in 1964 to Alvin Ranger, who also graduated from Charlevoix High School and went on to U of M. They had 4 children in 4 years –Arthur, Corinne, Robert and William, also all Charlevoix High School graduates, who moved on to get their university degrees.

But that's not all! During these hectic, child bearing years, Pat also managed to get her MA from the University of Michigan. I remember, it was a race against time for awhile–her professor was a bit on edge as she waddled into class during her ninth month of pregnancy with No. 4 child.

In my book, Pat Ranger is not only teacher of the year–but mother of the year, wife of the year, and a fun-loving, great human being of the year.

Beacons of Blessing

Mark 10:16 tells us, "then He took the children in His arms, placed His hands on each of them and blessed them" (TEV). Human beings need to touch, to cuddle, to hold, to stroke and to soothe one another in order to grow and be nurtured in good health.

Jesus set an example for us. He took the children in his arms. He hugged them. I like to think the children also hugged Him – that they nurtured each other. I even like to think that Jesus played with them. What joy they must have had together!

Jesus knew of our great human need to touch. He shared that need. So it seems that one of our tasks as those commissioned to carry on Jesus' work is to help people to be free to touch.

We must continue to touch, to hug our children – to hug one another – or our spirits will wither up and die. Let's teach ourselves to live with touch – boldly and caringly – just as Jesus did. God bless you one and all real good.

Rayder boys win pre-district baseball game

The Charlevoix Raydcrs defeated Travese City St. Francis 5-2 in a pre-district game Friday to advance to the district tournament at Kalkaska.

Shawn Putman was the winning pitcher doing an outstanding job, coach Brian Certa said. "It was an all-round great effort on the part of the team... hitting, pitching, fielding and base running were all outstanding. They really came through," Certa said.

Putman pitched a two hitter and had seven strikeouts.

The Rayders scored two runs in the bottom of the first and a third in the second inning for a 3-0 lead. A Traverse two-run homer in the bottom of the third cut the score to 3-2 but the Rayders came back in the fifth to go ahead 4-2. In the fifth Charlevoix added one more run for the 5-2 win.

Mike Thompson had a single, Scott Denny two singles, Kent Seymour a double, Steve Hopkins and Dan Drury one single apiece for the Rayders.

Certa said Hopkins and Nick Mellios were outstanding on defense.

Earlier in the week, the Rayders posted a pair of victories over Central Lake, 4-3 and 14-1.

The first game was a close one all the way with Central Lake scoring a run in the top of the third to take the lead. The Rayders scored two runs in the bottom of the inning only to have the Trojans go ahead 3-2 in the fourth inning.

It wasn't until the bottom of the fifth that Charlevoix scored two more runs for the victory.

Jim Tilton in relief, was the winning pitcher, Certa said, adding that he did a good job and pulled out the win. Corey Richardson had started.

Nick Mellios had two singles, Mike Thompson and Richardson singles and Scott Denny a double.

In the second game, the Rayders were on a hitting spree, scoring 14 runs on eight hits. Dave Loder allowed one hit, a single.

Charlevoix scored five runs in the second inning, six in the third and three in the fifth inning. The visitors' single run eame in the top of the fifth inning.

John Grey had a two-run homer, the first in his career, as did Mike Wise, Mellios a double and Loder, Kent Seymour, Bob Jess and Chad Thorp had singles.

"It was an excellent game defensively. Gray did a good job behind the plate. There was good defense all the way. It was a good win to take us into the pre-districts," Certa said.

Girls lose pre-district in softball to Harbor

The Rayder softball team dropped its pre-district game to the favored Harbor Springs Rams by a 10-3 score in a game played at Harbor.

"The girls tried but they were up against a team that was strong, especially in pitching, which is our weak point," coach Becky Gengle said.

Charlevoix scored early, sending one player across the plate in the first inning. Harbor, however, came back to score three runs in the bottom of the first and added two in the second and two in the third for a 7-1 lead.

The Rayders scored twice more in the top of the fifth inning. Harbor wrapped up the win with three more runs in the bottom of the fifth to advance to the disrict tournament at Kalkaska.

Ann Kroll, who took the pitching loss, gave up 10 hits and four walks.

Amy Antaya had two triples, Jennifer Sell, Kroll and Anne Smith had singles.

Seniors on the team who played their final regular season games at Rogers City on Tuesday were Antaya, Smith, Kroll, Sell, Heidi Bolduc and Beth Maue.

The Charlevoix Rayder girls track team came in third in the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference meet at Gaylord.

"Barbie (Boss) and Michelle (North) came through like you wouldn't believe. Michelle ran the best races of her life and Barbie, as always, was great."

Boss had first in the 100 and 200 and the 1600-meter relay team of Amy Pischner, Betsy Haggard, North and Boss had a first in the last event in the meet.

Ailing Rayders nipped in league meet

The Rayder track team came in second in the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference meet missing the title by five points.

Gaylord with 128 points copped the title. The Rayders had 123.

"We were hurting," coach Hal Evans said. "We were without Doug Bergmann, our distance man, who is recovering from a bad foot injured when he ran the major part of the 3200 without a shoe in the regional.

"Another distance runner, Pat Rajewski, was suffering from a pulled calf muscle. Despite all this, I think the boys did very well. I'm satisfied with their performances."

The Rayders did take six firsts with Jason Whitley taking the pole vault and the low hurdles and Jim Gibbs the 400. The 400-, 800- and 1600-meter relay teams also won.

Yachting Notes

A. NONY MOUSE

The Charlevoix Yacht Club's 1987 racing season began Wednesday, May 20, with lackluster winds off Two-Mile Point. The little breeze that blew during the windward leg barely ruffled the telltales but, by the fourth leg, most crews would have paid dearly for its return.

The racing instructions state that for a race to be scored for a particular fleet, "the first to cross the finish line must do so within the three-hour time limit" and, for this first race, the JAM fleet would prefer to forget it, as flash, skippered by John Gordon of Petoskey finished 1 minute and 27 seconds too late despite his feverish attempt to drive the P-30 faster than the wind would allow. However, the order of finish of the JAMmers was Flash, Cheemaun, and Kittiwake. Good luck next week, guys.

The first fleet of spinnaker boats brought home Traveller, sailed by Dave Irish, Respite, Gotcha, Night Moves, Columbine, Tigger, Pygmalion and Miss Mintie with that crazy guy in the Michigan beanie at the helm.

Josh "Black Bandit" Barnes took honors in the second chute fleet, followed by Cygnus, Blasen Elf and Tireless. "Where are the Miller's, Jim and Mike?"

Next week should find us with a new committee boat as Commodore Coolman has arranged for the club purchase of a pontoon boat. We hope to have it on station for next week's start.

Water sports safety classes slated

Living in Charlevoix County, with lakes in all directions, can mean many opportunities for water sports and fun for children and teenagers.

A program to add safety to some of the fun is being started this summer at Depot Beach by three local organizations. The Charlevoix County Youth Activities Program, the Charlevoix Yacht Club, and the Lake Charlevoix Mariners are sponsoring classes in sailing.

The program, which will begin Monday, June 29, will use "puffers" as the sailing craft and will include two divisions, one for children from 8 to 13 and one for teenagers.

The younger group will sail from 10 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. Monday through Friday for two weeks or longer. The children will learn to sail through the use of daily chalk talks, on-shore drills, and every day on-the-water practice. They will be closely supervised by adult instructors and must wear life jackets when on the water.

While learning, they will progress through seven ranks from seaman third class to skipper, with the small steps in between indicating success and building self confidence.

To be eligible for these sailing classes, children must be advanced beginner swimmers. The cost is $90 for two weeks, and a payment schedule can be worked out for those who request it. The plan is to accommodate every child in the county who can pass the swimming requirement and wants to learn to sail.

Teenagers will sail afternoons from 1:45 to 4, following the same routine as the younger children. The more advanced, stronger students may be placed with a Charlevoix Yacht Club racing skipper for a taste of adult racing. The teen program also runs for two weeks and costs $90. Those participating must be advanced beginner swimmers.

In addition to the program for children and teenagers, there will be adult sailing classes from 6 to 9 p.m. two evenings a week. This program was designed mainly for parents of children in the other programs.

Depending on demand, both classes will be for beginners during June and July. Students will sail two to a boat, wearing life jackets, and an instructor will accompany the class in a power boat. On-shore lessons will precede each boat session. As with the younger students, swimming ability is required for adult classes.

Subject matters included in the beginning classes are sailing terms, how to rig a boat, leaving and returning to dock, sailing at various angles to the wind, turning around, how to avoid spills, rules of the road, basic knots, and care of equipment.

In the intermediate classes, students will learn about sail trimming for speed, capsizing, racing, racing rules, types of sailboats, and avoiding trouble.

While each training session will last two weeks, it is hoped that there will be enough students for at least three sessions during the summer.

Anne Wilderom, from the Little Traverse Yacht Club in Harbor Springs, will direct the sailing program.

Two certified sailing instructors, Lanie Wilderom and Greg Wolski, will work with her.

A special ramp for the dock at Depot Beach to accommodate the students is being constructed by the Department of Natural Resources.

The whole sailing program has been designated a County Sesquicentennial Project (taking its students back to the days when sailing was the major method of transportation in Michigan).

For further information and to register for the sailing program, contact Mike Davis at the Youth Activities Program in the County Building Annex, phone 547-5930.

Former Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District superintendent Charles A. Robinson (left) joined present superintendent James S. Shepard in welcoming guests to the 25th anniversary party. The pair are the only superintendents Char-Em has had since the state formed ISD's in 1962.

Nuclear plant back in operation

The Big Rock Point nuclear power plant was back in operation Thursday – three days after shutting down to make repairs.

The plant shut down and was disconnected from the Consumers Power electricity distribution grid Monday afternoon.

It was discovered that morning that steam and water were leaking from the primary cooling system at a higher than normal rate.

Repairs were made, and at 2 a.m. Thursday heat-up of the reactor began. The generator was reconnected to the grid at 10:50 a.m., and full power restored around midnight.

Darrell Linder talks to Chamber of Commerce members about making a good first impression. Linder will be one of the speakers at an upcoming workshop.

Workshop focuses on giving customers good impression

The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, in cooperation with the Charlevoix County office of the Cooperative Extension Service of Michigan State University will host a workshop, "First Impressions – Never a Second Chance" Wednesday, June 3, at Grey Gables Inn.

Two sessions have been scheduled, the first from 9 a.m. until noon and the second from 6:30 until 9:30 p.m.

Chamber executive secretary, Jacqui Merta said the workshop is designed for management and employees who deal with customers and guests.

"As the title indicates, first impressions are what count in dealing with customers, no matter what your business, because you never get a second opportunity," Merta said.

Topics such as customer relations skills, the importance of tourism, knowing your community and tips for giving directions will be among the areas discussed.

Phil Alexander, district extension tourism agent; Janet Rathke, cooperative extension home economist; Darrell Linder, publicist; Hal M. Hill, former mayor; and Rod Cortright, county extension agent, will be among those conducting the workshop.

Further information may be obtained by calling the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce at 547-2101.

Those planning to attend are asked to indicate which session they plan to attend.

Library Notes from the Charlevoix Public Library

by Marybeth Wallick

Please bear with me, folks. We have had books donated to us on economics, about which I know next to nothing, but I will attempt to review anyway. Why let ignorance stand in your way?

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Heininger, in response to my inquiries about basic up-to-date information on economics, checked with people "in the know" and donated the following five books. Thank you, Ken and Jeanne.

Greed Is Not Enough: Reaganomics by Robert Lekachman has been given very good reviews. Lekachman, in a witty style, provides a much-needed overview and critique of the causes, shape and consequences of Reagan's economic policy. With admirable evenhandedness he skewers the supply-siders – Lafer, Stockman – with the same verve as he does the conservative monetarists.

The Economic Illusion by Robert Kuttner discusses the historical choices between a welfare state and capitalism. Kuttner has investigated the present circumstances of Sweden, West Germany and Japan and, on the other had, Great Britain and the U.S. and concludes the most egalitarian countries (welfare states) are also the most productive.

The Next American Frontier by Robert B. Reich, shows a grasp, with tremendous depth, of what is the present reality of the change technology has wrought worldwide in business, social welfare, and politics. He states that we can no longer separate issues of social welfare from the economic growth and development. Reich presents an inspired program for turning the American economy around while improving our quality of life.

Federal Budget Deficits: America's Great Consumption Binge by Paul Courant is a thin volume packed with practical information. How should a deficit be measured? Why are some deficits good and some bad? How does one tell a good one from a bad one? Courant answers these questions in a clearly-written, jargon-free approach to a confusing subject. With the aid of a glossary and appendices and an index that illustrate difficult points and technical terms, this book is accessible to readers with little or no background in economics.

Economics by Richard G. Lipsey, is an updated traditional text on economics. It covers a basic definition of economics and the stardards of supply and demand, markets and pricing, the national income and fiscal policy, and international trade and finance and rounding off with comparing systems of economic growth.

Lake panel wraps up plan work

At a meeting quieter than many they held during the last 2½ years, members of the Lake Charlevoix Management Advisory Committee last week adopted a draft plan for management of the lake and accepted two minority reports submitted by committee members.

The minority reports were written by John Haggard of Charlevoix Township and William Grimm of Boyne City.

Members of the committee, most of whom represents a city or township bordering Lake Charlevoix, have been asked to take the plan to their own city council or township board for review and comment.

The plan, along with the minority reports, will also be submitted to the county planning commission on Thursday, June 4, and to the county board of commissioners on Wednesday, June 10.

Following review by government bodies, public hearings will be scheduled in July in Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City.

Suggestions and changes growing out of the hearings will be considered before the final plan is submitted to the county board of commissioners for action.

Among the recommendations in the report are establishing a system allowing for the transfer of dockage rights between properties and establishing a Lake Charlevoix Authority made up of local governmental bodies, users of lake facilities and the general public.

Time capsule will contain bits of Charlevoix 1987

In observance of Michigan's sesquecentennial, the Charlevoix Area Historical Society will bury a time capsule Tuesday, June 2.

President Louis Orlowski said a special stainless steel capsule was constructed by Will-Flow Corp. The capsule is 30 inches deep and 20 inches in diameter, has an O-ring to seal it and has an inner container.

Material to be buried includes copies of the Charlevoix Courier and the Petoskey News-Review, a message from today's city officials to those of 2037 when the capsule is scheduled to be opened, information about the Class of 1987 of Charlevoix High School and stamps in use in 1987 provided by Postmistress Sheila Murphy.

Also included will be coins donated by Charlevoix County State Bank, a news release of the event on videotape supplied by WWTV in Cadillac, information supplied by the Chamber of Commerce, pictures of Charlevoix as it is today, and the history of the Charlevoix Area Historical Society.

"There may be other things added but that's what we have now," Orlowski said. He said this year's graduating class has been invited to attend "because they will be around to open the capsule in 2037."

The public is invited to attend the ceremony at 103 State St. at 7 p.m. Tuesday, June 2. A meeting of the Historical Society will follow at Harsha House at 8 p.m.

The program will feature Ruth Ann (Bedford) Curtis relating the story of the sinking of the passenger vessel Champlain off Fisherman's Island in Lake Michigan on June 17, 1887, with heavy loss of life.

Her grandmother, Mrs. Harrison Bedford Sr., survived the fire and sinking. Her aunt, Ella Smith, was lost in the tragedy.

12 from area going to 50th Boys State

Twelve Charlevoix High School junior boys will be attending the 50th annual American Legion Boys State under the sponsorship of the Leslie T. Shapton Post No. 226 of Charlevoix, said Louis McKenzie, post Boys State chairman.

To mark the 50th anniversary of Boys State, a special program has been planned for the seven-day event to be held on the Michigan State University campus in East Lansing beginning June 18.

The purpose of Boys State is to introduce young men to the grass roots of government that they will become interested in government on the local level and eventually on a county, state and federal level.

For many years, the local post of the American Legion has sponsored the attendance of its youth at Boys State. In 1983, the local post was recognized for its participation in the program, said Ray Wood, district Boys State chairman. Max Novak of Charlevoix is a member of Boys State Committee.

Local businesses, industries and individuals join with the local American Legion post in offering financial support to the program.

This year financial support has been contributed by Medusa Cement Co., Hoskins Manufacturing Co., Charlevoix Manufacturing Co., Charlevoix Lions Club, Charlevoix Kiwanis Club, Father Pierre Charlevoix, Knights of Columbus, Charlevoix Jaycees, Dr. Merle O. Plagge, Charlevoix Education Association, Charlevoix Volunteer Fire Department, Charlevoix County State Bank and First State Bank.

Changes are being made in the way long distance users in your area place some operator-handled calls.

What's this about changes in how we get operator assistance on long distance calls?
No big deal. Just call your long distance company for instructions... like it says in this ad.

These changes affect Michigan Bell customers having phone numbers beginning with 547.

This is an informational message about your phone service from Mike Reid, your Michigan Bell Corporate Affairs Manager.

"These telephone service changes concern only operator-handled long distance calls outside your Michigan Bell long distance calling area. They apply to collect, credit card, person-to-person calls, calls billed to a third number, and requests for assistance. Some customers will need to contact their long distance companies for new instructions on how to place such calls. To find out if and how the service changes may affect your service, we ask you to read the following explanation."

An explanation of the changes in your operator-assistance service for calls outside your Michigan Bell long distance calling area (interLATA calls).

How operator-assisted calls were placed before. If you wanted operator assistance to place a long distance call, you dialed "0," or "0" plus the area code (if required), and the phone number you wanted and an operator put the call through for you.

How these calls are placed now. If the long distance service on the phone you are using is provided by a company that offers operator services and you want operator assistance to place a call, you dial "0," plus the area code (if required), and the phone number and an operator will assist you. To reach the long distance operator for additional assistance, you must dial "00." (Important: If you dial "0" without the phone number, you will get a Michigan Bell operator who can place calls within your Michigan Bell area only.)

If the long distance service on the phone you're using is provided by a long distance company that does not offer operator services, you must contact that long distance company to get instructions on how to place operator-assisted long distance calls.

Please note: If you dial "0," plus the area code, and the number, you may get a recording or no response. Further, if you dial "0" without the number, you will get a Michigan Bell operator who will refer you to your long distance company for further instructions.

If you are calling from a pay phone, continue to use the instructions posted on the phone.

Again, you should contact your long distance company for new instructions on how to place operator-handled long distance calls outside your Michigan Bell calling area. If you have any other questions about the changes, please call Michigan Bell's Let's Talk Center. The toll-free number is 1 800 555-5000.

Please watch your Michigan Bell bill inserts for further information.

FRESH-WATER ADVENTURE

Larry Capune paddles his 17-foot surfboard toward Michigan Beach. The board was specially built for the record-setter 22 years ago by Hobie Alter. Capune has travelled more than 78,000 miles on the 17-inch wide, eight-inch deep board.

Paddleboard expert garners records, tales

by DON DIBLEY

Larry Capune walks back into the water at Michigan Beach, takes a drink and smiles.

"You can't do that anywhere in California. Not even in any of the inland lakes," he says.

Larry Capune knows water. He has traveled more than 78,000 miles on it – by hand.

That's right, by hand. On a specially built Hobie surfboard, he lies on his stomach for hours at a time, paddling with his hands.

It can be a chore, but it can also be an adventure. And he has had adventures – from scary encounters with freighters and sharks to friendly encounters with the Kennedys and President Reagan.

His modern-day adventures do have a practical side – showing kids there are alternatives to drugs.

He's just beginning his second longest journey – 4,000 miles from Chicago to Washington, D.C. The trip will take him through four Great Lakes, the St. Lawrence Seaway and down the Atlantic Ocean.

He's familiar with the Atlantic. Three times before he has tackled its waters, once during a 4,255-mile, 317-day trip from Portland, Maine, to Corpus Christi, Texas.

He's also familiar with the Pacific – three journeys there include a 2,005-mile, 89-day trip from Vancouver, British Columbia, to San Diego.

But he's not familiar with the Great Lakes, at least not yet.

"People warned us to stay away from the Great Lakes," his twin Marty says. "They're too polluted. They're too dirty."

But Larry says that just isn't the case, not even around Chicago, which he left May 11.

Nation-trotting twins discover city's delights

Larry and Marty Capune have been a lot of places.

Larry, long-distance paddleboard champion, has seen just about every beach and just about every shoreline town along the Pacific, Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

Marty, his 44-year-old twin, has seen the big cities of America when, among other things, handling promotion and marketing for the Electric Light Orchestra.

But when the two southern Californians burried into Charlevoix for what was meant to be a quick rest stop on a record-setting challenge, they decided to slow down for a day.

The pair explored the town and discovered many little surprises that residents and tourists often miss.

"Hey, look at this," Larry said as he practically climbed a pole to look at the individual painted, wood letters nailed to a street sign.

"You said they looked like 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs' ' houses, but they really do look like 'Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs' ' houses," said Marty – who lived next to a Disney animator as a youth – as they walked all the way around a block containing Earl Young creations.

Their pleasant impressions of Charlevoix began at Michigan Beach, where Larry landed during his 4,000-mile paddleboard journey from Chicago to Washington, D.C.

Larry, travelling by hand-power on water, and Marty, travelling by mini-bus on land as his brother's spotter, have been marvelling at the beauty of west Michigan.

What struck Larry right away, he says, was how pretty – and clean – the beaches are. In Illinois and Indiana, he says, the beaches are covered with bottles.

When he gets home, another six months from now, he says, he is going to call his legislator to let him

Coast Guard cutting back boardings

by SARA GAY DAMMANN

The Coast Guard 9th District headquarters has sent word to its Great Lakes station chiefs to cut back on the previously ordered intensification of boardings of pleasure boats.

Reacting to public outcry over last fall's Coast Guard-mandated increase in boat boardings and safety inspections as part of the war on drug traffic, Capt. James Butler, Coast Guard 9th District chief of staff, told The Courier, "We do not want pleasure boaters harassed."

"If you are out on a pleasure cruise on a Sunday afternoon, you should not expect to be boarded by the Coast Guard," Butler said, in an apparent reversal of policy mandated last year.

The captain said he was speaking for the 9th District Coast Guard commandant, Adm. Arnold Danielsen.

Butler, who is second in command for the 9th District, headquartered in Cleveland, made the statement in direct response to news stories surrounding boater reaction to increased pleasure boat boardings on the Great Lakes.

One Charlevoix pleasure sailor, Cliff Biddick Jr., refused the Coast Guard permission to board his boat for a routine safety check on May 14.

Biddick, a well-known sailor and frequent instructor of Coast Guard safety classes, had anticipated refusing the Coast Guard permission to board after observing some 40 boardings of pleasure boats last fall.

Biddick allowed the Coast Guard to board his sailboat after he was informed force would be used if necessary. He was cited for several minor safety violations and was required to undergo a second inspection at the Charlevoix Coast Guard station before being permitted to sail his boat.

Biddick announced he would launch a challenge to the Coast Guard's right to board under an almost 200-year-old federal law, Title 14, No. 89. He said he would take his case to the Supreme Court and would fight to have the law changed in Congress.

Biddick argues that boaters' constitutional rights are violated by the Coast Guard's apparent unrestrained right to conduct safety checks or full-blown drug searches without any prior suspicion of illegal activity.

Butler carefully stated, "The law doesn't need changing, just the application of the law."

During an hour's exclusive interview in the Sault Ste. Marie Coast Guard Group Headquarters, Butler explained the Coast Guard boarding policy and how it had become a public relations problem for the agency.

"There was a nationwide threat of cocaine and crack trafficking. We had intelligence of trafficking on the Great Lakes," Butler said.

"We stepped up boat boardings, but less than one-half of one percent of all the boardings found any contraband," Butler continued.

"The Coast Guard studied the situation over the winter. Boaters were up in arms. The commandant of the Coast Guard, Admiral Yost, took a close look at the situation and determined the risk-benefit was just not there."

Butler said Coast Guard stations were informed they should return to their traditional roles of search and rescue and continue boardings as checks for proper safety equipment.

Butler acknowledges that the number of boardings remained significantly higher than boaters were accustomed to expect. He also acknowledged that boaters were not used to coast guardsmen wearing side arms and in some cases carrying shotguns or M-16 rifles.

"I would be very uncomfortable as a father if I was asked to walk into the bilges while an 18-year-old had a shotgun on deck with my children."

Referring to the Biddick protest, Butler said that as Biddick had returned to the Charlevoix station and "took care of any discrepancies in a re-inspection, it is unlikely the Coast Guard would pursue charges for his violations."

Informed of this, Biddick told The Courier he would "continue to fight to have limits placed on the law which gives the Coast Guard blanket rights to board vessels at any time. The charges against me are not particularly relevant. The law should be changed."

School vote: 3 renewals on ballot

School district residents will vote on three tax renewals Monday, June 8.

Two levies are for one year – a 15.25-mill request for money to operate the schools and a 1.25-mill request for funds to make facilities repairs.

The third tax is a five-year, half-mill request to fund the city library, which is owned and operated by the school district.

The requests are for the same tax rates as in recent years.

The only other moneys the school district receives are 9.1 mills from a county allocation and 1.13 mills for debt retirement – which also come from property taxes – and a small amount from the state for transportation. This year, that was $17,600.

Charlevoix Schools' total tax rate is about eight mills lower than the state average, Superintendent Gordon Van Wieren said, while its expenditures per pupil are a little above average. The district spends about $3,500 per student.

Because some tax money from a downtown development area and the Ferry Beach area are going into special projects initiated by the city for those areas, the school district will not be receiving about $100,000 in revenues from those areas.

And because of the Headlee Amendment to the state constitution which ties non-voted tax increases to cost of living increases, another $39,000 will not be collected.

However, Van Wieren said, added revenue from new construction and operating cost cutbacks – such as a decrease of one or two teachers next year – will keep revenues in line with expenditures.

"We are trying to keep the enriched curriculum and programs going, because people seem to want them," said school board president Max Novak.

Nearly all of the high school students participate in some extra-curricular activities, Business Manager Vince Olach said, and an estimated 85 percent take part in organized sports.

The school district operates on a budget of just over $5 million a year, with an expected increase next year of one percent.

A one-mill tax equals $1 for every $1,000 in state equalized valuation (SEV) on property, with the SEV set by law at 50 percent of the property's market value.

So the owner of a $50,000 house would be paying $600 in taxes to the school district – including that

School board: Ex-mayor vs. incumbent

Two candidates are seeking election to one vacancy on the Charlevoix Board of Education at the Monday, June 8, election.

Kenneth A. Staley, 64, is opposing incumbent Robert Drenth, 50, who is seeking re-election after serving on the board for six years.

Both are natives of the area, both were high school athletes and both had children who have graduated from Charlevoix schools and went on to college.

Staley is a former councilman and county commissioner, former mayor for three terms and an appointee to the planning commission. He is a retired grocer.

Drenth is a master plumber and a heating and plumbing contractor.

Staley said he became a candidate so he could actively participate in the educational process.

His main concern relates to a proposed change in school financing being considered in the legislature. He said it is important any change be thoroughly understood by the school board which should then convey the information to the general public for directions.

He feels local support is important because the success of the system depends on public approval.

The pressing needs at the present, he said, are competition for the tax dollar, increased enrollment and complying with state and federal directives.

Drenth said he is a candidate because he loves children and the time he spends working with the board is well spent.

He said the present method of funding is fair, especially if the money remains in the local district. "Every time we send money to Lansing, we never seem to get our fair share back," he said.

Drenth said he feels the local school is doing an outstanding job of preparing college-bound students the he is disappointed more students do not enroll in vocational programs.

He said declining enrollment and staffing and the loss of funds for education to other agencies are among the most pressing problems facing the school district.

Polls at Charlevoix Elementary School on Division Avenue will be open from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m. Monday, June 8. Absentee ballots are available at the business office at 208 Clinton St. until 2 p.m. Saturday, June 6.

Charlevoix Yesterday

Yes, this is Pine River Channel, Round Lake and Lake Charlevoix as they appeared over 50 years ago. Ralph Hamilton, who loaned us the picture, writes, "This shows the log boom at the lumber company, also the Opera House and Argo Mill, Booth Fisheries, and I believe it is the SS Manitou that is docked. I cannot identify the ship entering the harbor. I think this is in the early 30s because the Chicago Club boat houses are evident.'"

Work under way on 2nd try at county zoning ordinance

by PEG OHLE

Charlevoix County may once again have a county zoning ordinance.

At the request of the county chapter of the Michigan Townships Association and suggestions from several townships, the county planning commission is devoting part of its monthly meetings to reviewing sections of a proposed ordinance.

At its May meeting, the commission reviewed the Definitions section.

"We are doing a little each month and hope that by the end of the summer we will have the text part finished so we can start on the map," County Planner Larry Sullivan told the Courier.

Those who have lived in the county for some time will remember that a county zoning ordinance was passed in 1972, only to be defeated in a referendum vote nine months later.

However, immediately following this defeat, most townships in the county passed their own zoning ordinances, based largely on the county ordinance, but with variations as they saw fit.

Walter Thorsen of East Jordan, was chairman of the county planning commission when the county Ordinance was written, passed, and defeated.

"People in the townships just weren't ready for county zoning then, he says. "It was too new. They didn't want to give up local rule.

They were thinking in terms of 'Nobody can tell me what I can do with my property.'

"Also, we had rather strict regulations for mobile homes. Now state law treats mobile homes the same as any other home and local ordinances must follow the state law."

Thorsen and Sullivan expressed similar thoughts about the renewed interest in county zoning. Sullivan explained, "Most people have come to believe in zoning but they have also come to realize that it is often too big a job for a township.

Township boards are having trouble getting people to serve as zoning administrators or on township planning commissions. People don't want to tell their neighbors what they have to do. And the whole job of administration and enforcement is not only time-consuming but expensive."

Thorsen, a real estate salesman, is critical of the differences in zoning ordinances, even ordinances of adjoining townships.

"They don't coordinate," he says. "Township boards change and new boards have different interpretations of zoning regulations."

The county planning commission is using present township zoning ordinances, zoning recommendations made to townships in the last few years, and other local criteria in writing the new county zoning ordinance.

"We're going to have more zoning districts than the old ordinance had," Sullivan said, "because there seems to be a need for them in our area."

If and when a new county zoning ordinance goes into effect, townships will be given a choice of adopting it or continuing administering their own separate township ordinance.

This choice was not available to Charlevoix County townships under the earlier county zoning ordinance, but this system of choice has apparently worked well in Emmet County for some time, according to planning officials.

Sullivan expressed the hope that those townships continuing with their own ordinances would change them to become as much like the county ordinance as possible, for the sake of uniformity.

The process of writing a county zoning ordinance and following it through is a long one. It entails approval by two-thirds of the townships in the county as well as approval by the county board of commissioners.

The process has only just begun.

Painting missing from Harbour Club

A painting of the old Brow Marina is missing from the Harbour Club.

The four-foot by three-foot painting by Reed Ray is owned by Rick Lobenherz and was loaned to the condominium association. The marina was made over into the Harbour Club.

Anyone with information about the missing painting, which was on a wall near the elevator entrance, is being asked to call Lobenherz or the city police.

4-mill city repair tax hike OK'd by council

by DON DIBLEY

A balmy Monday night got more heated when a handful of residents challenged city council's plans to raise taxes up to four mills.

In the end, the increase – which hikes taxes paid to the city by 28 percent from 13.22 mills to 17.09 mills – was approved on a 4-2 vote.

Council members Bill Bellows, Bill Haggard, Shirley Roloff and Bob Timms voted for the increase, while Earl Muma and Norm Probert voted against it.

The tax increase is for the first year of a planned five-year, $1.6 million program to repair and improve the city's infrastructure – roads, sidewalks, storm sewers and sanitary sewers.

Leading the charge for those opposed to the increase was Pete Phillips, who also led the opposition at a public hearing two weeks ago.

Phillips' theme was the council's inability to set priorities and his example was the purchase of the post office building.

"I find out tonight city council had the Downtown Development Authority buy the post office just so fire trucks can get out the back. That's where our money's going? That's a priority?" Phillips said.

Council member Bob Timms said the building was purchased for $75,000 because the new fire hall nearly encroached on the post office property and because original plans were to put the fire hall on the east side of City Hall.

What will be done with the building in the future depends on when the post office moves out, councilman Bill Bellows said.

It's not for this council to decide what a future council will do, said councilwoman Shirley Roloff.

"It's fiscally irresponsible to have no plan," Hagen Manker said, echoing Phillips' complaint.

The city can't do everything, Phillips said, it must set priorities. And he said he didn't see that any were being set.

"Management of money is not every time you go broke coming back and asking for more," he said.

Another section of the conversation revolved around the relationship between the DDA and the council.

The council is tying the hands of the DDA by doing such things as ordering the downtown group to buy the post office, Manker said.

Jeff Porter, a former councilman and a member of the DDA, said the panel's priorities have gotten switched around since it was formed.

Originally, he said, sidewalks were top priority, but now parking is.

Gene Steele of the DDA said the panel works at the pleasure of the council and when council's priorities change, the DDA's must, too.

The DDA was formed under a state law aimed at preventing deterioration and at promoting economic growth in business districts.

Prompting the dispute over the DDA's role was a letter to council from the chamber of commerce suggesting the downtown was neglected during the needs study because it had its own tax to provide funds for improvements.

City Manager Mike Wiesner said that was not the case, that several projects in the five-year plan affected the downtown area.

The 3.6-mill increase will be used to finance the first year of the five-year plan. Listed improvements this year are 18 paving projects and construction of a water main across the Pine River Channel.

Work in other years would be financed in a similar manner, but council approval of funding will come on a year-to-year basis.

Future projects include major storm sewer construction and reconstruction, new sidewalks (with the property owners paying 60 percent of the cost), water main construction, sanitary sewer construction and street reconstruction.

The plan was pared down by a 15-resident needs study committee from a 15-year, $3.9 million proposal made by the city staff.

"We should have been doing this 20 years ago," Roloff told Manker, who replied, "We should be making plans for 20 years from now so we don't have to tell our kids we need another four mills."

The fatal final minutes of the Razal Bros.

"The pilot and master yelled 'hard right rudder' at the same time and the third mate quickly put the rudder hard over to starboard. The master ran to the engine order telegraph and rang up 'stop engine.' "

This is not a scene from a sea novel or a war movie. It's part of a Coast Guard report into the deaths of three Upper Peninsula fishermen last Aug. 20 off Whiskey Island.

The report details how the fishing boat Razal Bros. was struck and sunk by a Yugoslavia freighter whose crew had watched the small vessel for nearly 50 minutes before the collision.

The report issued by Commander R.B. Harden, officer in charge of the Coast Guard marine inspection office at St. Ignace, details mistakes made by the Razal Bros. and by the Jablanica.

The report recommends further investigation into the roles of the Yugoslavian captain, Seman Franko, and those of Kenneth D. Gumrow, the American pilot on the ship.

Franko was brought back to Charlevoix to face criminal homicide charges, which were dropped when certain evidence was ruled inadmissable in court.

The report tells the tale of the last minutes of the Razal Bros. Here are excerpts from that report:

The Jablanica departed Chicago for Duluth on the afternoon of Aug. 19. The only cargo remaining on board was 1,500 metric tons of steel coil destined for Duluth.

At 9:40 a.m. Aug. 20 the ship was on autopilot. The third mate was on watch along with one seaman. The master (Franko) was on the bridge but not actively engaged in navigation.

Sometime around 10:30 a small vessel was first observed from the bridge. It could be seen both visually and on radar; and the master, third mate and pilot all noted its presence. Their recollection was that the small vessel was 9-10 miles away bearing 45 degrees off the port bow when first sighted.

Although there were a few remarks about the other vessel, they concerned only its presence and location. During the early period of observation, their general impression was that the small vessel was on a parallel course and headed in the same direction as the ship.

No one on the bridge plotted the other vessel's position to determine its true course and speed or closest point of approach.

All three men observed the small vessel periodically and judged its motion by bearing change and "seaman's eye."

About 10:45 opposite Gull Island, the third mate brought the ship around to starboard and reset the autopilot. During the next 35 minutes, two small course changes were made.

As the master, third mate and pilot continued to observe the other vessel, it became apparent that the small vessel had a slow bearing drift to starboard and the range was closing.

It was also apparent the courses of the two vessels were convergent rather than parallel.

They could see the starboard side of the boat and across the stern. They noted that the starboard door and stern door were open but could see no sign of any person on the Razal Bros.

The pilot reported he attempted to contact the small vessel about 11:05 by calling it on channel 16, but no response was heard. He reported he again tried about 11:10 and later at 11:15, all with negative results.

Two other vessel operators in the area believed to have been monitoring channel 16 reported they did not hear any calls identified as coming from the Jablanica.

A Coast Guard recording of radio traffic in the region also failed to indicate any traffic originating from the Jablanica and trying to contact a fishing vessel. General traffic was heavy on channel 16, and there were instances of one operator "stepping on" or drowning out another's transmissions.

At some time estimated at 11:00 to 11:15, the third mate switched off the automatic pilot and assumed the duties of helmsman. About 11:19 the pilot blew one long blast of approximately 10 seconds on the ship's whistle. Although the pilot was on the port bridge wing, he heard no response from the small vessel nor did he see anything to indicate any change in its speed or course.

At the time of the long blast the small vessel's range was approximately 500 yards.

Shortly after the single blast, a very slight change in the small vessel's course to its starboard became perceptible to the master, third mate and pilot.

With the fishing vessel continuing to turn toward the bow of the ship, the pilot sounded five short blasts on the ship's whistle with the small vessel at about 200 yards.

The pilot and master yelled "hard right rudder" at the same time and the third mate quickly put the rudder hard over to starboard. The master ran to the engine order telegraph and rang up "stop engine." The third assistant engineer on watch in the engine control room answered the signal within seconds, and the engine was stopped.

As the ship's head started to swing to starboard and its forward motion started to slow slightly, the small vessel continued to converge on the port bow of the ship.

With their view from the bridge obscured by the foc'sle bulwark, the master, third mate and pilot lost sight of the vessel as it came close aboard the port bow.

When last seen from the bridge, the small vessel still appeared to be going full speed and headed toward the bow at an angle of nearly 90 degrees.

The master, third mate and pilot all saw the small vessel disappear from their view; and they expected to feel or hear something as a result of its impact on the ship. None of them felt or heard anything, and the master and pilot ran to the port wing to look for it.

Seeing nothing, the pilot rushed to the starboard bridge wing expecting to find that it had cleared ahead and was passing down the starboard side. They was no sign of it there.

As the master and pilot stood on the port bridge wing, they saw a red box (later identified as an insulated cooler) and several small items of debris passing down the port side of the ship.

The master picked up a pair of binoculars and watched the area of the floating red box.

The pilot established contact with Coast Guard Station St. Ignace and informed them that a fishing vessel had sunk.

Summer resident R.J. Fairbanks is displaying his watercolors of wildlife and outdoor scenes at First State Bank of Charlevoix for another week or so. The former city baker now splits his time between Ironton and Fort Pierce, Fla., where he took up painting after being slowed by knee surgery.

Opinion

Taxes: Voted, non-voted

Taxes. Now there's a five-letter dirty word.

But even with income tax time past, it's a word on the minds of most area residents.

There are two major reasons why for city residents.

Charlevoix Schools is asking voters to pass judgment on three tax renewals making up the bulk of school funding.

And the city council is embarking on a five-year street and sewer improvement program that will increase the tax rate by 28 percent in the city.

On Monday, residents will have their say on school taxes. They won't get a similar opportunity on city taxes.

That's because city council already made the decision for them. On Monday night, the council approved increasing the city tax from 13.22 mills to 17.09 mills.

That boosts the tax paid just for city operations on a $50,000 house from $330 a year to $427 a year.

Because the city charter allows the government to levy up to 15 mills without asking resident approval, none was asked.

Residents get a little break because of the Headlee Amendment and the Truth-In-Taxation Law, documents that grew out of voter dissatisfaction with high property taxes.

Because of the Headlee and Truth-In-Taxation formulas, the city actually had to cut back its increase from four mills to 3.4 mills.

But with a state equalized valuation rise of 8 percent in the past year, hardly anyone is going to notice any relief.

Even though they weren't obligated to ask voters if they approve of the big tax hike, it would have been a nice gesture for the city to ask anyway.

The cost of a special election can't be any problem for a city that pays $5,000 without blinking for a cable TV study.

Of course, if the residents were asked, they might have said "no," and that could put a serious dent in the city's five-year plan.

If you're upset with the city over the large tax hike, though, don't take it out on the school district Monday.

The school board is asking only for renewal of what it has gotten in recent previous years – and it's well below the state average.

The district has been honest in its presentation, too, not like some districts that lump operations funds with building fix-ups and swimming pools, etc., all in one "take it or leave it" ballot question.

Here you can vote just for continued smooth operations, just for fix-ups or just for running the library. And next year – as in previous years – you get your say again (except for the five-year library millage).

The school district deserves a "yes" vote at its election Monday – even if your bank account and head are still reeling from the squeeze being put on them by the city.

More on more taxes

If you just figured out you got a whopping tax hike Monday and don't like it, grab a mirror.

(If you still don't know, read the opinion above or the story about taxes on page 3 – they ought to wake you up if you've been napping for the past couple months.)

You've only got one person to blame – and it's not your city council member.

Although council had no obligation to let you vote on boosting your taxes, it did give you plenty of opportunity to make your feelings known.

And just about all of you passed up the chance.

Two weeks ago at the council's regular meeting and again at its meeting Monday, the public was given ample time to express its thanks or outrage over the five-year improvement plan.

Less than a dozen people spoke at the two sessions combined. And several of them were members of the Downtown Development Authority, which has a role in making city improvements.

There are 2,200 living units in the city, plus a couple hundred business addresses. So about one-half of one percent of those paying taxes were heard from.

You can bet a lot more than that are angry with city council right now, though.

You can't blame council for assuming you think they've got a good idea if you don't tell them you don't think it is.

And you can't blame anyone but yourself if you didn't know what was going on – a 15-resident needs committee held four well-publicized meetings, the council has talked openly about its plans, legal notices were posted and published on the tax increase, the News-Review published stories on the needs study and council's reaction and the Courier devoted nearly the entire front page to the proposal the week before council's first public hearing.

So when your tax bill warms up your blood next winter, remember who's to blame. You are.

Know your Chamber

Executive Director

With all the beautiful boats in the harbor and out on the lake, the Venetian committee's thoughts have been dominated with the boat parade.

The highlight of each Venetian Festival is the boat parade. As a matter of fact, Venetian originated with only decorated boats on parade. This year the committee has some clever ideas regarding many segments of this event, one of which is how to get help decorating your boat.

Let's face it, most people like to sit back and watch the boat parade from East Park or from decks and lawns that line Round Lake or from stationary boats. In some years there hasn't been much to watch because it is "watching" and not "participating" that's been happening.

We'd like you to know that it's just as much fun, if not more fun, to be out there in the parade. Why not try it for the first time or try it again (things have changed). The parade and all its details are well planned by chairmen John Ochs and Tom Hawley. If you would like to help organize this major event or participate, or need more information, either call John Ochs at Central Drug Store or the chamber office.

In the meantime, think summer and the Venetian boat parade spectacular.

Town getting ready

Clockwise BY BOB CLOCK

Memorial Day weekend has come and gone — but where are the benches in East Park?

Still in winter storage, that's where.

A spokesman for the city Street Department which is responsible for placing and removing the benches says city crews have been just too busy getting the old town ready for the tourist season to bother with the benches.

Hopefully, they will be in place before another weekend arrives. A lot of older folks — residents and visitors alike — appreciate a place to rest their weary bones while shopping downtown.

And it's hard to think of a better way to say, "Welcome to Charlevoix. Stop and enjoy."

SPEAKING OF getting ready for summer, city looks better with every passing day.

I drove down Bridge Street 6:30 a.m. one day last week and was surprised to find crews of painters already on the job refurbishing downtown buildings.

Workmen also ply their trades long into the evening getting ready for the summer influx.

The town is slowly acquiring a bright, pastel look that certainly should put folks in a holiday mood.

The newly enlarged front on the Town House cocktail lounge is being afforded lots of oh's and ah's with its tall windows reminiscent of a British pub. Proprietor Helen Weislik says all she wanted originally was to extend her second floor apartment over the sidewalk, but the city objected. Commercial zoning, however, permits construction up to the lot line, and three different surveys showed the Town House lot line extending well into the Bridge Street sidewalk.

So that's where she built — getting her apartment extension in the bargain.

Helen says her rear lot line extends two feet into the alley, but she hasn't decided what to do with that.

All of which proves you can fight city hall — and win.

DEMOLITION of much of Jack Schmidt's sidewalk cafe — Hugo's — by an wayward automobile early last Thursday morning last week must have been a disappointment since the restaurant had been open less than a week.

But by Thursday afternoon, the debris had been cleared away and Hugo's was back in business.

It's just lucky the tables and attractive umbrellas had been stashed away for the night, or the damage would have been more extensive.

IF YOU MISSED the fish and chips dinner at the Methodist Church May 29, take heart. Folks at the church are talking about making it an annual event.

The fund-raiser used recipes supplied by Hulda Cross, who formerly owned the Nautical Restaurant in an old house on Round Lake next to John Cross Fisheries.

Sponsors of the church dinner were astounded by the turnout, since twice as many people showed up than were expected and workers had to hustle to keep the serving line moving.

And little wonder. Hulda's dinners were so superb that our out-of-town guests always insisted on having at least one meal at the Nautical. And they were never disappointed.

SPEAKING OF fish and chips, I think that old favorite from the British Isles is fast becoming a staple in the diet of Charlevoixans. The Parkside, Great Lakes Whitefish, Duffy's, the Topside Cafe, the Weathervane — all have their regular fish specials. And, of course, the Argonne is world-renowned for its shrimp.

Since seafood is higly regarded by nutritionists, Charlevoixans must be a healthy lot.

Pass the tartar sauce.

Beacons of Blessing

A devotional column prepared
by the Charlevoix Ministerial Association

by Pastor Dave Yingling United Methodist Church

Pentecost is coming–June 7–for many churches. A mighty wind (Spirit) is a-blowin' over the land. Pentecost the birthday of the Church. Originally this day commemorated Israel's receiving the law on Mt. Sinai. The book of Acts tells us that on this day, "all the disciples were together in one place." Earlier, they were demoralized, scattered by the death of Jesus. Suddenly, they are showered with power and unity.

God sends the Holy Spirit upon them. The Christian community is inflamed! The baptism with the Holy Spirit is fulfilled! To dramatize the presence of the Holy Spirit, God's ministers join together with speaking in tongues. People were electrified, teaching us that all of us can be filled with the Holy Spirit.

We are instructed, as Peter leads us, to search God's word for the grounding of our faith.

We are, also, to carefully be sensitive to our surroundings and respond faithfully to them.

God pours out the Spirit upon all who ask, in whatever circumstances.

With the Spirit, we then build bridges of love and establish the ways of peace. Once we "taste and see that the Lord is good," we find the One who gives freedom and joy to live for others.

Shalam.

Leadership workshop brightens teen's outlook

by FRAN MARTIN

"It was a great experience. It taught me how important it is to put my priorities in order and set goals. It taught me self-esteem. It also taught me how to go about attaining my goals."

That was Stacy Gebott's assessment of a Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation seminar for high school sophomores, the Charlevoix High sophomore attended at Saginaw Valley State College.

She was among more than 300 students at the seminar, one of two held in the state, at which the incentive system was explored and self-esteem and leadership emphasized.

She said the seminar was up-beat all the way.

"It brought out values in you that you didn't realize were there. It taught you that you could succeed if you set realistic goals for yourself and that, as a person, you deserve to succeed."

She said there were numerous inspiring speakers but the one she admired the most was Don Tocco who said the important areas in life are health, family, career, spirituality, friendship, community, mentality and self-improvement.

"One statement really hit me: 'There's no courage if there's fear.' I found, after attending the workshop, that any fears I had were unfounded. Now I know I have the courage to set my goals and that I am capable of accomplishing them if I try.

"I know that what we were told throughout the seminar is true: that if we really try we have the power to succeed and that we have the power to make our life happen."

"It has been a wonderful experience for me. I found that other kids had the same doubts about themselves as I did; that I wasn't alone. I think everyone came home with the thought that anything within reason was possible. I hope that other students in the future will have the opportunity I've had. It's very worthwhile."

Stacy, 16, carries a full academic class load, works as a kitchen aide at Charlevoix Area Hospital and during the summer has an afternoon babysitting job five days a week for a summer family at a nearby resort.

Stacy Gebott

She still has time for herself she says "because I've had to learn to get my priorities in order."

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gebott and plans to attend college, majoring in counseling or law.

If your 15-year-old son asked you about birth control, what would you say?

YOU PROBABLY WOULDN'T say anything for a minute. You'd be too busy thinking.

About how fast kids grow up. And about the future. And about how you might say the wrong thing.

You might even wonder why he's asking. (Chances are, it's just plain old-fashioned curiosity.)

But then you'd realize you have to say something, anything, or you'll lose the moment. Maybe forever. So, as health-care professionals who've worked with millions of teens and their parents, we'd like to offer a suggestion.

Answer the question your 15-year-old asked. Not the question you think he might be asking, but the one that's floating right in front of you.

If it's about a particular birth control method, tell him what you know. If it's about the right-and-wrong of things, tell him how you feel.

As a parent, whatever else you might be feeling at the moment the question comes, you should feel proud that he brought his question to you.

Many sons don't. And many of them don't get the answers from anyone in time.

Better yet, don't wait for the question. Bring up the conversation yourself. In fact, it's easier to talk with your children about sexuality when they're much younger, before they've become self-conscious and embarassed.

A million teens will get pregnant this year. If your son can talk to you about pregnancy and birth control, the chances are good that his girlfriend won't be one of them. And he won't be a father before he's ready. Or before you are.

The soaring teen pregnancy rate is everybody's problem. I want to help:

Rayder netters finish 3rd in state

by FRAN MARTIN

The Charlevoix tennis team topped off its 1987 season Saturday by claiming third place in the state in Class C-D.

"They (the team) were great. They played well. They deserved to win," said an elated coach Erik Lundteigen of his senior-dominated team.

University Liggett came in first for the 15th time in 16 years and Detroit Country Day, coached by former Rayder coach Chuck Wright, placed second.

Following the third place Rayders were Williamston, Wittemore-Prescott and Calvin Christian tied for fourth; Kalamazoo Hackett, Bay City All Saints, Northport and Springfield.

"I was told that this was the best a public school had done in 12 years (against private schools). Certainly it is the best that any northern Michigan team in any class has ever finished," Lundteigen said.

The Rayders won eight flights, some of them against top seeded players, winning or losing in closely contested matches, Lundteigen said.

In the singles, Ty Wagner lost to a Bronson player, Steve Salyer 6-3, 4-6, 7-6. Jon Eakes, after drawing a first round bye, lost to Dave Hetscman of Whitehall 6-4, 6-3.

Marty Joy, who drew a first round bye defeated Dave Capics of Elkton-Pigeon-Bayport 6-1, 6-0 and Blayer Schneider of Berrien Springs 3-6, 6-2, 6-2 before losing in the semi-finals to Sean Bryan of University Liggett 6-1, 6-2.

Wes Cumberland, after a first round bye, lost to Brad Williams of Almont 3-6, 6-4, 6-4.

In the doubles, Mike Chew and Quint Walker (with a first round bye) defeated Chris Deneen and Mark Rosenthal of Comstock Park 6-3, 6-4 and Bill Olson and Tom Mooy of Whitehall 2-6, 7-0, 6-4 before losing to the No. 1 seed Mike Fozo and Ashu Nautuyal of University Liggett 6-1, 6-1 in the semi-finals.

Dan Staublin and Rusty Coolman (after a first round bye) defeated Steve Michael and Jay Koble of Whitehall 6-1, 6-3, before losing to the No. 2 seed, Andre Salazar and Nikhil Shah of Detroit Country Day 6-1, 6-0, in the quarter-finals.

Scott DeYoung and Ryan Holmes (after drawing a first round bye) defeated fifth-seeded Jim Abby and Tom Riker of DeWitt 6-3, 6-2 and third-seeded Dan Bivens and Jody Caverly of Elkton-Pigeon-Bayport 6-3, 6-2, before losing to Doug Wood and Anthony Abirhei of University Liggett 6-2, 6-2.

"Three Charlevoix flights were into the semi-finals before losing. This is the best we've ever done," Lundteigen said adding that this is the Rayder's best season since 1978 when they were fifth in the state. Lundteigen was a member of that team.

He called attention to the progress the players had made during their four years with the team.

As freshmen, the team ranked 8th in the regionals and the following year they were fourth in the regionals. As juniors, the team was first in the regionals and seventh in the state and as seniors they were first in regionals and third in the state.

Seniors on the team are Chew, Coolman, Eakes, Staublin, Wagner and Walker.

"I want to thank everyone, in behalf of the team and myself for the great support we've had from everyone all season. It was especially appreciated to have so many in the gallery at the state meet (in Kalamazoo). We really didn't expect it." Lundteigen said.

Softball season ends with loss

The Rayder softball team closed out its season with a 10-3 loss to Petoskey in a make-up game.

Jill Brecheisen allowed five Charlevoix hits and three walks and had three strikeouts. Ann Kroll, who took the loss, gave up five hits and six walks and had one strikeout.

Amy Antaya had a single and a double and Anna D'Angelo, Kroll and Jeffifer Sell had one hit each for Charlevoix.

Lions win pair in Majors action

Twin Bay Glass posted an 8-5 win over Round Lake Lodge in Major League play. Twin Bay got seven hits off Josh Watros and Josh Scheels. Jeremy Boss was the winning pitcher.

Mike Weidner, Buddy Pitcher and Joby Johnson had two hits each for Twin Bay. Chris Coen and Jason Frabis had two each for Lodge.

Charlevoix Lions, with a 7-0 record as the first half of the season ended, edged Twin Bay Glass 11-10 in a game that saw Jamie Crain bring in the winning runs on an over-the-fence home run to center field.

Crain and Travis Blissett pitched for the winners. David Skeel and Mike Weidner pitched for Twin Bay.

Twin Bay was leading 9-5 in the fifth inning when the Lions tied the game on Bill Dreyer's triple with the bases loaded. Twin Bay went ahead in the sixth on Crain's homer.

The Lions defeated Round Lake Lodge 10-6.

Crain and Jake Porath were the pitchers for the winners. Dreyer had a double and a triple.

Whitley 1st in state; Rayders 5th in track

by FRAN MARTIN

"They were absolutely great," coach Hal Evans kept saying about the Rayders who finished fifth in the Class C state track finals at Bangor, Saturday.

Sophomore Jason Whitley captured a blue ribbon in the 300 meter low hurdles, and the 800-meter relay team of Rick Quinn, Paul Anderson, Whitley and Jim Gibbs finished second to win all-state recognition.

Whitley ran the hurdles in :38.8 and the 800 relay team set a school record with its time of 1:31.8. The former record was 1:32.2.

The Rayders finish was fifth among 137 teams with 24 points, the best in recent years.

The 1600-meter relay team of Gibbs, Anderson, Darrin Batdorff and Whitley placed fifth and the 400-meter relay team of Dave Miller, Gibbs, Mark LaBlance and Anderson came in eighth.

Points were given through eighth place, Evans said.

The 3200-meter relay team of Scott Miller, Eric Moore, Pat Rajewski and Batdorff did not place though their time was 8:24.4, a second better than in the regional.

"Doug (Bergmann), who's been the hard-luck kid all year, continued to live up to his reputation," Evans said in explaining Bergmann's continuing misfortune.

Team members were seeking shelter from the hot sun under a tarp mounted on large steel poles set up for that purpose. A sudden gust of wind knocked one of the poles over and, as it came down, it struck Bergmann with force, injuring his shoulder.

"We iced it and did what we could but, as he started the two-mile run, the pain became so intense he was forced to drop out of the race," Evans said.

In the regional meet at Kalkaska, Bergmann lost his shoe about a third of the way through the two-mile race and mangled his foot on the track surface. As a result, he was unable to run in the conference meet.

Anderson celebrated his 18th birthday that day by winning three medals, Evans said.

Evans also praised Barbie Boss, who missed qualifyingg for the finals in the 100-meter dash by a split second. Boss was the only member of the Rayders' girls' team to qualify for the state meet.

She tied her own school record of :12.8 set earlier this year.

Besides Boss, seniors who advanced to state are Bergmann, Anderson, Batdorff, Gibbs and Quinn.

Men's slow-pitch season begins

Action in the Charlevoix Men's Slowpitch season opened last week with three nights of play.

On the opening night, a newcomer CPI edged the Coast Guard 11-10, Grey Gables shut out Townhouse 9-0, and Pine Hill Nursery beat another new team, Little Caesar's, 17-2.

CPI scored its 11 runs on the 13 hits given up by Ike Boss, one of them a home run by Owen Phillips. Bill Green allowed 17 hits including a homer by Shawn Shuler.

Jim Werner, who gave up six hits, was the winning pitcher as the Grey Gables'. defense held Townhouse scoreless. Ray LaVoie, who took the loss, allowed 13 hits, among them a home run by Kim Makarowitz.

Pine Hill Nursery scored 17 runs on 18 hits off Bill Gauthier. Ken Peebles, the winning pitcher, allowed two hits.

Richard's Topside Cafe defeated Connie's Place 13-10, Davis Chevrolet trounced Paul Bunyan Lanes 32-2 and CPI won by forfeit over Grey Gables.

Two home runs by Scott Morgan and one by Brent Cole were among the 13 hits Dave Novotny gave up in the Topside win over Connie's Place, a third new team in the 10-team league. Phil Skeel allowed 16 hits.

Pine Hill Nursery shut out Paul Bunyan Lanes 2-0, Coast Guard beat Little Caesar's 8-6 and Rich's Topside defeated Townhouse 5-1.

Peebles gave up 11 hits but Lanes was unable to score while Mike Green's six hits gave the Nursery their winning run.

Coast Guard scored eight runs on the 10 hits allowed by Gauthier while Little Caesar's managed six runs on the 12 hits given up by Boss.

Morgan's third homer of the season was among the hits Topside collected from Bob Alexander while Skeel allowed seven hits as the winning pitcher.

District loss ends season

The Rayder baseball team played its final game of the season in the first game of the Class C district tournament, losing to host Kalkaska 14-4.

"They're a strong hitting team and they came out strong, getting eight of their 14 runs in the first inning," coach Brian Certa said.

From then on, it was Kalkaska all the way as they scored three runs in the fourth for an 11-0 lead. The Rayders had four runs in the top of the fifth. Kalkaska added two more runs in the bottom of the fifth and another in the sixth for the decisive win.

Shawn Putman took the loss after allowing 15 hits.

For the Rayders Mike Thompson had a triple and Kent Seymour, Scott Denny, Chad Thorp, Dan Drury, Mike Wise and Jim Tilton had singles.

The Rayders had a 7 win-14 loss record for the season, including a pre-district win and a district loss.

Seniors on the team are Seymour, Thompson and John Gray.

3 tax renewals on school ballot portion in the non-voted county allocation.

Because of the Headlee Amendment, the entire 15.25 mills for operations and 9.1 mills from the county allocation will not levied. The operations levy will be 15.128 and the allocation will be 9.027, Olach said.

And next year, he said, the debt retirement of 1.13 mills will be cut just about in half.

One mill in taxes brings the school district about $190,000 in revenues. So, after Headlee reductions and after downtown and Ferry Beach reductions, the 15.25 mills being asked for operations would create $2.7 million and the 1.25 mills for improvements would bring in $220,000.

Van Wieren said voters have approved the facilities improvement taxes in the past because the district has always spelled out what it intended to do with the money.

This coming year, Olach said, if the funds are approved, he would like to finish the work started last year on the athletic field at the high school, make improvements at the bus garage – including possibly putting up a pole barn to protect the buses in winter – and repair the fascia on the mansard roof at the elementary school.

The district first tackled work that needed to be done on the school buildings, then moved to the athletic field and now to facilities that do not directly involve the students, Olach said.

He hopes that improvements will be finished in the next year or two, but cautions that a major unexpected job could cause the district to ask voters to renew the millage again.

One concern down the road, Olach said, is the boiler in the middle school, which has been in operation since the 1930s. The boiler continues to operate well and passes state inspection each year, he said, but is a cause for worry just because of its

"We make a very serious attempt to spend our money for what it's catalogued for and people appreciate that," Novak said.

Charlevoix Schools is one of the few districts in the state to operate a public library, Van Wieren said, and the half-mill asked to operate it is the same tax rate as in the past.

The library tax has traditionally been renewed every five years, he said, while the district asks for operations and repair funds each year.

The library operated on a $117,000 budget this year, Olach said.

Officeways leads Seniors League

Michigan Officeways topped the Senior League standings with a 6-1 record as the first half of the season drew to a close.

Stevens Construction was in second place with a 4-4 record and DCL in the cellar with a 1-6 record as the second half gets underway.

Wynkoop and Jason Jackson had two hits each and Herb Pines and Dave Hunter one each for Stevens.

Paul Zoet had three hits including a double and Paul Wakulat one for DCL.

Michigan Officeways downed DCL 12-11 with Chris Seymour stealing home for the win.

Dave Loder singled in a runner to tie the score then Seymour stole home to win in extra innings.

Jason Parrish was the winning pitcher with Bob Jess relieving him. Brad Zoet and Scott Campbell were the pitchers for DCL.

Loder had three hits and Parrish and Seymour two each for Officeways. Campbell had three hits for DCL.

With Loder on the mound, Officeways posted its sixth win in a 6-2 win over Stevens Construction. Dan Terryberry and Jason Jackson, who allowed six hits, were pitchers for the losers. Loder gave up three hits.

Bob Jess had a double and other hits were scattered among five players. Terryberry, Jackson, and Erich McElroy accounted for Stevens hits.

Yachting Notes

A. NONY MOUSE

The second race of the spring series at the Charlevoix Yacht Club is now history. To many of the sailors, it seemed like the doldrums of midsummer for the second week in a row as a shortened course was necessary again. At least all boats finished before 10 p.m. though.

Fleet A saw Dave Irish at the helm of Traveller drift over the finish line in time to save her time on the charging smaller A boats led by Pygmalion, Colombine and Gotcha. Only one second back was John Hall's Tigger followed by Respite, Wingnut, Night Moves, Merry Hell and Mint Julip.

Fleet B was led by Bandit for the second week in a row with Blasen III, Tireless, Cygnus, Phoenecia and Te-Gi following. The word is that Mr. Barnes' days in first are numbered, however, as more wind for the P 26's is predicted for next week. (That's from the gospel according to Mikey, Chapter III.)

The jib and main fleet had Sandpiper in the first spot followed closely by Maureen, Mud Duck and Stalworth. Flash, San Juan 24, Cheemaun, Apothecary, Cabaret, Canusa and Kittiwake rounded out the fleet.

We would also like to welcome two new sailors to the group as Steve Johnson and Dan Singer will be racing in the JAM fleet. Until next week, may the wind be always at your back (and blowing stink).

Dr. Dave.

Short stop becomes sight-seeing tour know how well our bottle return law works.

"This is a beautiful beach," Larry said as he surveyed from North Point to South Point. Except for Medusa, he said, lamenting that the cement plant should have been put somewhere else.

"There's sand everywhere around here," he said. "Why did it have to go there?"

Several times during their stay, the pair's thoughts returned to Medusa with suggestions that tall trees be planted to hide the view or the buildings be painted blue or green.

Or, Hollywood native Larry said, maybe they could contact Disney Studios and see if they would paint some characters on the side.

The old water tower is a classic, Marty said; too bad the city is thinking of tearing it down. Maybe it should just be painted, he said, with a big Welcome sign on the side.

"They don't really let people out on those piers, do they?" asked Marty. In California, he said, lawsuits and the threat of lawsuits have caused cities to fence off piers so people can't use them.

They wanted to know about everything:

– How do Petoskey stones get that way?

– Why does the water flow both ways at the same time in Pine River Channel?

– And why is the water in the channel so green?

– And why don't those parking meters have anything in them?

After taking the walkway under the bridge and picking up pieces of a broken bottle, Larry said there aren't enough trash cans.

"Most of the towns we have been in have too few trash cans," Marty said, "especially in the malls. People just throw stuff down."

"This town is really well laid out," said Larry, noting how the Round Lake side of Bridge Street is broken into four park areas.

"That's a great Chamber (of Commerce) building," he said. "Most towns just have a little dinky thing. This one's right in the middle of everything."

After hearing of the normal snowfalls, Larry asked how the mailman got around in winter. Out to the street, up a drive, out to the street, up a drive, he was told.

"He's probably the only one who gets any exercise," said the former lifeguard, who at 6 the next morning was back on his board, paddling toward Washington.

Community band begins rehersals

The first rehearsal of the Charlevoix City Band will be held at the high school band room at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, June 10.

The community band is composed of musicians from Charlevoix and surrounding areas. Membership is open to anyone who plays a band instrument, director Terry Isenbarger said. Rehearsals are held weekly on Wednesdays during the summer. The band presents weekly concerts in East Park on Wednesday evenings following the rehearsals during July.

Anyone interested in playing in the band is encouraged by Isenbarger to attend the first rehearsal. The band pays mileage to musicians who travel from outside Charlevoix.

For further information interested persons call Isenbarger at the high school band room (547-3234) or at his home (533-8382) or band president Warren Shapton at 547-5144.

Maintenance shuts Big Rock

Consumers Power Co.'s Big Rock Point nuclear plant was taken out of service Friday, May 29, for a scheduled two-week maintenance outage.

During the outage, some electrical cables inside the plant's reactor building are being replaced and routine preventive maintenance is being performed.

Big Rock began operation in 1962. It is capable of generating 69 megawatts of electricity.

This is the second outage in recent weeks. The plant was out of operation for three days in late May to repair a water and steam leak.

98 pints donated at Bloodmobile

Last week's visit of the Red Cross Bloodmobile resulted in donations of 98 pints of blood said Nancy Fowler, coordinator for the program.

A total of 115 prospective donors responded including two first-time donors. Seventeen donors were deferred for various reasons.

The next visit of the Bloodmobile is scheduled for Sept. 3.

Marathon paddleboarder gathers distance records, stories to tell with the American flag tied to it, are two cans of fruit juice. He bought those in Chicago, but hasn't even opened them yet – just drinking lake water.

"I keep forgetting it's not salt water," he says, "until some hits me in the face."

At age 44, Larry makes his trips for more than just the thrill of setting or breaking a record – although he has been doing that since the mid-1960s.

And it's something that happened on his second journey that made him realize he could be helpful to others.

In October 1967, he was trying to break his own record for the 544-mile stretch from San Francisco to Newport Beach in the Los Angeles area.

Along the way, he stopped at a beach to rest and was greeted by a reporter.

"Why are you doing this?" asked the reporter.

"To beat the record," was the reply.

"But you're 25 minutes late. I was here three years ago, and you're 25 minutes late. Why bother to go on?"

"I'm not done yet," Larry recalls answering as he became angry with the reporter. Then looking around, he saw a group of young people sitting nearby smoking marijuana.

"It's better than growing long hair and smoking you-know-what," he said to the belligerent reporter.

Later, Larry saw the story the reporter had written. And there was the headline: "Better than growing long hair and smoking you-know-what."

From that point, Larry has had more than a personal goal. "I want kids to start asking themselves, 'What can I do with what I've got instead of using drugs?"

When he's not working toward one of his long-distance goals, Larry gives motivational talks to groups at high schools, middle schools and elementary schools.

He tells kids about the places he has been and the people he has met.

He tells kids about the adventures life can bring – if you just put your energy to work.

He tells kids about the evening in 1972 when he was paddling from Nantasket Beach, Mass., to Miami Beach.

The 2,400-mile trip was starting off poorly. He had been battling the Atlantic, he was cold and he just wasn't so sure he wanted to go on.

So, as he has done on his other trips, he hoped for a little generosity from a stranger.

After paddling to shore, he walked up to a house and knocked on a door. An elderly lady answered and, seeing the shivering man, let him in and got him a blanket.

As he told her he was thinking of abandoning his effort, the woman pointed to a photo of President John F. Kennedy and said, "He wouldn't have quit."

"You know what John Kennedy would have done, do you?" the tired and chilled lifeguard said sarcastically.

"Of course, I do," the woman replied. "I'm his mother. I'm Rose Kennedy."

Larry spend the next three days with the Kennedys, watching movies and raiding the refrigerator with family members, meeting Miss USA and Sen. Ted Kennedy – who would map out a navigational route for him, and sailing with members of the clan.

For those kids who think he's gotten his brain waterlogged and can't tell truth from fiction, Larry can display a photo of himself with Ethel Kennedy aboard the 54-foot Islander and another with President Reagan or articles from Sports Illustrated and The National Enquirer

And he can tell them not all families he has met were like the rich and famous Kennedys. But most were kind and helpful – sometimes in their own, unusual way.

Like the time he got beaten up in a storm and had to find a place to stay in a California cove.

The only house was a back-country structure on stilts. Two women came out to meet him – one an elderly lady with no hair.

When he asked if he could sleep outside, between the stilts, they said they would have to ask – the children. Four young girls came out, questioned him and went inside.

When the elderly woman came out to tell him he could stay, she saw his face and leg were swollen and bleeding from his encounter with rocks during the storm.

"I can fix that," she said. With that, she took a golden powder from a pouch and threw some on his face and leg. (It was probably goldenseal, an herb sometimes used in pharmacy, he would find out later.)

Noticing he was nursing a sore back, she said, "I can fix that," and ordered him to lay on his stomach.

Cautiously he lay down, figuring the frail woman could cause little harm by walking on his back in an oriental-style massage.

Instead, she kneeled and, elbows first, jammed her arms into his back. Pain shot through his already sore body as the woman continued to push.

Finally, the woman left and he prepared for sleep. But then one of the young girls returned and announced she was going to read him a story.

By this time he did not know what to expect. The girl slowly opened her book and began to read – "The Little Engine That Could."

In the morning, as he slipped down to the shore to retrieve his board and be on his way, the elderly woman appeared.

"Today, you will go farther than ever before," she said. "I will play you a song."

On a flute-like instrument, she played – "Anchors Aweigh."

She then climbed in a black Volkswagen Beatle and began to drive lowly along the top of the cliffs beside the Pacific.

For the next several hours, Larry would see that black Volkswagen atop the cliffs whenever he thought of pulling in to rest. And he would keep going. Finally, he did not see the black Volkswagen and climbed ashore.

While resting, he realized his face and leg felt better, his back did not hurt and he had just paddled 46 miles non-stop – farther than ever before.

Larry isn't going so far non-stop these days. With his twin Marty driving ahead in a Volkswagen bus – no, it's tan – to mark places to stop, he is tackling the Great Lakes in 10- to 15-mile chunks.

"When he looks like a seagull on the horizon, I know he's about 30 minutes out," says Marty. "Of course, some times it is a sea gull."

The trip is not well financed – just about $5,000 for the seven-month, 4,000-mile endeavor – which also fits Larry's message that you don't need a lot of money to do what you want.

Money is not one of his motivators – he lives in Newport Beach, Calif., in an unheated garage that's not even big enough to keep his custom-made paddleboard inside. And he charges only a couple hundred dollars for a full-day of talks at a school.

But he is working on a book, he says. "It's this big," he says, holding one hand about three feet above the other.

"I'm on chapter 108. Maybe some day I'll just give it to someone and say, 'Here's a mini-series, all set to go.'"

The board is so rounded, he says, that he must keep his concentration and balance at all times. To keep up his strength, he occasionally takes a fingerful of Superman Peanut Butter from a jar strapped to the board.

After trying several foods – "Can you imagine taking a quart of milk out there?" – he accidentally found peanut butter kept and worked best.

A young boy gave him a peanut butter and jelly sandwich one day, and he forgot about it. Four days later, Larry ate the sandwich.

And why the American flag tied to the jar? Because Superman always had the flag behind him, Larry says, cocking his body to resemble the way the superhero looked at the beginning of his TV show.

"Remember?" he says. "Truth, justice and the American way."

Road commission's work on county roads is $2 million a year job

by PEG OHLE

The Charlevoix County Board of Road Commissioners received and spent over $2 million in 1986.

The money was spent to maintain the 179 miles of primary roads and 543 miles of local roads it is responsible for in Charlevoix County, from the forested hill country in the eastern part of the county to the more developed population centers in the western part.

The road commission received most of its operating money ($1,489,816) from the Michigan Transportation Fund, derived from gasoline taxes and license plate fees. Another $239,102 came from the federal government for maintaining U.S. 31 and U.S. 131, $123,817 was contributed by local townships to partially pay for work done within those townships, and the rest came from miscellaneous sources.

Operating expenses are divided into two major parts: Construction and maintenance. Construction covers new and upgrading road work, while maintenance covers ditching, graveling, resealing existing pavements and similar work, as well as winter maintenance and traffic controls.

Construction costs for primary roads last year amounted to $87,882, with most of the work being done in the eastern townships. However, in the Charlevoix area, $19,764 was spent on the East Shore Drive in Peaine Township, $1,138 on Ferry Road in Marion and Norwood Townships, and $2,901 on Sequanota and Ferry Roads in Eveline Township.

Construction costs for local roads amounted to $196,216. Nearby local road construction included $4,657 for Pa-Ba-Shan Lane in Charlevoix Township, $26,226 for Phelps Road in Marion Township, $10,201 for Witmere Road in Norwood Township, $8,711 for Faculak Road in Norwood Township, $5,843 for Beck Road in Norwood Township, $7,332 for Washington Street in Eveline Township; and $14,468 for Old U.S. 31 in Hayes Township.

Maintenance expenditures for Charlevoix County roads amounted to $1,403,470 in 1986, including about $80,000 necessitated by erosion caused by high lake levels. Areas most seriously damaged were Ferry Avenue along the south shore of Lake Charlevoix, Lake Shore Drive from the Charlevoix Area Hospital to the Medusa Cement plant, and some roads on Beaver Island.

The road commission is made up of three members who are appointed by the county board.

Study will audit school energy use

An energy audit of Charlevoix Schools' buildings will be conducted by Temex Inc., the school board decided Monday.

The audit will determine where fuel and electricity can be saved and by what means. The contract with Temex says the audit cannot cost more than $2,500.

Some work remains to be done at the athletic field, which was rebuilt last year, Business Manager Vince Olach told the board.

Work yet to be done includes completing the top surface on the track and areas for such events as the shotput and discus, fencing the track and planting trees and shrubs to serve as windbreakers.

Ronald Moore, Robert Drenth and Kenneth Boss were appointed to a committee to create a performance appraisal system for the administrative staff.

Old Star leaves as paddlewheel work continues

The dinner boat Star of Toronto, which has been moored at Water's Edge in Lake Charlevoix, was scheduled to depart Tuesday for the Canadian city.

The Star of Toronto, formerly known as the Star of Charlevoix, will be succeeded by a twin-deck sternwheeler now under construction at Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Smaller than its predessor, it is 105 feet long and has a seating capacity for 150 diners.

The stern-wheeler will be the fifth ship in the Star fleet and the first paddle wheeler. It will be moored at the foot of Clinton Street on Round Lake.

The boat is expected to arrive in Charlevoix about the end of the third week in June and, after undergoing Coast Guard tests for licensing, will begin operating early in July.

Charlevoix has been a homeport for a dinner cruise ship since the Star Line initiated the service in 1981.

Peace marchers stopping in city

Peace marchers on a state-long trek are due to arrive in Charlevoix Tuesday, June 9, for a stopover and picnic.

The marchers are from the Michigan Peace March for Global Nuclear Disarmament and began their journey Saturday in Sault Ste. Marie.

The marchers will stay overnight with host families in the Charlevoix area. A picnic, a community service and the dedication of a Peace Pole are being planned during their stay.

The picnic will be held from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. Tuesday, June 9, at Ferry Beach.

The marchers will wind their way down and across the state, with plans to arrive in Detroit on Aug. 9.

A core group of about 25 in walking about 10 miles a day and will be joined by other marchers along the way.

If they complete their walk on time, they will have covered 700 miles in 71 days.

Shop celebrates

The Rainbow Shoppe will celebrate its fourth anniversary Friday, June 5, with a party from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Cake, punch, coffee and balloons are planned.

The Rainbow Shoppe is a second-hand store operated jointly by area churches. It has grown from a small operation on Antrim Street into a three-story retail store in Van Pelt Alley.

County upgrades communications system

by PEG OHLE

It costs a lot of money to provide for public safety.

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners faced this fact last week when members voted to give the board chairman permission to purchase from Motorola Co. $127,820 of communication and electronic equipment.

The equipment will be used by the Sheriff's Department to maintain contact with patrol cars and other law enforcement bodies throughout Charlevoix County and adjoining counties, as well as local fire departments and emergency services personnel.

The need for new equipment really grew out of modern technology, according to Undersheriff Dale Boehm.

"At the present time, with our antenna in Charlevoix (at the sheriff's department), we are receiving interference from computers and other electronic equipment," he explained. "This cuts down our day-to-day communication possibilities and jeopardizes safety. "We can seldom talk to our Beaver Island car, and on the east side of the county sometimes we can reach only as far as Boyne City."

The antenna and some other equipment will be placed on Richardson Hill, between East Jordan and Boyne City in Wilson Township. Radio station WKHQ has a building and equipment on Richardson Hill and will share some of its facilities with the county.

"Out there in the country we won't get the interference that we do in the city," said Boehm.

A committee of county commissioners, consisting of Don Smith, Tom Breakey and Ralph Harmon, along with County Planner Larry Sullivan and Boehm has been working for over a year and a half, studying the county's communication needs and determining the best way to fulfill them.

The committee sought assistance from several electronics companies and finally asked for bids from two that seemed most capable of supplying the needed system. Motorola was selected by this process. Technical assistance and advice was also furnished by the State Police.

Major cost components of the new communications system are a microwave control link between the sheriff's department and Richardson Hill, $41,508; central electronics bank and radio control channels, $38,764; 11 mobile radios installed in police cars and patrol boat, $20,010; and two two-frequency low-band Micor base stations and one two-frequency high-band Micor base station, antennas and lines, $13,113.

Cost of installation is included in the price. Existing equipment will be retained as back-up equipment.

The county will be billed 75 percent of the total cost when equipment is shipped to the installation facility, 15 percent when the equipment is installed, and 10 percent when completed. The last billing will be made in early January 1988.

Area artists featured at Petoskey arts center

Three Charlevoix artists will have their work featured in a Limited Engagement Exhibition at the Virginia McCune Community Arts Center, Petoskey, beginning Monday, June 8.

Watercolorist Janis Glass and potters Stephen and Deanna Kostyshyn will offer their work for sale during the two-week exhibition, entitled "Reflections of Nature."

Glass was a finalist in the 1987 "Art and Flowers" competition sponsored by the Detroit Institute of Arts. She was also selected as an exhibitor in the sixth annual "Botanical Images" show at the Lansing Art Gallery.

The Kostyshyns were educated in art at Adrian College and for the past decade have honed their technique to a polished quality. They combine his interest in classical form and her interest in loose, organic line. Theirs is a traditional craft medium – clay – and many of their forms are functional – mugs, teapots, vases, lamps, plates.

Their work has been exhibited and sold from galleries as widespread as Alaska and Florida, Maine and Colorado.

Oldest grad completes school after 60 years

by PEG OHLE

It took Otto Yemmans over 60 years to complete his school work, but the 73-year-old Charlevoix native will graduate from Charlevoix High School this June.

Taking up where he left off in his second year at Charlevoix High School many years ago, Yemmans is the only senior citizen graduating through the adult education program this Sunday.

As Yemmans explains it, a "set to" with his English teacher forced him to quit school the first time around.

Beginning last September Yemmans studied history, govenment, sociology, psychology, literature and general education courses to add to his earlier school credits and experience gained through seven decades of "just living."

Yemmans was born in Charlevoix, attended grade school and went to high school for a year and a half before quitting. Going to Detroit, the young dropout first worked for the Chrysler Motor Car Co., then for several tool and die companies in management and supervisory capacities.

Otto Yemmans

Following retirement, Yemmans returned to Charlevoix, where he has been active in several organizations, including the Shriners. He helped with the Special Olympics recently and plays golf whenever he can.

A widower, Yemmans is the father of four children and the grandfather of 10.

Yemmans will wear a cap and gown and be seated with the rest of the high school graduates on graduation day.

School taxes, library funds pass easily

Voters in the Charlevoix School District approved the renewal of three taxes and re-elected a trustee to the board of education Monday.

The renewal of the 15.25 mill levy for operational purposes for one year was approved 514 to 157. A 1.25-mill levy for facilities improvements was approved 384 to 265.

Renewal of the .5 mills for five years to operate the public library was approved 435 to 242.

Incument Robert Drenth was re-elected to a four-year term with 510 votes to 149 for Kenneth A. Staley.

Supt. Gordon W. VanWieren said of the vote, "We are pleased with the outcome. We appreciate the support of the community as indicated in the vote."

Max Novak, president of the board of education, said, I think it is great, especially when you think of the problems others are having. I certainly want to thank the voters for supporting us."

A total of 682 voters, 17 percent of the estimated 4,000 registered voters in the school district, turned out for the election.

Bits of history for the future

Graduates of '87: 'You've got class

by FRAN MARTIN

"You've been a class that has done things with class. You have not readily given in to peer pressure. You've been motivators. You've had drive, and you've got class."

Gayle Gennett, counselor in Charlevoix Schools for 12 years, spoke of the 1987 graduating class at Charlevoix High School from experience.

In her commencement address Sunday, she reviewed the accomplishments of the class and most of its members, relating to incidents that happened to them as they made their way through school.

But she said she would not tell them what goals to set – their parents have already set their values for them, she said, for they were their role models.

In addressing the parents, she said they had taken care of the basics, had shown their children love and "now you are about to send them out into the world, finding it difficult that you cannot live your child's life and that they may only need you in times of crisis."

She asked the students to celebrate this occasion by telling their parents they love them and she told the parents now is the time to leave the door open rather than closing it behind their children.

She ended her speech with a quotation from Kahil Gibrian's "The Prophet," beginning with "Your children are not your children," and ending with "You are the bows from which your children as living arrows are sent forth.... Let the bending of the archer's hand be for gladness for even as He loves that arrow that flies, He also loves the bow that is stable."

Ann Kroll, the salutatorian, recalled some of the highlights of the class's history, and Kristin Holmes, the valedictorian, spoke of her hopes for the class's future.

Richard Swenor, assistant principal, introduced the students who had received awards and scholarships, and Gary Seaman and Terry Smith, class advisors, presented the class.

School board president Max Novak, secretary Kenneth Boss and trustee Robert Drenth conferred the honors of graduation.

The symphony band played a selection chosen by the seniors in the band – "Imperatrix" by Alfred Reed – along with the processional "Pomp and Circumstance," the National Anthem and the recessional. A group of five seniors sang "Friends."

Gordon VanWieren, superintendent of schools, introduced the speaker, the Rev. Jeb Brushard gave the invocation and the Rev. Larry Grooters gave the benediction.

One hundred forty students, including four adult education students, were awarded diplomas.

Pilot error blamed in crash fatal to 7 on Beaver Island

Pilot error is being blamed for the deaths of seven people in a Beaver Island airplane crash two years ago.

The National Transportation Safety Board's two-page ruling says, "The pilot in command did not maintain proper altitude."

As the plane approached one of the island's two airports, it hit trees 3,000 feet short of the runway, then crashed and burned, the safety board said.

The initial impact was about 20 feet up a 70-foot tree, the report said. No pre-crash malfunction with the twin-engine Cessna could be found.

The April 1985 crash killed two doctors from Holland, three other adults and two children. All were from Holland.

They were enroute to a summer home on Beaver Island from the Holland airport when the crash occurred.

4 receive diplomas from Beaver Island School

Four graduates of the Beaver Island Community School received their diplomas at an outdoor commencement exercise Friday.

William Gillespie of Chicago, a vice president of Chicago Continental Bank and a 1966 graduate of the Island school, returned to deliver the commencement address.

"You have been good students. You have learned your lessons well. Though you may live on an island and, at times, feel isolated, you have many advantages," he said. "You have learned many skills that will serve you well in the marketplace, in any career you may choose to follow."

Dana Gillespie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gillespie, as salutatorian, delivered the class message.

The other graduates are Ernest Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Martin; Jane Petrak, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Petrak; and Christopher Speck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Speck.

James Shepard, superintendent of the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, and Joy Green of the school board presented the diplomas. Green is retiring after 17 years on the school board.

Kathleen McNamara, principal of the school, presented the class.

More than 200 relatives and friends of the graduates attended the ceremony. A reception honoring the graduates followed at Holy Cross parish hall.

Charlevoix Yesterday

The photo above is probably the earliest existing picture of Greensky Hill Mission Church on Old U.S. 31 in Hayes Township. The building was erected in the early 1840s to accommodate the congregation that was founded in 1833. Last Saturday, William A. Zehnder, chairman of the state sesquicentennial commission, presented Jay Oliver, lay minister of the church, with a plaque (photo below) commemorating the sesquicentennial and honoring Greensky Hill as the oldest continuously operating Indian congregation in Michigan.

State honors Greensky Hill church

by PEG OHLE

Members of the Michigan Sesquicentennial Commission came to Charlevoix County last Saturday to hold a business meeting and to make two awards.

The business meeting was held at Greensky Hill Church in Hayes Township, where members more than once commented on the quiet of the setting compared with the downstate locations in which most of their meetings have been held.

William Zehnder, chairman of the commission, presented a plaque to Jay Oliver, Native American lay leader of the church, in recognition of its designation as the longest continuously operating Indian congregation in Michigan.

Oliver told of the congregation being founded in 1833 by Peter Greensky, who had been educated in a Protestant missionary school on the Leelanau Peninsula.

He named the small lake nearby Susan Lake in honor of his wife and helped to build the first church structure, a dome-shaped building covered with elm bark.

In the early 1840's, this was replaced by the present log structure. (See "Charlevoix Yesterday" picture on page 2).

In further recognition of early Indian affairs in Michigan, members of the sesquicentennial commission heard two Native Americans speak of other events before Michigan became a state.

John F. Bailey of the Grand River Band of the Ottawa tribe, told in poetic terms what happened in the 1830's, events, he said, that are as vivid to Michigan Indians today as they were when they took place. "The policies set then still affect Native Americans," he told his audience.

To give his talk a local touch, Bailey lamented the "kidnapping" in 1833 of young William Blackbird, brother of Chief Andrew Blackbird, from his home in Harbor Springs to be sent to Rome to study for the priesthood, only to be assassinated there.

It was all a plot to keep William Blackbird from returning home and continuing his fight to keep the United States government from talking over Indian lands, according to Bailey.

Then, with the treaty of 1836, giving all land north of the Grand River to the government, the Indians lost their last battle, he said. But there are still those memories among Native Americans.

Community forum series beginning

James W. Marshall II, a Charlevoix scholar and educator, will lead a community forum on Central America on Monday, June 15, at Charlevoix Elementary School.

The program, open to the public, begins at 7:30 p.m. in the library.

Marshall will explain the historical background of the region and invite questions and discussion as part of an effort to assist the public in understanding today's newspaper headlines.

The forum is sponsored by an ad hoc committee seeking support in organizing a series of monthly programs featuring speakers, films and videotapes to stimulate discussion about national and international issues.

Under consideration for future forums are perspectives on the Persian Gulf region, El Salvador, the nuclear arms race, Star Wars and South African apartheid policy.

One of the forum's organizers, Barbara MacArthur, says that discussion groups have met informally in private homes during the past year or so. "We've learned that people seek help in evaluating often conflicting information so we'll try to expand the program if there's sufficient interest," she said.

Lucy Martin will chair the program.

One council race develops; No primary

There will be no August primary in Charlevoix.

Because the only contested race for city council has just two candidates, no preliminary vote is needed to narrow the field for the November general election.

Three council posts – one from each ward – and the city clerk's job are up for election.

Clerk Arlene Staley was the only candidate to file for her position.

In the First Ward, only council member Norm Probert filed. In the Third Ward, council member Earl Muma is unopposed.

In the Second Ward, the only race developed, with council member Bob Timms being challenged by Alvin Russell.

Write-in candidacies will be allowed in the Tuesday, Nov. 3, general election.

The restaurant, which will seat 90 customers and park 50 vehicles, will have a beautiful sun-enhanced greenhouse. You will be able to enjoy self-serve drinks, where the "second drink is on us", and multi-conventional ("bank line type") counter service. For those of you who wish to order from your car, our double drive-thru windows will enable us to serve you fast!

The franchise is owned by Richard C. Andresen of Mt. Pleasant. Mr. Andresen is also the owner of Burger King Restaurants located in East Lansing, Okemos, Holt, Big Rapids, Cadillac and Kalkaska.

Leslie Swenor, who has had over 5 years experience with Burger King, is the restaurant supervisor.

The restaurant, which is scheduled to open June 20, will create 85 new jobs.

State grant aide inspects Ferry Beach

Ferry Beach was the scene of an inspection tour, but whether the recreation area passes muster will not be known for several months.

A grant coordinator from the state Department of Natural Resources checked out the park where the city wants to make major improvements.

Jeanne Powers is visiting sites in this part of the state while coworkers are inspecting those elsewhere.

At stake is about $6 million from state and federal programs to encourage and enhance recreational facilities.

What the city wants from the state is either 75 percent or 50 percent, depending on the program, of its $666,000 plan for the beach.

The city would like to:

- Expand the boat launch area,
- Install a fish cleaning station,
- Construct new restrooms,
- Move the children's play area further from the water,
- Modify and enlarge the parking area.

Also proposed, but not in the grant application, is moving Ferry Avenue so it would extend straight across Stover Road and cut behind Nanny's and the city electric building. The new road would follow the railroad right-of-way and connect with the present road near Foster Boat Works.

The expansion project includes development of the 300-foot piece of landfront property the city is purchasing between the present park and the boat storage facility to the north.

A state grant for purchase of that property has been approved, and City Manager Mike Wiesner said he anticipates no problems with finalizing the purchase.

The property is being bought for about $260,000, a purchase that caused a ruckus with some city residents.

A state appraisal, conducted after questions were raised about purchase price and procedures, came in at nearly that value.

Powers said during her tour with city officials that she thought the project would score well in the evaluation project.

The project is water-based, she noted, and the city has a quality site.

She cautioned, though, that not all sites have been visited and no rankings would be done until the on-site inspections were completed.

Rankings for the Michigan Natural Resources Trust Fund would not take place until September, she said. The Trust Fund was formerly known as the Kammer Land Trust Fund.

Money from that fund, which pays 75 percent of development costs, might be available in the fall, she said.

Money from the federal Land and Water Conservation Fund, however, might not be appropriated by Congress until next fall, she said.

Rankings by the DNR would probably be completed in January, though, she said, so communities would know if they were to receive funds.

Under that program, the cost of the project would be split 50-50, she said.

Since the criteria are different and the rankings are done separately, Powers said, it is possible for a municipality to qualify for both grants – but it would have to choose just one to accept.

There is about $5 million available through the Trust Fund, she said, and about $1.1 million through Land and Water.

The city would pay for its portion of the work with money from a special tax increment financing plan for the Ferry Beach district, which includes the Foster Boat Works.

Council divided on hiring city engineer

City Manager Mike Wiesner thinks the city could save money by hiring a civil engineer, but some members of council are not too sure.

Wiesner, who is an engineer, told council the $1.6 million, five-year package of improvements to roads, sewers and sidewalks is large enough that the city should have its own engineer.

He also said an in-house engineer would be able to better keep track of projects than a consultant firm hired for specific projects, because a city employee would be involved with a program through all phases of construction, from preliminary surveying to final inspection.

He estimated that an engineer with a couple years experience would cost the city $22,000 to $25,000 in wages and about $42,000 annually in total costs, including office help, fringe benefits and part-time vehicle.

This figures out to about 15 percent of the project costs, he said, compared to the 40 percent built into the program for engineering costs.

The work on the city's skeleton is being financed by a four-mill tax hike, which must be re-approved by council each year.

Because of uncertainty over whether financing would be approved each year and because the work is projected to end in five years, some council members worried about entering any long-term commitment for another employee.

"If you create different jobs or different committees, you're usually stuck with them," Shirley Roloff said.

Bill Bellows suggested the job be made available on a one-year contract, which could be renewed if the tax money were available for the next year's work. Earl Muma said he thought that was a possibility but was still not convinced.

Bob Timms said hiring an engineer would be worthwhile for the city if it saved money, while Norm Probert was dead-set against the idea.

Probert disagreed with Wiesner's figures, saying his calculations showed the cost to be more in the $60,000 range.

Bill Haggard said perhaps the cost could be justified if the engineer could also work on the Ferry Beach project, instead of having to hire outside work for that $600,000-plus project.

Wiesner said some engineering work at the recreational area could be handled by the in-house engineer, but outside help would be needed if the city gets a grant to make beach improvements.

Resident and former council member Jeff Porter said the idea made sense to him because it would keep money in town, instead of being paid to someone from another city who would spend it elsewhere.

Barbara MacArthur of the city Shade Tree Commission said she was not lobbying for hiring an engineer, but asked if the city manager and city planner were not spreading themselves too thinly.

She used as her example a problem encountered in trying to protect two trees near the Erber lot which is being made into a parking lot on Clinton Street.

The council had directed that special care be taken to protect the trees, but while Wiesner was on vacation and planner Gerry Harsch, who only works for the city part-time, was out of town, damage was done.

Even when they are both in town, she said, Wiesner must act as manager, engineer and designer, while Harsch is also zoning administrator.

"Do we have enough (people) on the payroll to do all the work that needs to be done?" asked Ken Staley, former mayor who was the chairman of the committee that recommended the street and sewer projects be undertaken.

Resident Hagen Manker said it appeared to him to be a simple math problem – which approach would save the city the most money?

The council is expected to take up the manager's request to hire an engineer again at its Monday, June 15, meeting.

Celebrating the fourth anniversary of the Rainbow Shoppe are assistant manager Therese Shewhan (left), board of directors president Rita Orlowski and manager Joe Spurgeon. The shop, run by 10 area churches, has expanded from 1,200 square feet in its original location, to 15,000 square feet in Van Pelt Alley and has recently added a furniture department and donation unloading area. The churches involved are First Baptist, First Congregational, United Methodist, Bethany Lutheran, Christ Episcopal, Nazarene, St. Mary's, Community Reformed, Church of God and Assembly of God.

Fundraiser set for legislator

A fundraising dinner for state Rep. Ralph Ostling will be held from 5 to 8 p.m. Sunday, June 14, at the Weathervane restaurant.

Ostling, who is running for his eighth term in the House of Representatives, is a former teacher.

Fundraiser meals cost $15 per person or $25 per couple, with beer or wine included. There will be a cash bar.

Lake management plan presented to county planners

by PEG OHLE

The report of the Lake Charlevoix Management Planning Advisory Committee has been presented to the county planning commission as the first step in taking it to the public.

The planning commission accepted the report with words of appreciation to the 15-person committee that spent two and a half years studying lake problems, but the acceptance was almost stymied.

A question arose when John Haggard, a member of the advisory committee, inquired if this were the same report unanimously accepted by the advisory committee. Haggard was referring not only to the majority report of the committee but also to two minority reports, one which he wrote and another, shorter minority report presented by member William Grimm.

It turned out that the minority reports had not been attached to the report presented to the planning commission and most planning commission members did not know the contents of the minority reports.

After much discussion, the commission voted to accept the report that was "in hand" with the stipulation that when the advisory committee report is presented to the county board, and to the general public, the minority reports be included.

The advisory committee report is scheduled to be presented to the county board of commissioners at its meeting today and to the general public at three public hearings during the summer.

The committee has expressed hope that summer residents will take advantage of the public hearings to learn more about the lake and what its future might be.

Dr. John Hall, chairman of the Lake Charlevoix Management Advisory Committee, stressed that the report did not contain law, but concepts that could be used as a basis for preserving the quality of Lake Charlevoix and the lands surrounding it.

If all goes well, according to Hall, by fall the finished report should be in the hands of the governing bodies of the cities and townships bordering Lake Charlevoix for their use.

Letters to the editor:

'Front door' needs repair

Editor:

The current issue of "Traverse The Magazine" and the summer travel planner issue coming from the Michigan Family Reunion office invite visitors to Charlevoix for May petunia planting and Star of Charlevoix cruises in connection with Michigan's 150th birthday party. Charlevoix is not ready to entertain or host a birthday party as long as their front door on U.S. 31 is that graffiti covered overpass. It is not at all in keeping with the image the city of Charlevoix projects in both the above-mentioned magazines.

I am a Northern Michigan native and a resident of western Michigan still. We drive through your city at least twice each year and definitely feel that "gateway" doesn't portray Charlevoix as we all know it is.

The state transportation department has announced plans for a $32,000 paint job on the railroad viaduct between Charlevoix and Petoskey this summer.

We are blessed we are here

Editor,

Many times we have seen comments in the paper regarding fine restaurants in the area. My husband and I wish to mention The Jordan Inn in East Jordan. We are delighted with the excellent food and the great friendliness of this unique place.

My husband is a former chef and he is always looking for the best in dining. We wish to add that the prices are most reasonable. Our best wishes to Charles and Cindi Cekala in their venture there as owners and chef and hostess.

If I may, I wish to add a little bit more to this letter. I was born and raised here in Charlevoix. Two years ago my husband and I had the opportunity to return here to live. We have a charming little house in town and are close to all the lakes.

We both feel so blessed that we are here. I feel like I have never been away. Many say the town has changed. To me, maybe in physical appearance, but never in the closeness and friendliness.

We feel very happy here and now our children and grandchildren have the pleasure of coming here to enjoy with us.

Suzanne Miles Miller

Thanks for Gray's speech

Editor:

Thank you for including the message of Charlevoix High senior John Gray in the May 27 issue. I think it is very, very good! Would that we could have, and hear, more of such caliber young people. Congrats to John Gray. I wish him much success throughout his life.

Also, I note in your short comment, "They're Back" that you mention the danger of walking Bridge Street from now on through the summer season. How right you are! A big thank you to Police Chief Halverson re. implementing the law on skateboard riders on Bridge Street.

Our sidewalks downtown really aren't wide enough to accommodate activities other than walking, especially during resort days.

Coast Guard out of line

Editor:

This is a letter sent to U.S. Sens. Carl Levin and Donald Riegle.

Aside from the fact that I've never written to my congressmen before, I consider myself a good citizen. I'm a dedicated state employee, vote, and pay my taxes. In addition, like any good citizen, I donate hundreds of hours to volunteer work to improve the quality of life of my fellow man.

Attached is a news article about a man named Cliff Biddick. I've never met Mr. Biddick but I want you to know that I'm sending him a check because I admire him. He found a gentlemanly way to stand on a principle, hoping to send a needed message to our federal government that something is quite wrong. I'm sending you this letter in the hopes that you will know best how to relay the message on to your colleagues who might most influence a change in this situation.

I too am a sailor; have taught boating safety classes for the Coast Guard Auxiliary, the United States Power Squadrons, and the Michigan Department of Natural Resources; and have enjoyed teaching my daughters to appreciate nature and respect authority. It has saddened me in the past year to see the Coast Guard throw away its former image of the highest public respect from a generally-responsible boating public. Recent Coast Guard policy has certainly made it difficult, if not impossible, for Cliff Biddick to pass that respect on to four-year-old Meghan.

I'll continue to do my job...teach public boating safety and crew on Coast Guard Auxiliary patrols. Please do what you can to encourage Congress to do its job and return the Coast Guard to the "service" it was intended to be. Thank you.

Bertram P. Schafer
Holt

The article the letter writer refers to is from the May 27 Courier and concerns Biddick's dispute with the Coast Guard over random boating made for safety checks and drug searches.

Walkway to Lake Michigan off West Dixon

Beacons of Blessing

A devotional column prepared
by the Charlevoix Ministerial Association

Submitted by
Rev. Lowell Anderson
Charlevoix Assembly of God

On a regular basis pastors receive a bulk-rate mailing pack of "clergy cards." They are packs of between 50 and 100 3.5 cards which advertise the latest church or ministry-related products anywhere from church steeples to choir robes, and from wireless microphones to books of sermons. One card in a recent pack read "special offer - Become Like Jesus for $6.00."

Close examination revealed that the card advertised a new book by a well-known author entitled "Become Like Jesus" and the selling price was only $6 (postage and handling included; of course). Certainly no one would have really thought that becoming like Jesus would either be cheap or easy. Or would they?

In a society where we have come to expect, and often require, instant communication, rapid transportation and instant gratification, it has become easy for us to expect the same for our religion. While communication, transportation and recreation can be meaningfully altered and "improved" to accommodate our self-serving lifestyle, one's relationship with God cannot be.

In issuing His call to follow Him, Jesus says to us, "If anyone would come after me, he must deny himself and take up his cross and follow me. For whoever wants to save his life will lose it, but whoever loses his life for me will find it. What good will it be for a man if he gains the whole world, yet forfeits his soul? Or what can a man give in exchange for his soul?" Matt. 16:24-26 NIV.

Anything in life with real value has a high price tag! And that's why a relationship with Jesus Christ is not easy...because it's not cheap! Becoming like Jesus, which is part of the benefit of a relationship with Him, takes more than six dollars and a "business reply card." It takes a life-time investment. But it yields an eternal reward!

No circus this year

Clockwise BY BOB CLOCK

Night and day.

That was the difference between Charlevoix High School's beautiful graduation ceremony Sunday and that fiasco that masqueraded as a graduation just one year ago.

We don't know who should get the credit for effecting such a change, but we suspect that everyone involved played a part, including the school board, the administrators, the faculty and of course the graduates themselves.

The result was an impressive, solemn — yet light-hearted — ceremony that left everyone feeling that the future of the country is in pretty good hands.

The administrators made a wise decision in allowing the graduates to pick their own speaker. In the past, administrators kept that privilege for themselves, usually picking a Charlevoix High School graduate who has made his or her mark in the world.

This year the graduates decided they wanted to hear from Gayle Gennett, the elementary school counselor who was their counselor during their freshman and sophomore years. And they couldn't have made a better choice, since Mrs. Gennett knows the class of '87 better than just about anyone else and enjoys a warm rapport with the students.

She also had some pretty serious words for parents about the importance of "letting go" now that our seniors are beginning to make their own way in the world. She was so right. String-cutting isn't easy, but it must be done.

A nice touch at the end of the ceremony found a quintet of seniors singing "Friends" around a piano. And why not? I think members of the class of '87 will remain "friends" for a long time to come.

When the ceremony ended, a few poppers were popped and a few mortarboards sailed skyward — a fitting, joyous climax to a beautiful, meaningful ceremony.

After last year's circus, many of us didn't know what to expect; but I think we were all pleasantly surprised. And relieved.

AT LONG LAST, the benches are in place in East Park and were put to good use by the throngs who converged on Bridge Street Saturday and Sunday.

Singing "Friends"

Work also appears to progressing nicely on the new parking lot on Clinton Street, which hopefully will be ready when the real tourist influx begins in July.

Opening of the new Burger King restaurant on South Bridge Street also appears to be only a few weeks away. I'm happy to see that Burger King is starting to tone down its anti-MacDonald TV advertising. I'll be happy when the sniping ends entirely because I, for one, find such commercials particularly embarrassing.

In fact, if I have a choice between two comparable products, I'll go out of my way to buy the product being held up to ridicule by its competitor. And almost everyone I know feels the same way. It's strange how the folks who write TV commercials have overlooked this fundamental principle of human behavior. (Pepsi Cola take note.)

Maybe such commercials are effective in metropolitan areas along the Eastern Seaboard where rudeness is more-or-less expected. But they don't wash in the Midwest.

The long-delayed miniature golf course at the Captain's Corner also appears to be nearing completion. The site has erupted with huge artificial rock outcroppings reminiscent of the Detroit Zoo. I know quite a few kids in town who can hardly wait for the grand opening. I'm one of them.

Teddy shows general a good time on Jordan

EDITH GILBERT

Teddy Kotowich was my good friend and now he's gone. It was a treat to have him guide us down the Jordan River on fishing trips during the summer. He used a small, flat bottom boat and manipulated the boat by lifting and lowering a heavy chain with his powerful arms. By this unique method he would steer us to the deepest fishing holes as well as keep us out of the prickly pines along the shore. We always caught fish, which he carefully cleaned and fried for lunch on a clearing along the river, and they tasted marvelous.

Teddy, a professional fishing guide, was known far and wide by serious trout fishermen. Many feature articles have been written about him in major newspapers and magazines over the years.

Teddy came to mind one day, a number of years ago, when I was having lunch with my friend, Joanne Cummings in her Lake Charlevoix home. She was in a quandry because art patron Nate Cummings, to whom she was then married, was bringing Gen. Mark Clark up for the weekend. How could they entertain him?

"Send the men down the Jordan River with Teddy Kotowich," I suggested. "It will take almost the whole day, and they'll love it!"

"Are you sure?" Joanne wasn't so sure. But finally I convinced her by promising to make all the arrangements, which I did.

Early Saturday morning the two men were driven to East Jordan. Nate had to stop for his Wall Street Journal to see how his company, now called Sarah Lee, was doing. He couldn't understand that there was no Wall Street Journal available in East Jordan then, and I am not sure if there is one available now.

The two men hooked up with Teddy, who got them settled in this flat bottom boat; Nate with his briefcase all ready to catch up with his endless reports, the general ready for some serious fishing. Teddy sized up the situation and in no uncertain terms told Nate – he didn't call him Mr. Cummings – to put down his !&?! briefcase.

The rest of the day Teddy and the general caught fish and relived World War II campaigns. (Teddy had been attached to the Army's 106th Infantry, was captured by the German troops at the Battle of the Bulge in France and interned in a German prison camp.)

Seeing those three diverse figures floating down the Jordan River together must have been quite a sight. The general sitting tall and straight as a pine tree, Nate trying to be comfortable on the hard wooden seat, and Teddy, short, tan and built like a brick wall, handling the heavy chain with ease.

It was a wonderful day for Gen. Mark Clark, an unforgettable day for Nate Cummings, and one of the highlights of Teddy's career.

It's still possible to rent a flat bottom canoe with a chain for fishing – but there are no guides available anymore. No matter, Teddy is irreplaceable.

Something very special is taking place on Monday, June 22! The Bay View Association has generously given the Crooked Tree Arts Council permission to conduct a hour tour on the spacious grounds from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. In addition to 7 adorable, vintage cottages, we are invited to visit the museum (built in 1876), lunch at Stafford's Bay View Inn, or, if one prefers, enjoy a silver tea at the Women's Council Building. A perfect salute to Michigan's Sesquicentennial.

It's interesting to note that we've seen more, and more men join the tours every year. It's a grand opportunity to observe the pre-condo lifestyle, when this area was noted for its rustic flavor, and families would settle in to "rusticate" for the whole summer! Most of the homes have many tiny nooks and porches, where a person can withdraw to read or draw, knit or embroider, study or compose. None of this jolly off-the-kitchen-family-room-togetherness. The charming, old cottages have may twists and turns, with rooms that seem to envelope each person in his own little, quiet, private space. One may ponder on the tour what effect a house has on the people it houses, and do people reflect the house they live in, or does the house reflect the people who live in it, or a little of both?

For tickets and more details, call the McCune Arts Center at 347-4337 or the Appletree or Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

Pat Ranger honored as NCMC top teacher

by PEG OHLE

In these days when teachers are more often criticized than praised, those who are singled out for special tribute must feel specially honored.

Pat Ranger of Charlevoix says she does.

Ranger, who has taught at North Central Michigan College for over 13 years, last week received the Outstanding Teacher of the Year Award at the college's commencement ceremonies, in recognition of her "sincere concern for students and knowledge of subject matter."

The recognition means much to Ranger because it came from the students – the students she has had in her classes and their friends.

Ranger teaches sociology-anthropology, political science, and speech.

"We are mostly a two-year liberal arts college for students who later transfer to four-year colleges and universities," Ranger explained, "although we also have many studying health care and business subjects."

Many Charlevoix High School graduates begin their advanced education at North Central, she said, and many Charlevoix teachers and other adults take refresher or enrichment classes there.

The mother of four grown children – three of whom graduated from University of Michigan and one from Ferris State College – Ranger not only likes to teach, but likes to take courses.

Two years ago, she took a course in Soviet life and culture through Central Michigan University and last year she studied data processing at North Central.

"I can't stay out of the classroom, in front or in back," Ranger quipped.

This teacher has also been a student much of her life. After graduating from Charlevoix High School, she attended Sarah Lawrence College, from which she spent her junior year at The Sorbonne, University of Paris. Then came graduate work at the University of Michigan, the University of London and Purdue University. She was also a teaching fellow at the University of Michigan.

With all this academic background, Ranger says her students at North Central are the best she has ever taught.

Their average age is 30, and there are many more women than men.

"They are coming back to school after raising their families. Many are retaining to enter entirely new occupations," she explained.

The greater number of women in her classes gives Ranger an opportunity to express some of her thoughts about women not doing their part in government and polities.

"They have a naive view of politics. They think it is only for men. They need to improve their own self image," says this teacher who includes "women's problems" in her sociology curriculum.

Another concern of Ranger is the lack of interest in voting, especially among young people. She is trying to change this: "In our political science courses we try to get students to understand what democracy is and what it means to them. They have to learn it is important to vote."

Ranger will teach speech, political science and sociology at North Central's summer session. Part of the sociology studies will be "contemporary social problems," dealing with all kinds of concerns from the local to national level. As she says, "With all that's going on, we"ll have a lot to talk about."

College Week is open to all interested persons.

Weddings

Laurie Nussbaum

MacArthur-Nussbaum

Laurie Robb MacArthur and David Arthur Nussbaum exchanged marriage vows Sunday afternoon, May 31, at the University Club of Flint.

The bride, who has been making her home in Flint, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Morgan MacArthur of Charlevoix. Her bridegroom, who also lives in Flint, is the son of Cedric L. Nussbaum of Deal, N.J., and the late Marjorie Nussbaum.

Rabbi Gerald Shuster officiated at the double-ring ceremony witnessed by approximately 60 family members and close friends.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length gown of white chiffon with a fitted bodice of gros pointe lace. Her headpiece was a cascade of bridal flowers accented with a spray of mock pearls, and she carried a bouquet of white and Sonya peach roses and baby's-breath.

Karen M. MacArthur, a sister of the bride, served as maid of honor, and another sister, Marjorie MacArthur, and Lisa Nussbaum, sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids. Jesse Nussbaum, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl.

The maid of honor wore a cocktail-length gown of periwinkle blue chiffon with free-floating panels attached at the waist front and back. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and baby's-breath. The bridesmaids, in different gowns, carried the chupah.

The flower girl wore a full-length cotton dress with wide collar banded with cotton lace.

Peter Nussbaum served his brother as best man, and Michael Pelavin and Peter Gluck were groomsmen. Robert Tambellini and Elliot Blumberg helped with seating the guests.

Music for the occasion was furnished by soloist Staff Sergeant Nancy D. MacArthur, a sister of the bride, who is soprano with the United States Army Field Band, Soldiers Chorus.

The bride's parents hosted a reception at the University Club following the wedding ceremony.

Approximately 125 guests were seated at tables decorated with baskets of old-fashioned arrangements of lilies, roses, cosmos and baby's-breath.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Pelavin hosted the rehearsal dinner at their home the evening before the wedding.

Gail and James Warner

Borowiak-Warner

An arrangement of mums graced the altar of the First United Methodist Church in Gaylord for the May 2 wedding of Gail Borowiak and James Warner. The Rev. Donna Lindberg performed the double ring ceremony before 250 wedding guests.

Ernest and Dorothy Borowiak of Gaylord are parents of the bride. The groom is the son of Jasper and Mary Warner of Charlevoix.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a Victorian style gown with a high neckline and chantilly lace trim. The bodice featured leg-of-mutton sleeves and the skirt and chapel-length train were trimmed with rows of lace ruffles. The bride's veil of illusion was attached to a floral wreath of silk flowers.

Organist Shirley Bates played traditional wedding music and soloist was Charlie McCormick.

Jody Bilicke of Lansing was maid of honor and Debra Cantrell, sister of the bride and Karen Lechowicz were bridesmaids. They wore peach colored dresses and each carried a long-stemmed peach and yellow rose.

Camille and Danielle Wilkinson were flower girls. They wore yellow dresses and carried baskets of peach and yellow roses with white carnations.

Steven Reppuhn was best man and groomsman was Larry Warner, brother of the groom. Ushers were Dale Borowiak, brother of the bride and Kent Warner, nephew of the groom.

A reception, given by the parents of the bride, was held at the Eagles Club in Gaylord. Josie Meyer assisted with the guest book and also served the wedding cake.

On May 1, a rehearsal dinner was hosted by the parents of the bride at their Gaylord home.

The newlyweds honeymooned in Virginia and North and South Carolina. They are now residing in Jackson. The groom works in the property protection department of Consumers Power Co. and the bride, a registered nurse, works in the special studies department at Ingham Medical Center. Slo-pitch play evens out

Robert Russell hit his first homer of the season as Topside's Phil Skeel held CPI to 10 hits. Bill Green allowed 11 including the homer.

Neither team showed much defense as Pine Hill Nursery scored 28 runs; Dave Novotny took the loss. Gary Wilson hit a home run for the victors. Ken Peebles was the winning pitcher.

Grey Gables and Richard's Topside Cafe went on a hitting binge with a total of 46 hits between them as Gables handed Topside its first loss of the season.

Phil Skeel took the loss after allowing 28 hits, five of them home runs as Randy Holecheck, Mike Loper and Kim Makarowitz hit one each and Gary Drury two. Ray LaVoie, the winning pitcher, allowed 18 hits, among them a home run by Brent Cole.

Dave Novotny pitched Connie's Place to a 4-2 win over Little Caesar's which had seven hits off Bill Gauthier. Novotny allowed seven.

Oleson Foods edged Twin Bay Glass 7-6. Justin Gengle and Jody McGlinch were the pitchers for the winners, allowing eight hits. McGlinch, who came in in relief, allowed two walks before striking out nine batters. Jeremy Boss and David Skeel were the pitchers for the losers. They gave up seven hits.

Boaters found stranded on island

Five area residents, reported overdue from a boat trip to Beaver Island, were found safe Monday on Garden Island by two members of a search party.

Searchers Terry VanArkle and Neil Boyle found Richard LaVanway, 42, and his wife, Mary Sue, 43, of East Jordan and Victor Bloom, 54, his wife, Gloria, 37, and their son, four-year-old Matthew, of Central Lake, safe but cold, wet and hungry on the east side of the uninhabited island, where they had made their way after becoming disoriented after leaving St. James harbor.

In recounting their experience, a Sheriff's Department spokesman said LaVanway reported the party left Charlevoix about 7:30 p.m. Sunday in an 18-foot 1975 Formula inboard-outboard motor boat, went ashore briefly at St. James, and left the island for the return trip about 9:15 p.m.

Their boat was grounded on a shoal off Garden Island. They were able to free themselves but found they were without power when the lower housing (power unit) was torn off by the impact.

While paddling with a paddle and water ski that were aboard the craft, they were caught in a thunderstorm at 1:30 a.m. They reached shore sometime between 3 and 3:30 a.m.

They were located by VanArkle and Boyle at 1 p.m.

Venetian boat parades entries being sought

Plans for the 1987 Venetian Boat Parades are under way.

Chairmen Tom Hawley and John Ochs are looking for entries from the industrial-business community, service clubs, school clubs, condominium associations and individuals.

As in past years, there will be three separate parades: Sailboats under sail, classic boats and the Grand Electrical Boat Parade, which will be followed by fireworks.

A parade route at least 100 feet wide will be marked with buoys. Tim Moore of WKHQ will announce the parades over a commercial sound system to spectators in the downtown area as the boats pass East Park.

Entries are needed for all three parades the chairmen said. Contact the Chamber of Commerce office at 547-2101 for an entry blank or more information. There are also a few openings left on the boat parade committee.

Don Dannecker of Mayfair leads a discussion in local attractions during a Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce workshop on making good first impressions with customers. About 70 people attended two sessions conducted with the help of the Charlevoix County Cooperative Extension Service office.

Student-built house ready for showing

The vocational department of the Charlevoix High School has completed its building trades home for 1986-87 and today was hosting an open house.

The house is located in the Maple Leaf addition on old U.S. 31 South in Charlevoix Township.

The house was scheduled to be open from 1 until 5 p.m. for public inspection.

The basement for the house, located on a large lot, was started during the spring of 1986. This year's building trades class constructed the house which has 1,900 square feet of floor space.

The house has a full basement, a vaulted ceiling living room, three bedrooms including one second-floor bedroom, a den-office or fourth bedroom, a dining room, a kitchen and a laundry room.

It features passive solar and three-zone hot water heat. It has a walk-out dining room, large deck and 24-by 24-foot garage. The outer walls have six inches of insulation and the ceiling has 12 inches.

The 1987-88 house will be of similar construction. It will be located in the same addition. The basement has already been started.

Barry Anderson heads the vocational department at the high school. David Anderson is the building trades instructor. Carl Price is the para-professional.

Charlevoix students who worked on the construction of the house are Philip Peterson, Mike Dohm, Dan Meggison, Joe Simpson and Jim Ciuk, all seniors, and Chad Horn, Brian Houtman, Dave Kurchinski, Hugh Lambert, Terry Largent, Mark Smith, Scott Denny, Toby Young, Jim Wise, Andy Louiselle, Eric Meilleur and Jeremy Kimble, juniors.

Nine Petoskey High School students involved in the building trades class also worked on the project.

The students work in two-hour blocks on the projects. There is also classroom work involved in the course.

Persons interested in the house, which will be offered for sale by the school district, may contact Vincent Olach, business manager for the school district.

Golf course lights cause dispute

Approval of taller-than-normally-allowed lights for the miniature golf facility next to Captain's Corner wasn't a bright idea, says a civic organization.

The city zoning board of appeals unanimously approved four 61-foot light standards for Captain's Cove Mini-Golf. The zoning ordinance sets the normal limit at 35 feet.

The variance approval drew a sharp response from Keep Charlevoix Beautiful, which sent a letter to the city planning director-zoning administrator warning that the organization is "prepared to undertake appropriate measures to ensure that the public trust is upheld."

The group's only legal recourse appears to be seeking an injunction in circuit court to halt installation of the light poles.

The organization's letter said, however, that KCB would "refrain from exercising its legal remedies" if it had the city's assurance all phases of the development shall be subject to continuing planning commission review and approval."

The planning commission, which recommended against the taller lights, is scheduled to take up the landscape plan for the golf course at a Wednesday, June 17, meeting.

Work began on the miniature golf site last summer, but was taken over this year by R.J. Cambridge Co.

The company told the planning commission and the zoning board that the taller lights were needed to insure uniform, adequate lighting for night golfers.

The facility will be open until midnight, the zoning board was told, with the last golfers teeing off at 11 p.m.

The zoning board's approval specified that the fixtures have glare shields attached and that the light average 20 footcandles at the playing level.

The light standards at the high school football field are 80 feet high. The standards they replaced last year were 60 feet tall.

Classical guitarist performing twice in area

Classical guitarist Robert Guthrie will present his fifth free concert in Charlevoix Saturday, June 20, at 7:30 p.m. in the First Congregational Church.

Guthrie will also appear in concert in East Jordan on Friday, June 19, at 7:30 p.m. in the First Presbyterian Church.

Guthrie has studied with many well-known guitarists, including the late master Andres Segovia, who awarded him a personal scholarship.

He has worked with several arts councils, music festivals and other professional groups throughout the country, and taught at Yale, Southern Methodist, Queens College and the Boston Conservatory.

Guthrie also conducts a two-week masterclass at the University of Michigan.

Fourteen professional musicians, students and teachers of music will accompany Guthrie to Charlevoix and East Jordan as auditors.

Amateur: 25 years at Belvedere

Alternative sites still considered

by DON DIBLEY

Belvedere Golf Club's days as exclusive site of the Michigan Amateur Golf Tournament may be numbered.

The idea of rotating tournament sites – which worried Charlevoixans two years ago – has not gone away.

In fact, says Jeffrey Rivard, executive director of the Golf Association of Michigan, several other courses are interested in hosting the event.

"We would not be interested in entering a long-term agreement with anybody," Rivard says, although he is quick to add that does not necessarily mean the Amateur would abandon Belvedere.

The Charlevoix course has been the exclusive site of the prestigious tournament since 1963 – making this the 25th consecutive year Belvedere has hosted the event, which begins Sunday, June 21, and concludes Saturday, June 27.

The tournament has been at Belvedere a total of 37 times, dating back to 1930 when 17-year-old Chuck Kocsis won the first of a record six Amateur titles.

Kocsis still holds the course record, a 64 he set on a cold and windy October day in 1962.

The GAM's current contract with Belvedere runs out in 1988. It's up to the championship committee, with concurrence by the officers, to decide where to play, Rivard says.

"I don't think there's any intention to move from Belvedere on a permanent basis," he says.

Before 1963 there was an informal rotation of courses, he says, but not many golf clubs were willing to turn over their facilities for an entire week.

The GAM is happy with Belvedere and Charlevoix, Rivard says.

"This is more a realization of changing times than any negative reaction," he says, commenting on the interest other sites have shown in hosting the event. "That's not a bad position to be in."

A change in format two years ago accounts for some of the increased popularity of the tournament, he says.

Qualifying rounds, which were held in northwest Michigan and limited to under 400 golfers before the change, are now held throughout the state.

This year a record 828 golfers attended the qualifiers, with 168 moving on to the action at Belvedere.

About 500 of those in the qualifying rounds were from the Detroit tri-county area, Rivard says. The number of qualifiers from each site was determined by what percentage of the total entries played at that course.

And, he says, the score needed to qualify has dropped at most sites. In the first year of the new qualifying format, he says, shooting a 78 or 79 would have qualified a golfer, but this year a 75 or 76 was needed.

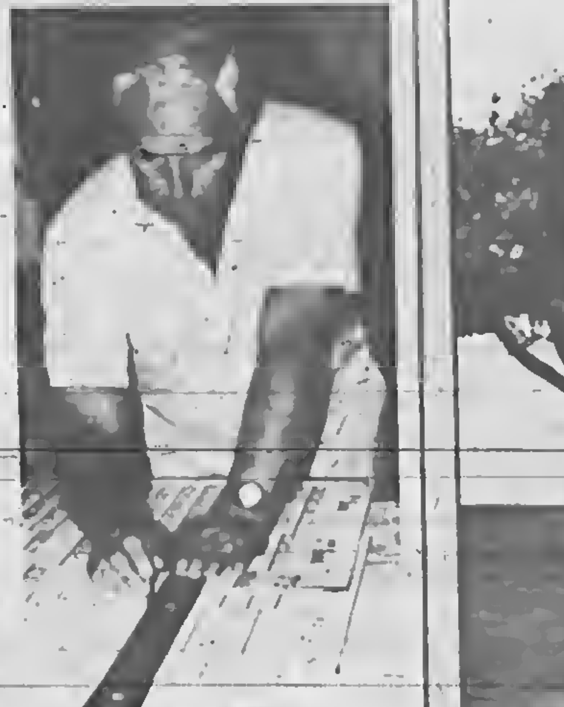
A more serious atmosphere has developed, too, he says, with players concentrating more on winning and less on partying.

The GAM recognizes the important role Belvedere has played in hosting the tournament for so long, he says. "There were days when nobody else wanted the State Amateur at their course."

But now there is considerable interest, Rivard says, and the GAM "has an obligation to consider their interest seriously."

36-YEAR LABOR OF LOVE FOR TOURNEY SCOREKEEPER

by DON DIBLEY



Perry Smith

Perry Smith has been at the center of attention during the Michigan Amateur Golf Tournament for 36 years. And he's never taken his clubs with him.

Although he ranges from a four to a 10 handicap on the links, it's Smith's handiwork with a felt-tip pen that wins accolades.

"He really knows the score," reads the inscription on the plaque above his dining room table.

The award was presented to Smith by the Golf Association of Michigan in 1983 for his work as scorekeeper at the Amateur – work that began in 1951.

The now-retired postman stumbled into his volunteer position at the tournament when he went out to Belvedere to see if Ray Kipke, who was caddymaster, could use some help.

He remembers how score was kept on boards against the east side of the clubhouse and how score sheets had to be cut to fit the boards.

"Then it rained," he recalls. "And the generous Mrs. D.D. Walker let us go inside the clubhouse."

Later, the canvas and frame were built for the present scoreboard.

"I could keep score, that was no trouble. But I had to learn to check and doublecheck," he says, praising the people who have worked with him over the years in keeping track of scores.

And in the 29 Amateurs Smith has worked at, there have been no errors that have resulted in leaving a golfer out of pairings be should have been included in, Smith says.

While he enjoys the golf, it is the people Smith really enjoys.

"Belvedere does it more to help the city's economy than to make money," he says, noting that the course is tied up for a week during its busiest season.

"The GAM officials are all quality people. It's good to see them. And it's good to see the young players come up."

Smith remembers watching Dan Pohl, who won the tournament in 1975 and 1977, in an event in Florida after he turned professional.

Smith was wearing a GAM hat and, as Pohl walked by, held out the hat and said, "Do you remember this?"

Pohl looked at the hat, then at Smith and replied, "I remember you."

Smith remembers Peter Green, a three-time winner of the tourney at Belvedere, as a teenager getting his torn pants sewn up in the lockerroom.

And he remembers Chuck Kocsis, the only six-time winner of the Amateur, in recent years helping the younger players – many of whom didn't know who he was.

Kocsis is considered by many as the best amateur ever in the United States, Smith says, and had the closest thing to a perfect swing.

Vandals strike Peace Poles, markers

A Peace Pole has been stolen and another has been vandalized. In addition, over the weekend someone tore four new hole markers off their signs at the city golf course.

A Peace Pole at the United Methodist Church on State Street was pulled from the ground and taken away last week.

While most of the half-dozen or more of the poles around town are anchored in cement, this one was not.

Then, over the weekend, someone unscrewed one of the plastic panels from the Peace Pole at the Congregational Church across the street from the Methodist Church.

The plate which was removed held a Chinese version of the English inscription "May Peace Prevail on Earth." The other two sides also carry foreign translations of the phrase.

The removed portion was facing the church, where it could not be readily seen as missing from either State or Park.

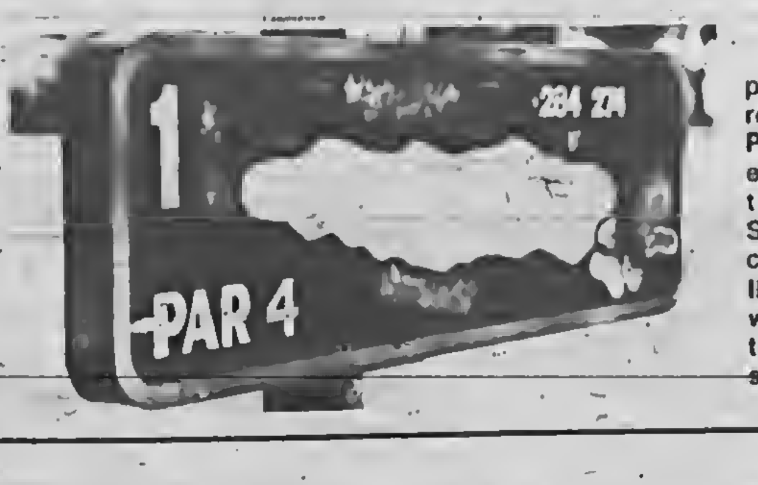
Last week, nine wooden, carved and painted hole markers were installed on poles at the city golf course, showing the length and layout of the individual holes.

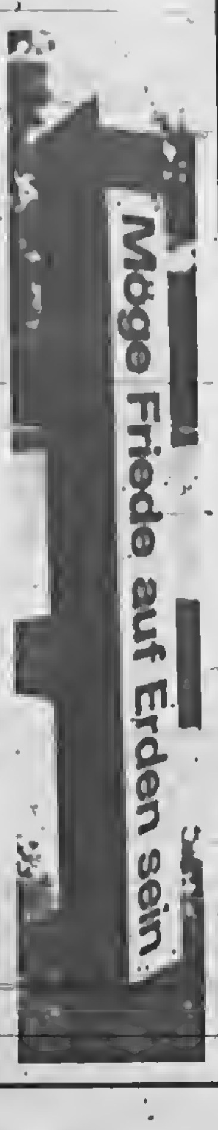
Over the weekend, four of the markers were forcibly removed from their poles by someone who twisted or pried them away from bolts holding them to the poles.

All of the missing markers were in the portion of the course off Division Street.

Another marker and its pole were pulled from the ground, but were left at the course, Bill Gray said.

Gray said each of the markers, made in Traverse City, cost about $125.





The Chinese phrase was removed from the Peace Pole (right) at the Congregational Church. Several golf course markers like the one at left were ripped from their posts and stolen.

Grandvue money woes concern county board, social services unit

by PEG OHLE

Charlevoix County's Grandvue Medical Care Facility and Residential Care Facility, which county residents built with voted millage, is having money problems.

The annual report presented to the county board of commissioners by Richard Tillen of the Department of Social Services indicates an excess of expenditures over revenues for the two facilities of $101,562.

Although the Medical Care Facility ended the year with an excess of $10,462, the Residential Care Facility had a deficiency of $112,025.

While indicating the situation is not alarming, Tillen said his department is concerned about the facilities' cash flow.

"We are especially concerned about occupancy in the nursing (medical care) facility," he said. "Last year was the worst year we've had."

The Medical Care Facility houses patients who need regular nursing care. The Residential Care Facility, which was built several years after the medical care unit, houses persons who need some help and supervision but not regular nursing care.

Last year, the medical care unit had an occupancy rate of 93.6 percent, but in the first four months of this year the occupancy dropped to 93.3 percent. That compares with 97 percent in 1985 and 97.3 percent in 1974.

The residential unit was 82.2 percent occupied in 1986, but in the first four months of this year, the occupancy rose to 90.1 percent. In 1985, occupancy was 83.3 percent, and in 1984 it was 79.4 percent.

The medical care unit has 73 beds, which were occupied by 137 people through the year, for a total of 24,935 days of care. During the year, there were 69 new admissions and 23 re-admissions to the unit, with 89 discharges or deaths. The average age of medical care patients is 81.4, with the oldest being 100 and the youngest 22.

The residential care unit has 27 beds, which were occupied by 51 people through the year, for a total of 8,099 days of care. During the year, there were 25 new admissions and 10 re-admissions to the unit and 35 discharges. The average age of residential care persons is 84.2, with the oldest being 98 and the youngest 61.

Most ($1,116,713) of the medical care unit's revenue came from Medicaid last year; $265,628 came from private sources; and a small amount came from Medicare. The total revenue amounted to $1,389,861. Neither Medicaid nor Medicare contributed to the cost of care in the residential unit. Those residents paid most of their own costs.

Tillen cited the increasing number of health services rendered senior citizens in their homes by both the Health Department and the Commission on Aging as one factor in the decreasing admissions to Grandvue.

"The emphasis is on keeping older people at home, and that is good," he said.

Thinking about the future of Grandvue, Tillen said a new nursing home planned for Charlevoix would probably affect the occupancy of Grandvue, a problem which the county board of commissioners and the Department of Social Services (both of whom oversee Grandvue) will have to face in coming years.

Charlevoix Yesterday

Long-time summer visitors and other Charlevoix old-timers will recognize this stylized picture of the old Beach Hotel, which was located near the present site of LaCroft condominiums. Construction of LaCroft was held up for several months to permit erchaeologists from Michigan State University to explore the site for Indian artifacts. Evidence of an Indian settlement and many artifacts were found in the area.

67% of Class of '87 going on to college

Sixty-nine percent of the 1987 graduating class of Charlevoix High School will be continuing education according to profile compiled by Charles Bentley of the student services office.

More than half the graduates will be going to four-year colleges.

The class had 137 members, including six adult education graduates. It was composed of 73 males and 64 females.

Of those who will not be at college, nine are female and 32 are male. Nine of them will continue in their present job, 16 have jobs but are seeking different ones and three are actively seeking work. Thirteen plan to enter the armed sevices.

The college-bound portion of the class consists of 50 females and 40 males. This is the largest percentage to continue their education in the past 10 years. The smallest percentage was in 1981 when 49 percent of the 147 graduates went on to college.

The largest number of graduates, or 13, will attend North Central Michigan College in Petoskey with most planning to transfer to four-year institutions after two years.

Eight students will attend Ferris State College, seven Grand Valley State College, six Central Michigan University, five each Northwestern Michigan College, Michigan Technological University and Lansing Community College, four each Michigan State University and University of Michigan; three Western Michigan University, two each Alma College, Hillsdale College and Davenport College.

One is enrolled at Northern Michigian University and others are at Aquinas College, Adrain College, Hope College, Lawrence Institute of Technology, Northwood Institute, Eastern Michigan University, Chie University of Cosmetology, Murphy Beatuy Academy and American Travel School.

Eight graduates will be attending out-of-state schools. Two will attend Anderson College (Ind.), and one each are enrolled in the U.S. Naval Academy in Maryland, North Central Bible College in Minnesota, Northwest Bible College in North Dakota, University of Notre Dame in Indiana, Denver Auto-Diesel College in Colorado and Central Florida University.

Five others are undecided or their applications are pending.

Camp McSauba awaits kids with veteran crew

Camp McSauba, day camp for children 5 to 12 years old will open Monday, June 29.

This is the 12th season for the camp on city-owned property along Lake Michigan. The ski lodge serves as camp headquarters.

The camp features a full program for campers, according to camp director Teresa Noirot, who is returning for her second year after five years as a counsolor at the camp.

Noirot, will have four veteran counselors: Jim Buchanan, an Aquinas College graduate with a degree in sports medicine returning for his sixth season; Jeff Greene, recent Central Michigan graduate with a degree in education and a four year veteran counselor; Meg Fowler, an Alma College student and second year counselor; and Amy Sell, a Central Michigan student returning for her second season.

"We are opening a week later than in the past but will still offer a full eight-weeks of camp," Noirot said.

The camp offers camp crafts, arts and crafts, archery, gunnery, swimming, nature study and recreational games such as basketball.

The camp operated daily Monday through Wednesday from 9 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. and from 9 a.m. Thursday until noon on Friday with an overnight on Thursday.

The campers take their own lunch with the camp furnishing dinner on Thursday and breakfast on Friday.

Recreation director Dwight Boss and Camp McSauba director Teresa Noirot.

Campers are responsible for their own transportation.

The fee is $40 per week, an increase of $5 from 1986. The fee includes a T-shirt with the camp logo and meals during the overnight. Registration is limited to 50 campers.

Scholarships are available. Contact Noirot at 547-3267 after camp opens regarding scholarships.

Registrations are bing aeeepted at the recreation department office at City Hall. For more information call 547-3253.

Big Rock wins award for top availability

Big Rock Point nuclear powor plant was a world-class performer during 1986 – an accomplishment saluted by General Electric, Co. (GE), the plant's designer.

Big Rock Point was available to generate power 95.5 percent of the time during 1986 –a higher percentage than achieved by any other GE-designed commercial nuclear reactor worldwide.

The plant's 81.3 percent capacity factor, a comparison of actual power production versus the theoretical maximum output, ranked the plant among the top four GE-designed nuclear plants in the U.S. in 1986.

The plant's top ranking was recognized with a plaque presented by GE to Thomas W. Elward, plant manager.

"This is another feather in our cap," said Elward. "Big Rock Point has a long history of outstanding performance."

In 1977, Big Rock Point set a world record for continuous operation by a boiling water reactor. Among its accomplishments during 1986, the plant succeeded in generating more power than during any other calendar year in its 24-year history.

Counseling center offers scholarship to college

CHIP Counseling Center, in conjunction with Warren Wilson College near Asheville, N.C., will award a full tuition scholarship to a member of the class of 1988 from Emmet, Antrim or Charlevoix county.

Warren Wilson is a fully accredited, four-year liberal arts college offering bachelor degrees in 17 fields. The college is affiliated with the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) but welcomes students of all backgrounds.

There are three requirements to apply: a letter of recommendation from the senior's principal or counselor, a transcript attesting that the student has maintained at least a "B" or 3.0 average, and a 1,000-word essay describing the student's personal dream or goal.

Deadline is Oct. 30. The top three entries chosen by the board will be invited for personal interviews.

At Warren Wilson, room and board is covered by a cooperative work program. Each student is assigned to a work crew involved in the operation of the campus.

Questions or applications should be address to the Rev. Bruce Hamilton, board scholarship chairman, in care of CHIP Counseling Center, 723 Park Ave., Charlevoix.

Classical guitar students, not master, performing

A story in last week's Courier gave the wrong impression about the upcoming visit of classical guitarist Robert Guthrie and a group of his students.

While Guthrie himself will not appear in concert, 14 members of his masterclass will present two concerts. Seven of them will perform on Friday, June 19, at 7:30 p.m. in the Presbyterian Church of East Jordan, and the other seven will perform on Saturday, June 20, at 7:30 p.m. in the Congregational Church of Charlevoix.

Guthrie was a student of the late master, Segovia, who awarded him a personal scholarship. He was on the faculty of Yale University until this year but still conducts masterclasses there. He has also taught at Southern Methodist University, Queens College, and the Boston Conservatory. Presently, he is also conducting masterclasses at the University of Michigan.

Members of the masterclasses are all teachers, professors, or college students of music. There will be no charge for either of their concerts here.

Guthrie's wife is Mary Endress, daughter of Irene Protzel of Charlevoix. Ms. Endress is a vocalist who teaches at Southern Methodist University and gives concerts throughout the country. Occasionally her husband accompanies her on his guitar, according to Mrs. Protzel.

Dele Meredith shows off the new Charlevoix police car. The car has a different color scheme -- silver and blue -- than the older cars and has the latest-technology radio gear.

Downtown returns to yesteryear in eyes of restoration architects

The present facade of Bahnhof and Shop of the Gulls.

What would downtown Charlevoix look like if building fronts were returned to their original styles? The Downtown Development Authority will soon know.

As part of its overall dream plan for the central business district, the DDA is having a Bridge Street facade study completed by an architectural firm specializing in restorations.

John Hilberry and Associates of Detroit, through a grant from the state history division, is drawing up examples of what 20 downtown buildings would be like if restored.

The drawings show what the structures would look like if the false fronts were removed, the hidden cornices were revealed, the layers of paint were removed and the pre-1930's look were restored.

The 20 buildings were selected because good photographs of their past exist, city planner Gerry Harsch says.

Ann Marie Meenahan of John Hilberry, who drew the sketches of what renovated buildings could look like, used the building housing The Bahnhof and Shop of the Gulls as one example.

The Bahnhof, she says, has the original tin ceiling intact but it goes unnoticed. And hidden behind the mansard roof above the first floor is a series of tall transom windows.

By removing the false roof and letting light enter through the transoms, she says, the shop would be brighter and the tin ceiling would stand out to be admired.

Her look at the building also removes the mansard roof from above the second floor, takes the paint off the bricked front and adds a low canvas awning below the transoms.

Mennahan says the drawings are not intended to be a blueprint of what should be done, but to provide "a direction, a concept" for store owners to look at.

Harsch says copies of the drawings will be given to owners of the buildings which were selected.

The city has no power to force anyone to renovate a building.

"If we can get one good restoration going, that will serve as an example," he says.

The facade study will be incorporated into the final DDA plan report, Harsch says.

Watercolorist's works in Petoskey arts exhibit

Watercolors by Cara Bobbitt Hochhalter of Charlevoix and wood-fired porcelain by Ellie Nicol of Petoskey will be featured at the Art Tree Sales Gallery June 22 through July 4.

Hochhalter lives in Charlevoix but grew up spending her summers in Bay View. Her father, Vernon Bobbitt, was head of the art department at Albion College for 30 years, and also taught art at Bay View.

She recently illustrated a historical book by Beatrice Henshaw of Good Hart. The volume, entitled "Backward, Turn Backward," was published by the Historical Society of Michigan. Hochhalter also produced a coloring book of Charlevoix scenes. Her work was selected by the Lansing Art Gallery to hang in its 1987 juried competition, "Botanical Images."

New phone directory launched

An area-wide telephone directory for upper northwest Michigan will be published next February by Review Directories, Inc., a new venture of the Petoskey News-Review.

"We believe that a multi-county telephone directory is needed in our ever-expanding market," News-Review Publisher Kirk Schaller said about the PhoneGuide Community Telephone Directory.

Heading the eight-member staff is John Tolbert, former Petoskey Regional Chamber of Commerce manager and former vice president of Old Kent Bank-Petoskey. Rounding out Review Directories Inc.'s senior management team with Schaller and Tolbert, is Ken Winter, News-Review editor and general manager and Charlevoix Courier general manager.

The sales staff includes: Charles Butwell, Petoskey insurance salesperson; Sandra Galbraith, Petoskey advertising and sales representative; Phyllis Johnson, former News-Review sales representative; Jim Wright, former Cheboygan business owner and yellow page account executive, Dena McKenzie, former News-Review and Jackson area magazine sales person. Administrative assistant is Janet LaChance.

Tourney aide in 37th year

Smith watched with Father Magoon as Kocsis hit a bucket of balls with a four or five iron.

After Kocsis hit all the balls in an area where "two blankets would have covered them," Smith recalls, the priest looked at him and said, "It's rather humbling, isn't it?"

Smith ran the city golf course before World War II and gave lessons at Belvedere. He "won a few tournaments," but never entered the Amateur.

When he started helping out with the scoreboard, he was recovering from tuberculosis.

But he's always liked Belvedere.

"It's open enough to be rewarded for a good shot and penalized for trying something stupid," he says.

Sam Snead liked the course so much when he played it with a friend a dozen or so years ago, Smith says, that when he finished 18 holes he played another nine.

And Tom Watson plays the course whenever he is in the area. Watson's father has a cottage on Walloon Lake.

"Tommy says this is the way a golf course should be," Smith says, with its small greens.

Another famous golfer who liked the course was Walter Hagen, who shot a course record 65 in the 1930 Great Lakes Open.

With Belvedere's contract for the Amateur running out in 1988 and the GAM considering alternate sites (see separate story), Smith remains philosophical.

"If it ends next year, it's been a good association."

Opinion

Missing: A little peace

A lot of people work very hard to make and keep Charlevoix "the beautiful."

But it takes a very few to ruin a lot of good work.

Several senseless acts of vandalism in the past week are particularly disturbing – not only because they took place at all, but because of what they were.

First, a Peace Pole was stolen from the Methodist Church – pulled from the ground and carted off.

Then, a second Peace Pole was vandalized – someone carefully unscrewing and stealing one of the four plastic panels containing a plea for world harmony.

Why would someone take a Peace Pole? You can't plant it in your own front yard without drawing attention to it. It has no practical value.

But it does have spiritual value. The several Peace Poles around Charlevoix are but one of many reminders for residents and visitors that this is a town that cares.

To steal one and vandalize another is a disgraceful act.

Another disgraceful act took place over the weekend when someone went to a lot of effort to rip handsome new hole markers from four poles at the city golf course.

It can only be hoped that whoever took the Peace Pole, the panel containing a Chinese translation for "Let Peace Prevail on Earth" and the golf course markers will return them.

The care and pride that went into them can have little meaning to the thieves.

Wide spot in road

Clockwise

BY BOB CLOCK

Baldwin, Mich. Pop. 674. Seat of Lake County.

Statistically, that about sums up one of my favorite Northern Michigan communities, located on U.S. 37 midway between Grand Rapids and Traverse City in the heart of the Manistee National Forest.

But it doesn't tell the whole story.

Baldwin is, literally, the proverbial "wide spot in the road." When two-lane U.S. 37 hits Baldwin, it suddenly becomes a six-lane thoroughfare. Actually, it's probably wider than six lanes, but who's counting? You could probably get eight cars abreast and still have room for a team of horses.

I wouldn't be surprised if it isn't the widest main drag of any small town in America. It certainly has Woodward Avenue in downtown Detroit beat all hollow.

The buildings that line main street — taken as a group — are rather nondescript. There are lots of old false-front structures dating from the lumbering era. A couple of drug stores. A bar. A grocery store. And the Village Coffee Shop where I usually stop for lunch when I'm down that way.

The Village Coffee Shop is right out of Lake Wobegon. On Monday, the luncheon special was liver and onions, mashed potatoes and gravy, a hot roll and butter — all for $2.75. Please don't ask how the chef made liver gravy. I get weak just thinking about it. But the luncheon looked good and smelled good and eight or 10 liver plates marched out of the kitchen while I was eating my hamburger and french fries. (Let's face it: I'm a coward when it comes to restaurant liver.)

All in all, the Village Coffee Shop is a very homey place. One wall is decorated with big framed photographs and paintings of people — mostly kids and oldsters. They may have been the owner's kinfolk for all I know, but they were very pleasant looking people. I didn't mind sharing my lunch with them.

For dessert I ambled across the wide main street to the Jones Ice Cream Shop, a venerable institution that has served genuine homemade ice cream for as long as I have visited Baldwin — and that goes back a long way.

Probably the most unusual thing about Baldwin is that it has a sizable and long established black population. I don't know if there are more whites or blacks, but it really doesn't matter. Baldwin doesn't appear any more interested in drawing color lines than it does in marking traffic lanes on its main street. Furthermore, you get the distinct impression that neither race is threatening the other, as is the case in so many metropolitan areas.

I wouldn't be surprised of old Abe Lincoln didn't have a town like Baldwin in mind when he signed the Emancipation Proclamation.

Beacons of Blessing

A devotional column prepared
by the Charlevoix Ministerial Association

Submitted by
The Rev. Richmond F. Thweatt III
Christ Episcopal Church

In Acts 10:34 ff, the Apostle Peter preaches to a large crowd that was gathered in the house of Cornelius, the centurion of the Italian regiment. As Peter gave his testimony, his witness to the events of Jesus' ministry, his death and the resurrection, giving Scriptural background and support, the Holy Spirit enters into those listening, and it is as though another Pentecost was occurring. Those who were circumcised were totally astounded that the Holy Spirit would come upon the Gentiles, but they could not deny it because they were speaking in tongues and praising God. Baptism of Cornelius and his household followed.

This was a great lesson for the early believers of The Way, including Peter who had been specially prepared for this event by a vision. This lesson made it possible, early in the growth of the Church, for the body of the faithful to remain one, rather than Jewish and Gentile separately.

The Church marked its "birthday" in celebrating Pentecost, the Sunday that is 50 days past Easter. This was the day the Lord granted to the disciples the "power from on high" to be his messengers throughout Judea, Samaria and to the end of the earth; his apostles, those sent on a mission. To this time, they had been powerless, fearful, cowering behind locked doors "for fear of the Jews." After this, nothing in the world has been able to stop them from witnessing and giving their testimony to the reality of Jesus the Christ, risen from the dead!

One of the many things the Church in all its various branches needs to recover is seriously. taking the power of His Spirit and relying on Him to lead in the direction he would have His Church go. Time and again in Acts, the Spirit of God leads the apostles into new work or guides them away from work that is not proper for them at the time.

To the world it might seem sort of "willy nilly," but in all our planning within the Church, there needs to be built room for change if we receive indications, one way or another, from the Spirit, either to proceed or to go another way. That means laying plans carefully, far enough in advance there is time to offer them in prayer with expectation of response, proceeding in faith and with the sure confidence that we are on God's side. When objections arise, as surely they will, they may be evaluated for truth and any corrections needed made. After all, it's His side, not ours, and this avoids a lot of possessiveness, both of the work which we are asked to do and of the means we are given to perform the work.

Of the Spirit, we Christians need have no fear because the Lord speaks of His work in John 16. The work of the Spirit is to lead the disciples into all truth, to take of Jesus' own and make it known, to convict the world of its sins, and to make known things yet to come. All of these we are told to expect. All have been a part of the ministry, worship and practice of the Church throughout its span.

As it has always been, as it was told us it would be, let it be now! Let us, who are Christians, live in expectation that God's power is available for daily living and ministries, that it is His will that we should know and experience this, and that we need only ask "our Father who art in heaven" and all which we need will be ours for His work.

Many say this is a post-Christian age, a time more like the 3rd Century AD than any other, a truly difficult age in which to live and be a Christian. If it is, the power of God was and is always sufficient for his people. Ask, expect, receive, go, and be doing His work with "the power from on high!"

Letters to the editor:

Charlevoix Class of '86 dared to be different

Editor,

The fact that the Charlevoix class of 1986 can vote must give some people nightmares.

In last week's Charlevoix Courier, Bob Clock stated that the future of the country was in pretty good hands with the class of 1987. This is understandable: these graduates are hard workers and are eager to please – they gave the community what it expected.

On the other hand, my class, the above-mentioned class of '86, was a group of non-conformists. Yes, the difference, as Mr. Clock said, was that between "night and day."

Most of the people who attended last year's graduation "fiasco," as it has been termed, had not gone through that final year with us. Some said we were trying to see how much we could get away with – I prefer to see it as a rebellion against tradition.

Take pep rallies for instance. For three years we screamed our lungs out during the competition yell – a competition that says the class that can cheer the loudest is the best. Considering our class has only 100 people compared to other classes (such as this year's 140 students), it is hardly surprising we never won. Senior year came and we tried for the first couple of rallies, but to no avail. So we decided to try something different – total silence at the next rally. The next time we got to listen to a speech by an underclassman on the meaning of school spirit. So at following assemblies we sang the "Brady Bunch" theme, a silly thing to most people, but to us a symbol of our unity.

What I'm trying to say is that we did have spirit – just as much as any other class; we loved our school. We stuck together: what we did we did as a class. We rebelled against tradition. We wanted a fair chance – a chance to be ourselves.

To the people of Charlevoix my graduation was a disgrace. To me it was a hundred individuals, each acting independently, yet as a group, one last time. My class was willing to try new things. In this day and age I rest easier knowing that there are people like the ones in my class who think twice before shredding papers, rather than those who do what they're told and nothing more.

I truly hope I have not offended anyone, especially the class of 1987, with this letter – that is not its purpose. I'm just trying to say that no one is better than another, they are only different. The class of 1987 consists of people who will be very successful, but so does the one of '86.

This fall, many members of the class of '87 will go to college. There they will become members of the class of 1991 – but they will cherish their high school memories just as we should be able to cherish ours. No member of my class should hang his head in disgrace. We disgraced no one.

I would like to congratulate the class of 1987. I have no doubts that they will continue to make us as proud of them in the future as we were in the past.

However, a few of us in the class of '86 may surprise you – don't mark us for life. You may one day be proud of us, too. My class had original ideas and a sense of humor. This world could use a little more of both. Life is too short not to enjoy.

To my classmates I have one last thing to say: Dare to be different.

Carol A. Ormsby

Comparison of 1986, 1987 graduations unfair

Editor;

Night and day.

Yes, Mr. Clock was right in his "Clockwise" column in last week's edition. The difference between graduating classes is like night and day, and it should be! Yes, there was a great difference between the graduation ceremony of the Class of 1986 and that of last week's, but I think Clock has gone too far in calling ours, the Class of 86's ceremony, a fiasco and circus. He seems to be judging the class as a whole, when, in actuality, it is made up of individuals. Our class received much criticism last year for our behavior, but enough is enough.

I do not deny the fact that I too like many threw poppers, yelled and screamed, but not all partook, and they should not be condemned with the rest. I think it is pretty sad that after a year's time they still look back on us with criticism. Those who have complained about our behavior on graduation day have not been with us during the past year. Many of us have completed a year of college, in the armed services or at work. I feel that we are all looking toward the future and past is past!

Much of the public was aghast that we were so boisterous rather than the traditional, quiet, almost solemn atmosphere. All I have to say is that is was our graduation, and we acted in the way we wanted and felt. There was much excitement on that day and to be asked to hold all of that in during an hour or more ceremony is a lot to ask. I see it as no different than a football or basketball game. While the players are concentrating on how to win and their next move, people in the stands are acting very much the same as we did. What is the difference?

This year's graduating class had more freedom over what was to be their ceremony, which I think was terrific! They were able to pick their speaker and even a quintet sang a special song. Traditionally, only the guest speaker, the administrators, the valedictorian and the salutatorian are allowed to speak. So the way I see it, is that all our "carrying on" was our way of letting others know how we felt and our way of contributing to the ceremony. After finishing 13 years of school together, I call that a cause worth cheering about. None of us went there with the direct intention of offending anyone.

I feel my class has been misjudged very seriously. One class is no better than the next. All the classes before us and the ones after us will and have broken the rules to some extent, but I think it is unfair for only us to be "nailed" for it! People thought because of our "carrying on" that we didn't care. So untrue! The public did not observe us getting ready together and in the hallways before marching in. There was much happiness, sadness, tears and embraces. We were and still are a close and caring class.

I can only speak for myself, but I have a feeling that I am not the only one who feels this way. I think my class took pride in being a little different, and there is nothing wrong with that! I stand to defend my class because I am proud to be a member of the Class of 1986.

The Belvedere Club resorter has been coming to Charlevoix for 55 years. She is a Jackson resident.

She was an active golfer until age 90.

Several relatives are visiting her to celebrate her birthday, including sons Leland II and George Bisbee, both of Jackson.

Della Oliver displays a quilt she recently completed. It depicts the nine Native American Methodist churches in Michigan and will be shown at an Ethnic Minority Church Meeting at Albion College this month.

Quilt depicts Native American churches

Charlevoix quilt-maker Della Oliver has completed a quilt depicting the exterior of the nine Methodist Native American churches in Michigan.

The quilt will be exhibited this month at an Ethnic Minority Church Meeting at Albion College.

Oliver began with the Greensky Hill Methodist Church in Hayes Township and created the other church squares from photographs.

A few years ago, she designed an entire quilt from Greensky Hill Church scenes. This church building dates back to 1840, but the congregation was formed in 1833, according to Oliver.

Oliver is planning a showing and sale of her quilts and other handicrafts at her home this month.

90th birthday party set

A 90th birthday party for Mary Trayte will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. Friday, June 26, at the United Methodist Church.

The Charlevoix native is currently a resident of Fort Myers, Fla. Hostesses for the party are her daughter Hilda Asher and Joan Nelson.

No presents are requested, just cards. For further information, call Nelson at 547-6786.

Horton Bay parade entry deadline near

by PEG OIILE

This year, as Michigan celebrates its sesquicentennial, Bay Township celebrates its centennial.

That is why the theme of the 9th annual Horton Bay Fourth of July parade is "The Bay 100." Records show Bay Township was part of Evangeline Township until 1887, when Charlevoix County officials gave permission for the separation.

The original intent was to name the new township "Alger" after Russell A. Alger, governor of the state, but instead the honor went to the protective Lake Charlevoix bay at the southern end of the township.

The Horton Bay parade, which many Charlevoixans have adopted in the absence of one of their own, is now accepting entries for the "Fun and Frolic" of July 4.

It is hoped that most entries will depict events of the last 100 years in an entertaining manner. Those looking for ideas may contact Jon Hartwell at 582-6288.

Entries are due at the Horton Bay General Store by Friday, June 19. All that is necessary is the entrant's name, phone number and description of the entry. No political, tasteless or commercial entries are acceptable.

Regatta season kicks off

Thirty-three area boats participated in the first of the summer's Northern Lake Michigan PHRF regattas, the Pine Lake Regatta, sponsored by the Charlevoix Yacht Club.

The fleet was split into four divisions with boats participating ranging in size from Bruce Omart's "Respite" at 46 feet to the Catalina 22 skippered by Steve Johnson.

Two races were held with the first one being a 25-mile event from Charlevoix to Boyne City and back. There was very slow going for the first few hours until the wind filled in from the west, bringing the later starting, larger boats up from the rear in a hurry. Wind speeds reached a maximum of 12 to 15 knots as the boats scooted back up wind to Charlevoix for the finish. First to finish was Traveller with Dave Irish at the helm, followed by the larger boats.

The shorter triangle race saw the breeze build to a maximum of 25 knots of wind as the lake breeze generated by warming weather really filled in.

The races proved to be a good test of sailing skill with conditions ranging from dead calm drifting to roaring down wind under full spinnakers and straining gear.

Results of the two days were:

Division I A – 1st Sorcer, Schock 35, Gary Gleason; 2nd Elusion, J35, John Ginn; 3rd Lionhart, Bentenau 42, John Gregory.

Division I – 1st Traveller, Pet 34, Dave Irish; 2nd Pygmalion, C&C 33 Custom, Dave Strawbridge; 3rd Slick, J29, B & B VanWesten.

Division II – 1st Coal Pile Express, J24, Gale Lockwood; 2nd Blasen III, Pearson 26, Karl Jurries; 3rd Night Moves S2 7.9, Bill Hawkins.

Division III (Jib & Main) – 1st Flash, Pearson 30, John Gordon; 2nd Cheemaun, SF 32, Ken Heininger; 3rd Cool Whip, Col 24, John Coolman.

Connie's Place dumped Coast Guard 17-2. Dave Novotny allowed six hits. Mark Simmons, who took the loss, allowed 20 including a homer by Larry Lemerand.

In a schedule change teams in this league will now play Monday and Wednesday every week and occasionally on Friday.

Petoskey hard-pitch leagues are using the field with the men's league playing on Tuesday and Thursday and the women's league on Sunday and an occasional Tuesday.

NOTICE OF A PUBLIC HEARING ON INCREASING PROPERTY TAXES

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on June 22, 1987, at 7:30 o'clock p.m. at Charlevoix High School the Board of Education of Charlevoix Public Schools will hold a public hearing to consider the levying in 1987 of an additional proposed millage rate of .497 mills for operating purposes pursuant to Act 5, Public Acts of Michigan, 1982.

The Board of Education has the complete authority to establish that 25.905 mills be levied in 1987 from within its present authorized millage rate. The additional proposed millage rate would increase revenues for operating purposes from ad valorem property tax levies in 1987, by two tenths of one per cent (.02).

The increase restores the millage rate to the amount authorized by the voters on June 8, 1987.

The purpose of the hearing is to receive testimony and discuss the levy of an additional millage rate. Not less than seven (7) days following the public hearing the Board of Education may approve the levy of all or any portion of the proposed additional millage rate.

This notice is given by order of the Board of Education.

Participants in a state-long march for peace take a break at the Charlevoix golf course during their 70-day walk. The marchers were treated to a picnic at Ferry Beach and stayed two nights in Charlevoix.

Wanted for Venetian: 150 clowns

One hundred and fifty clowns – one for every year of Michigan's statehood – are being recruited for this year's Venetian Street Parade.

Parade co-chairmen Marell Harrod and Debbie McDowell are seeking clowns for the Saturday, July 25 parade which will have a sesquicentennial theme.

Anyone may participate as a clown; however, young children must be supervised by adults. Clowns will be responsible for arranging their own costumes. Make-up stands will be available for clowns who do not wish to do their own.

McDonald's of Charlevoix has agreed to donate 1,500 balloons and helium so that each of the clowns will be able to carry a bunch of 10 balloons.

Clowns may sign up at the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce at 408 Bridge Street.

The noon Venetian Street parade route has been lengthened. The starting point will be the Carpenter Avenue intersection with Bridge Street instead of the Garfield Avenue intersection.

"By extending the route a little bit, we hope more people will be able to see it without having to fight the crowds," said Harrod. "But the distance is still short enough so that all walking entries such as the clowns and bands should be able to make it with no difficulty."

Applications for parade entries are available at the chamber office. The parade organizers said more decorated floats are needed.

"Although we are designating the sesquicentennial as the official theme because of the statewide celebration, parade entries will not necessarily have to follow it," Harrod said. "Area businesses should realize that thousands of people turn out for the street parade so a decorated float can be an excellent advertising opportunity."

For more information on the parade, call Harrod at 547-5574 or McDowell at 547-9261.

Registration will begin at noon Friday and will be followed by a potluck supper in the Hospitality Room at 6 p.m. Friday.

Business sessions for the organization and its women's auxiliary will open at 10 a.m. Saturday. Following luncheon, the action will move to the municipal golf course. The annual banquet will be held at Duffy's of Charlevoix at 6 p.m.

At 10 a.m. Sunday, the members in their colorful Aussie hats will gather at the memorial in East Park for memorial service conducted by the chaplain Joseph Shindorf of Belding. The service will conclude the three-day meeting which is expected to bring a minimum of 50 veterans and their wives to Charlevoix.

Everett Houk of Garden City is the state commander, George Konen Jr. of Kalkaska is vice commander, Dell John Brooks of Southfield is secretary-treasurer, Shindorf is chaplain and Ralph Waenstrom of Swartz Creek is chief of the boat.

Officers of the auxiliary are Viola Vallas of Temperance state commander, Gloria Simpson of Temperance vice commander, Frances Cross of Grand Rapids secretary, Maxine Gallagher of Maple Rapids treasurer and Mary Lober of Greenville chaplain.

Loss of Star pinches city economy

by FRAN MARTIN

"Wait 'til September or October roll around and we don't have those tour buses..."

Hundreds of thousands of dollars will be lost to the local economy this summer because of the cancellation of the Star of Charlevoix's cruises.

In addition, up to 70 people find themselves out of work because construction of the new sternwheel Star is behind schedule.

"This came as a blow to us," said Phil Lutzi, manager of the Star Line operation in Charlevoix. "We were ready (for the season). We had our entire staff in place, ready to begin July 1 as we had said.

"Our marketing was under way, we were taking reservations. Even our brochures had arrived for the summer."

The company's local payroll for the 3½-month season was "$200,000, give or take a few dollars," Lutzi said.

Many business people are estimating a "ripple effect" of lost revenue will cost the area much more than that – with Mayor Ralph McRae figuring a loss of about one-half million dollars.

"You can't serve more than 35,000 meals aboard the ship as we did last season and not have it effect the community in many ways," Lutzi said.

Jacquie Merta, executive director of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, spoke with business people about the cancellation Monday.

"The consensus is that it is a definite loss to the community," Merta said. "Some people might not notice it immediately because we are going into the busy part of the season. But wait 'til September and October roll around and we don't have those tour buses and charters that the ship brought to town.

"I'm not saying the town won't survive. Of course it will, but the ship and the tourists it brought to the community will be missed."

One thing most merchants mentioned was the loss of jobs for young people who were counting on the income for school, Merta said.

"The majority of the employees were students," she said, "and their job

"All the other good jobs have been taken. It's going to be tough on most kids."

AROUND THE TOWN

There is good news and bad news in the June report on water levels from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers....

The good news is the elevation of Lakes Michigan-Charlevoix at the end of May was about nine inches below what it was one year ago at that time, although still higher than the long-range average.... Also, the seasonal rise should be completed by the end of June....

The bad news is levels are still expected to be above the long-term average for the next six months.... At the end of November, the lakes are expected to be about 19 inches below what they were at the same time in 1986, but the November mean will be well above the long-term average.

After several weeks of trying, the owners of the former Shell gas station site have obtained their first approvals from the city – other than permission to tear down the old building – in their plan to build a mini-mart....

The zoning board of appeals OK'd variances on how far the mini-mart must be from Bridge Street, Carpenter, the high school track and a house to the north and OK'd the entire lot being smaller than normally needed for a service station....

Approval was given after the zoning board agreed with Alpena Oil's attorney, Tom Pointner, that the zoning ordinance definition of a service station does not fit the mini-mart, which does not have bays for repairing cars....

Next stop is the planning commission, which will consider John Campbell's site plan tonight before passing it along to city council for approval or disapproval....

The only change on the site since April – when the old gas station was demolished and carted away in less than a day – was the removal last Tuesday of the Shell sign.... That was taken down, with the owner's permission, by the city as a nonconforming sign....

Concert season at The Castle begins Saturday when Ratt and Poison bring their hard rock sounds to town....

Other concerts confirmed for this summer are a little softer on the eardrums – Chicago on Saturday, July 4, Bryan Adams on Sunday, July 12, and Huey Lewis and the News on Saturday, Aug. 15.... Tickets are available locally at Wharfside.

With the Erber lot well under way, the city is looking toward developing further parking areas...

With this in mind, an option has been signed on possible purchase of a house at 108 Clinton, next to the Erber lot.... If the city finalizes the deal, it would buy the property from Betty White for $70,000 on a five-year land contract....

Some council thinking is that parking could be developed behind the house, which might be re-sold,... parking would be allowed on the partial lot because it is in the central business district. The parking would be adjacent the Erber and Mason Street lots and the possible future lot behind the post office, which the city also owns.

More than 2,000 trees on city-owned property and rights-of-ways will be trimmed this summer....

A contract with Nelson Tree Service Inc. of Dayton, Ohio, has been OK'd at a cost of $21.98 per tree – a little less than the next lowest of five bids but about half the cost of bids from firms in Northwest Michigan....

Nelson has done work for Top-O-Michigan Rural Electric Co. and Wolverine Power Supply Cooperative and received good recommendations from them.

A landscape plan for the miniature golf course next to Captain's Corner shopping center has received a favorable nod from the city planning commission....

The planners looked at the plan after Keep Charlevoix Beautiful asked city planner Gerry Harsch to involve them in an advisory role following a dispute over lighting for Captain's Cove....

Approval of the landscaping is Harsch's decision, and the planners saw no problems with what was presented.... Bruce MacArthur of KCB wanted to make sure the plan would be carried out as shown and Harsch said it would....

The lighting controversy came up when the developer, R.J. Cambridge, asked for permission to put up four 70-foot poles instead of dozens of smaller ones.... The planning board recommended against the idea, but the zoning board unanimously approved it.

The delivered lights have shields to direct the direction of the light and have less candlepower than approved.... If smaller standards had been put up, the city would have had no control over the lights' number or brightness.

PIE RECORD MAY FALL

6,000 people watched as the world's largest cherry pie was made in Charlevoix in 1976.

Traverse aims to beat cherry pie record

Charlevoix's world record is in jeopardy.

No, this has nothing to do with petunias, but with that giant cherry pie baked 11 years ago.

A monument to Charlevoix's entry into the Guinness World Book of Records sits beside the township fire hall on South U.S. 31 – the 3,700-pound pie tin used in the event.

It contains a facsimile pie, but on May 15, 1976, it contained seven tons of real pie.

Now Traverse City, which fancies itself as Earth's cherry capital, wants to bake a bigger one. Stopping them so far, though, is finding a 20-foot pie tin.

They want to feed 80,000 people the three-foot-deep dessert during a July sesquicentennial celebration.

In on the proposal are the city, the Michigan Cherry Committee in Lansing, Chef Pierre and Traverse area cherry producers.

They're all excited about the prospects of building a special oven and lifting the pie into it with a crane.

Sounds a lot like Charlevoix's recipe for success in '76.

The whole idea was cooked up by local chef Dave Phillips as a national bicentennial and Michigan Week treat.

Medusa Cement made a fire brick oven 18½ feet across. And Will-Flow, which recently built a time capsule for the historical society, made a stainless steel pie plate.

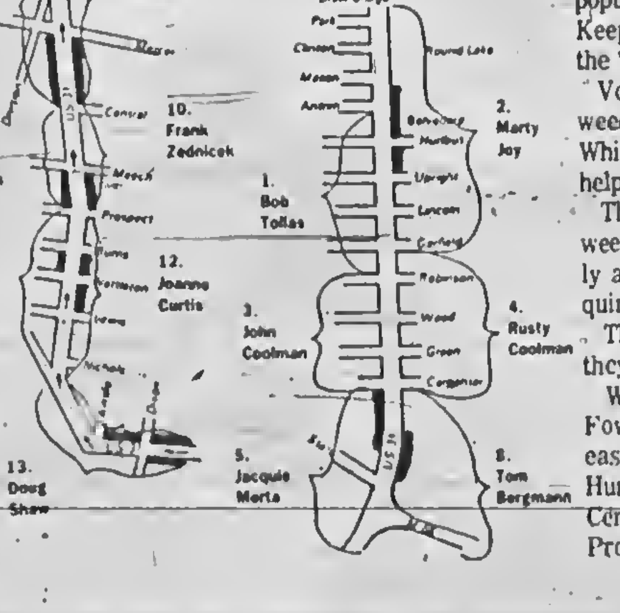
Chef Pierre was involved in that operation, too, helping Phillips work out a formula for a 14,000-pound pie.

It took 750 pounds of flour, 5,850 pounds of tart cherries and 30 volunteers four hours to make the pie.

They used lawn rollers and shovels to mix and roll the crust, and a a new dump truck from Erber Auto to mix the filling. A crane from Koboski Redi-Mix was used to lower the mixture into the oven and pull the finished pie out.

A crowd of 6,000 was on hand for the baking and eating.

'Adopt-A-Block' helps keep petunias pretty



The petunias are growing well – but so are the weeds.

In an effort to fight back the growing weed population in the petunia beds along U.S. 31, Keep Charlevoix Beautiful has come up with the "Adopt a Block" program.

Volunteers are assuming responsibility for weeding one designated block of petunias. While many have already volunteered, more help is needed.

The job requires about 10 minutes twice a week. A light cultivation with a hoe is normally all that is needed, but hand-pulling is required in a few places.

The following volunteers have already said they would weed these blocks:

Wanda Hill, east Nettleton to Lewis; Nancy Fowler, east Burns to Nettleton; Jack Uhrick, east Dixon to Bridge; Cara Hockhalter, east Hurlbut to Antrim; Mike Wiesner, east half of Central to Meech; Marge Dinwiddie, east Prospect to Meech.

Also, Bruce Bartlett, west U.S. 31 south; Nancy Wood, east half Ainslee to Nichols; Villa Moderne, west half Carpenter to State; Doris Lundteigen, west Burns to Nettleton; Don Meggison, west Prospect to Meech; Archway Motel, Archway frontage.

And, Bonnie Elzinga, east Hurlbut to Upright; city of Charlevoix, golf course and Memorial Park; Hagen Manker, east Ainslee to Dixon; Burger King, Burger King frontage; and Doug Shaw, west Dixon to Bridge.

The accompanying map shows (in black) the areas already covered by volunteers. Persons interested in weeding the other areas may contact the block captain designated on the map.

Burger King has launched a program to help encourage weeding of the petunias by offering a free Whopper to families that take a grocery bag of petunia weeds to the restaurant.

JUN 1987

KCB holds annual meeting

Keep Charlevoix Beautiful will hold its annual meeting at 9 a.m. Saturday, June 27, at the Harsha House on State Street.

The meeting coincides with an Historical Society open house.

The new petunia watering truck will be dedicated by Mayor Ralph McRae. The truck has been in operation for several weeks, but the paint job is still in progress.

Nominations for the KCB board will be voted on. New nominees are Diane Dreyer and David L. Campbell. Continuing board nominees are Steve Andreae, Cissy Bickersteth, Don Dannecker, Sulane Hamilton, Vel Kammerman, Dave Knight, Alyee Lesser, Darrell Linder, Bruce MacArthur, Patsy Ranger, Dave Strawbridge and Bob Tollas. Nominations will be accepted from the floor.

In a report on the organization's past year, president MacArthur lists several issues KCB was involved in:

- Mediating in an informal setting the proposed Water's Edge development in Charlevoix Township; the project has re-emerged under different management but adhering to the negotiated agreement.
- Raising questions about the scale of the Edgewater Inn when it was in blueprint stage; the city now requires scale models of large projects.
- Leading the movement to oppose a change in the scenic reserve zoning to allow development; citizen furor led to abandonment of the proposal and the tax issue with Chicago Club that precipitated the move was peacefully settled.
- Raising concerns about whether Captain's Cove miniature golf course was adhering to site plan restrictions.
- Encouraging adoption by the planning commission of a landscape ordinance; Burger King voluntarily followed the provisions of the proposed ordinance and reduced the parking lot by three spaces.

Members of the 1917 sixth grade class of Charlevoix Elementary School were in a somber mood when this picture was taken. Margaret Fitch Erber, second from the left in the last row, who loaned us the picture, mentioned some of the other members of the class shown in the picture: Gordon Todd, Edith Crendell Novotny, Albert Widdifield, John Burns, Mergy Swinton, Josephine Kichula, Louie O'Neel, Ralph Ranger and Frank Krulik. A Miss Allen was the teacher.

Joyce Boss (left) and Linny Arnold (center) receive certificates of appreciation for volunteer work at Charlevoix Elementary from Sandy Melewitz, secretary-treasurer of the Parents Advisory Council. More than 50 volunteers are thanked in a letter to the editor on page 4.

Reward offered in recreation site vandalism

A reward is being offered for the arrest and conviction of anyone vandalizing the city golf course or tennis courts.

City councilman Norm Probert said he and auto dealer Pat McKeown have each pledged $125 in reward money.

Probert said he hopes to convince several civic organizations to join in the offer.

Four new hole markers were ripped from their posts a week ago, just four days after the engraved wooden markers were installed.

Vandals have also struck many of the Peace Poles in the city, damaging at least three and taking another.

Star loss hurts city economy

aboard the Star meant school for them. Most people I spoke with mentioned that."

Janna Wieland, a local Michigan State University student, was planning to return to the Star for her fourth season as a stewardess.

"It was a great job," Wieland said. "It paid well and I was counting on it as a lot of kids were. Probably 25 or 30 local students were employed there and the largest majority were students.

"A lot of the others were students from the area – Petoskey, Boyne City, all around the north," she said. "I even got one of my friends from school a job. She'd come to town and gotten herself settled and was ready to go to work. Like me, she'll be looking for another job or will have to go home.

"The bad part is, all the other good jobs have been taken. It's going to be tough for some kids."

Merta said some local motel operators were already complaining by Monday that they were receiving reservation cancellations made by tourists prior to coming north to go aboard the cruise ship.

McRae said the Star already had about 5,000 confirmed reservations for this summer, with the ship not due to arrive until this week.

Lutzi announced cancellation of the season Friday when he was informed by Star Line corporate headquarters in Mount Pleasant that construction of the sternwheel paddleboat would not be completed in time for the current season.

"When our people got down there (Carolina River Boat Corp.) in Myrtle Beach, S.C., they found that it would not be possible to complete its construction until Aug. 1 at the earliest and probably not until mid-August," Lutzi said.

"We knew he (the builder) was behind schedule but not that far behind," he said. "As a result, we had no choice but to cancel out the season because our biggest business is done during the early weeks of the summer."

Asked what the future may hold for the company in Charlevoix, Lutzi said, "I couldn't say. That will be a decision to be made by company officials. Certainly the situation will have to be evaluated."

The first cruise ship in the Star Line came to Charlevoix in 1981.

A Charlevoix sweatshirt has found its way to the Arctic Circle. Dore Drofn Skuladotter, who lives in Reufarhofn, Iceland, wears the shirt sent to her by Elaine and Norm Tolmen of Charlevoix. Dore will be an exchange student at Charlevoix High School next year and will make her home with the Tolmens while here. Those are Dora's sisters pictured with her. The exchange student is being sponsored by the Education Ministries of Scandinavian Countries.

City sticks with outside engineer

The city will not be hiring an engineer.

A proposal by City Manager Mike Wiesner, a registered engineer, to put a civil engineer on staff as a money-saving move has been defeated 4-2 by city council.

Wiesner suggested the move after council voted three weeks ago to begin a five-year, $1.6 million reconstruction of the road, sewer and water main systems.

Coupling those projects with proposed improvements to Ferry Beach, the city electrical system and the downtown area, he said, gave the city the potential of engaging in $3.7 million in construction projects in 1988 and 1989.

Wiesner projected the annual cost of hiring a full-time engineer – including fringe benefits, support people, transportation and supplies – at $45,000, with up to $25,000 of that going toward the engineer's salary.

He projected the annual cost of hiring an engineering firm on a part-time consulting basis just for the skeletal improvements at $40,000.

Beyond working on the infrastructure projects, Wiesner reasoned, a city engineer could work on Ferry Beach and downtown projects, future township sanitary sewer extensions, revisions of an airport master plan and assisting the part-time city planner on zoning administration.

Based on his years as a city engineer, Wiesner estimated the cost of in-house engineering at two-thirds the cost of consulting engineers.

Several residents spoke to council about the proposal, with Billie Smith questioning why so many projects are in the works at one time and if some couldn't be postponed to relieve the tax burden.

The infrastructure work requires a four-mill tax increase, while the Ferry Beach and downtown projects are self-supported by tax-increment financing plans and possible grants. The electrical work is paid for from a charter-mandated fund supported by electric rates.

Former council members Jeff Porter and Mike Greeley spoke in favor of the action, as did Mary Feindt, representing the Downtown Development Authority.

Councilwoman Shirley Roloff questioned the speed at which the city is growing and said next year she would not be voting to renew the four-mill tax hike.

Councilman Bob Timms said he thought hiring an engineer was a worthwhile way for the city to save money.

Councilman Bill Haggard agreed, pointing to Wiesner's estimate of about 30 percent savings.

Only one other Michigan city among 86 with populations between 2,000 and 4,000 has a full-time engineer on staff, councilman Norm Probert said.

And councilman Earl Muma said he favored starting with a part-time position. He said he was worried what the city would do with a full-time engineer if the four-mill tax did not pass next year.

Councilman Bill Bellows said, while he agreed with what Wiesner said, most people in the city appeared to oppose the move.

On a motion by Haggard, seconded by Timms, to hire an engineer whose job would be evaluated in one year, those two voted "yes." Voting "no" were Roloff, Bellows, Probert and Muma.

Llamas are an unusual sight for motorists on Boyne City Road.

Llamas living life of leisure in north

by PEG OHLE

Motorists driving past the Maplewood Veterinary Clinic on Boyne City Road have been blinking their eyes lately.

What they think they are seeing – and really are seeing – are llamas casually grazing in the fields.

Veterinarian Dr. James Vicker and his neighbors, John and Barbara Danly, have brought eight llamas to Charlevoix County to breed, keep as pets and to sheer for wool for Barbara Danly's looms.

"We were looking around for something to do since we retired, something more than a hobby," Barbara told the Courier. "We thought of raising sheep, but we gave up that idea.

"Then, Jim Vicker asked if we had ever considered llamas. Of course we hadn't, but finally we did."

In travels around the midwest, the Danlys talked with llama breeders and read as much as they could find about these members of the camel family which for centuries have roamed the Andes Mountains.

Vicker also lent his professional knowledge and training to the quest for animals to start a herd.

Finally, two males and six females were brought from the Grand Rapids area, Maple City and Wisconsin and were settled in their new home.

In the field, the llamas look particularly alert because they hold their heads high and their long ears point straight skyward.

"They are easy to feed," Barbara says. "Mostly they just graze in the fields and eat hay, and they don't need much water. Also, they are sure-footed, can carry up to 100 pounds and don't spook."

Llama herds are becoming more prevalent in Michigan, according to a recent story in the Detroit Free Press. The largest herd, in Monroe County, consists of about 70 animals worth some $500,000. The owners plan to build the herd to 100 animals, then start selling some of their offspring.

Imports of llamas from South America have been banned since the 1920's because of fear of hoof and mouth disease. The first herds were brought to the United States by William Randolph Hearst to graze on his San Simeon estate in California.

Presently, there are 12,000 to 15,000 llamas in this country, a spokeswoman for the International Llama Association estimates.

Although most of the llama herds are in northern California, Oregon, Washington and Montana, the number of herds in the midwest and east is growing, this spokeswoman adds. The association lists 26 herds in Michigan, she said, more than in any other state in the midwest.

There will be a "Llama Trek" in Colorado over Labor Day in which the Danlys hope to participate. "We will travel a trail with llamas carrying our packs," Barbara explained.

Nearer home, the 1988 convention of the International Llama Association is scheduled to be held at Shanty Creek in Bellaire.

Still nearer home, Charlevoix County's own llamas – Hans, Stefanie, Annie, Xmas, Ulane, Orka, Mackinaw and Lady Bear – (at least some of them) will appear in the Horton Bay Fourth of July parade.

Letters to the editor:

Poppy buyers help many

Editor:

To all the wonderful people who purchased poppies the latter part of May from members of the American Legion Auxiliary and the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) Auxiliary, we all thank you wholeheartedly for your generosity, thoughtfulness and caring!

Many asked what the poppies stand for. The poppies sold by both organizations are made by hospitalized disabled veterans. Money collected from the sale of these poppies enables both our organizations to help these disabled veterans, to give assistance to local veterans and families, and is carefully used only for relief purposes. Contributions are also made to assist those disabled at the Veterans' Facilities in Traverse City, Grand Rapids and Battle Creek hospitals, to the VFW National Home for Children at Eaton Rapids, and to the American Legion Villa for indigent aged veterans and spouses.

All auxiliaries nationwide have similar programs of service through the sale of poppies. We also are able to assist with a few local projects such as Bergmann Center's Special Olympics and to support a few veteran's children to attend Mt. McSauba day camp who would not otherwise be financially able to do so. The poppies are also in rememberance of those who died in service to our country.

We hope you purchased from both auxiliaries, and if so, we are doubly grateful for your help. Thus, it is through your help and generous donations that we are able to carry on our service programs for veterans. Again, a big thank you from all of us, and from all of those who receive aid through your purchase of the memorial poppies.

Shirt fits to a T

Clockwise BY BOB CLOCK

I had been expecting a visit from one of the Guinness people for some time, but I was still surprised one day last week when an impeccably dressed gentleman in a wool tweed suit mounted the front steps while I was seated on the porch having my morning coffee. He was carrying an attache case in one hand and a rolled up umbrella in the other.

"Good morning," I said cheerfully. "Can I help you?"

"I am looking for a Mr. John Robert Clock, also known as Bob Clock," be said in a clipped British accent.

"I'm Bob Clock," I answered.

"I am Veritas Noteworthy," the stranger announced. "Very Noteworthy, for short. My friends call me Mr. Noteworthy."

"Won't you have a seat, Mr. Noteworthy?" I asked, motioning toward a wicker rocker. "And feel free to remove your jacket. It's terribly warm for so early in the day.

Mr. Noteworthy placed his attache case on the porch table, propped his umbrella against the railing, removed his heavy suitcoat and sat down opposite me.

"As you probably suspect," Mr. Noteworthy began without further preamble, "I represent The Guinness Book of World Records. I recently received a memo from the home office that you may be the last person in the world never to have worn a shirt with writing on it. Could that be true?

I blushed unashamedly.

"I'm afraid it may be," I admitted.

Mr. Noteworthy opened his attache case and pulled out a voluminous file with my name on the cover.

"Of course, this unusual distinction could well win you a place in The Guinness Book of World Records," he continued. "But there are a few loose ends which must be tied up. For example, when you were an infant, is it possible that you never wore a pair of Doctor Dentons with your name embroidered above the pocket?"

"Entirely possible," I answered. "I come from a very small family and my parents never had any trouble keeping us apart. I was the kid who slept in the back bedroom."

Mr. Noteworthy returned to his file.

"According to our records you never played in any Little League sports," he noted.

"Correct," I said. "When I was a kid Little League hadn't been invented. We played baseball in the alley. A manhole cover was home plate and we used rhubarb leaves for bases. And we never wore team shirts."

"And in high school," Mr. Noteworthy pursued. "What did you go out for in high school?"

"I went out for lunch," I answered innocently.

"I mean sports," Mr. Noteworthy responded, with a hint of exasperation.

"I worked all through high school," I explained, "and never had much time for sports. Remember, the war was going on and every able-bodied person too young or too old to fight was expected to help keep the home fires burning. I worked as a stockboy at Kresge's for 32½ cents an hour until the war ended."

"And in college?" Mr. Noteworthy persisted.

"Oh, I had a class in gymnastics but we never wore any special team shirts or anything like that."

"And after college?"

"I took up skiing, but I always wore your basic black, without any monograms or inscriptions."

"You never belonged to any adult bowling league or softball team?" Mr. Noteworthy continued, shaking his head sadly.

"Never," I answered.

"And although you live in Charlevoix — a town noted for its personalized T-shirts and sweatshirts — you have never bought one?"

"Oh, I have bought a few," I said, "but always as gifts. I have never owned one myself."

"This is simply incredible, Mr. Clock," Mr. Noteworthy said closing his file. "Earlier this spring one of our researchers visited a Stone Age tribe in the Philippine Islands where we thought we might find someone who had never worn a printed T-shirt. But when he arrived at that remote outpost, a softball game between MacDonalds and Burger King teams was in progress and all of the players were wearing uniforms. He returned to Manila without even making his presence known."

"So will you put me in The Guinness Book of World Records?" I asked anxiously.

"Most certainly, Mr. Clock," Mr. Noteworth said rising from his chair. "And as an added token of our appreciation you will receive one of our monogrammed T-shirts by parcel post in a week or two."

'Round Town

Seeing double — and triple — common at Parkside

EDITH GILBERT

Can you believe it's been ten years since Leo and Gladys Markel have taken over the Parkside Dining Room on Bridge Street? And do you know they employ 45 young people—including one set of triplets and two sets of twins?

The McClanaghan triplets, John, Gene and Tony, have signed up for a six-year hitch in the Navy's nuclear program and leave June 23 for Orlando, Fla. The two sets of twins, David and Jon Eakes and James and Jason Corwin, will still be around, so don't think you're seeing double after eating that famous whitefish.

Jeff Cockfield holds the longest employment record—he's been at the Parkside for 10 summers (Memorial Day to Labor Day). Over this decade, he's received his degree in civil engineering from Michigan State. Owner Leo Markel calls Jeff his right-hand man. In turn, Jeff feels like part of the family. He favors the morning shift because he can still be on the beach by 3 or 4 o'clock. After work, everyone enjoys doing things together. They play volleyball at the beach, go boating, swim and have fun.

The McClanaghan triplets (top), the Eakes twins (center) and the Corwin twins with Parkside owners Leo and Gladys Markel.

The Parkside Dining Room is a hands-on, family enterprise. The Markel family consists of Leo and Gladys, daughter Gloria and son Mark. They reside in a spacious upstairs apartment, overlooking Round Lake. Not one of them have had any restaurant background or training. Leo was a golfer and teaching pro and both Leo and Gladys were formerly ski instructors at Boyne Mountain and Boyne Highlands. In the summer Gloria supervises the evening shift, and the rest of the year she is a post-graduate student at Michigan State. Mark is the cook in the summer and is working on his doctorate at the University of Michigan.

I asked Kyle Smith, who has also been a cook at the restaurant for 7 years (he started bussing tables as a high school freshman), why people wait in line 30 to 40 mintues during the height of the season to be served in a restaurant without a liquor license.

"Because the food is good, and everyone is friendly," he replied. "Gladys is well organized. Everything is spelled out on work sheets for the busboys, waitresses, cooks and hostess. This results in good service. The restaurant is kept clean and painted every year. And sometimes people want to wait so they can be seated at the tables with a view of the harbor." All good reasons for a successful restaurant operation.

"How are you going to celebrate this 10th anniversary?" I asked Leo. With a smile be replied, "Working hard is the celebration!" But I think there's more to it than that.

....

Irene Bisbee Collins celebrated her 95th birthday last week on the Belvedere. (Did you know the word is "on" the Belvedere and "at" the Chicago Club?)

Anyone who has gone boating regularly on Lake Charlevoix, has noticed the 52-foot yacht Gele B. It has been going out every nice day with owner Mrs. Colling aboard for the last 55 years.

The boat is named after Mrs. Collins' sons, George and Leland. Both sons and their children and grandchildren are all up for a visit at the Belvedere cottage.

Mrs. Collins winters in Jackson, Mich, but when she arrives in Charlevoix in June she says, "I'm home!"

Beacons of Blessing

A devotional column prepared
by the Charlevoix Ministerial Association

Submitted by
Rev. Robert H. Piller
Bethany Lutheran Church

What really is happiness? If we were to judge by the smiling faces, the exuberance, the bubbling zest for life of those who appear in our television commercials, we would have to conclude that happiness is primarily a matter of getting and having things.

If, on the other hand, we were to judge by the daily news that fills those same television screens, we might be inclined to believe that there is no such thing as happiness. Almost all is tragedy.

The World of God tells us that there is such a thing as true happiness, but it is not a product to be sought or bought. It is rather a by-product of a gift that God has already given us. He has given us His love, His mercy and His pardon—all through Jesus Christ, our Savior. Along with these precious gifts He gives us happiness: genuine, deep down happiness which abides forever.

Happiness, Paul tells us in Romans five, consists ultimately in "standing in God's grace." That means living everyday in the constant awareness of God's forgiving love—knowing, beyond all doubt, that we are His and He is ours and that nothing (not even Satan, death, or hell) can ever separate us.

Even in moments of deepest sorrow the Christian knows a joy that can never be erased. It is the joy he was found in Jesus Christ his Redeemer. It was a man who lived in God's grace (God's love) who wrote the lines:

Joy, O joy, beyond all gladness,
Christ has done away with sadness!
Hense, all sorrow and repining,
For the Sun of Grace is shining!

Happy is the person who is living in that "Sun"—the Son of God'a unchanging grace and mercy. Storms may come and clouds may gather; earthly treasures may fly away—but nothing can rob the believer of his joy. He knows that for him the Sun of Grace is shining! And in that Sun there is joy forevermore.

Weddings

Patricia and John Rash

Smith-Rash

Patricia Eileen Smith and John F. Rash were married Saturday afternoon, June 13, at St. Mary's Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vane Smith of Charlevoix, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Rash of Cheboygan.

The Rev. Casimer J. Zawacki officiated at the double-ring rites before approximately 250 guests.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white crystalette fashioned with silk floss embroidery on organza and silk floss lace. The princess bodice was embroidered with silk floss, heavily beaded, and trimmed with embroidered organza medallions. The sleeves were Victorian in style, and the skirt featured rows of alternating silk floss lace and crystalette.

The train was cathedral style, and the veil was a wreath of silk flowers held with beaded, fingertip illusion veiling.

The bride's bouquet was an arrangement of spring flowers.

Rebecca K. Smith assisted her sister as maid of honor, and Suzanne Reynolds and Mary Faculak served as bridesmaids. They wore pink, dusty rose, and ruby fantasia tea-length gowns fashioned with bouffant skirts and assymetrically gathered bodices accented by fantasia rose, and full pouf tapered sleeves. They carried arrangements of spring flowers.

Charles Reynolds served as best man, with William Rash and George Smith assisting as groomsmen. Peter Rash and Roger Smith were ushers.

Music for the ceremony was provided by Sister Lisa Lazio and Jean Lignell.

The bride's parents hosted the wedding reception at the Veterans of Foreign Wars Hall, following which the newlyweds left for a wedding trip to Cedar Pointe. They will make their home in Cheboygan. (Photography by Donald Smith)

Beverly Plum, membership chairman, reported a membership of 74.

Finck and Rosalyn Goldstick, Buddy Poppy chairmen, thanked members for assisting with the sale of poppies and the public for purchasing them. Funds from the sale are used for public service projects.

Vicki Voisin, a Charlevoix County representative on the Resource Center board, told the Courier, "We are purchasing a new building for our Children's Leaning Center preschool and for our counseling center, and are enlarging our whole program."

The Women's Resource Center'a headquarters are at North Central Michigan College in Petoskey, with Jan Mancinelli serving as director. Its main thrust has been the operation of the Safeway House, a temporary home for abused and-or disposed women and their children.

The Resource Center also operates the Goldmine Thrift Shop in Petoskey, which not only is a source of income for the center, but also a source of inexpensive clothing and other needs for low-income families.

Sports

Jeff Drenth participates in a race while attending Central Michigan University (left). An earliar Vanetian Foot Race appears behind him.

Venetian race honors Jeff Drenth

The Venetian Fesitval Foot Race is being renamed the Jeff Drenth Memorial in honor of the late All-American runner from Charlevoix.

Entry blanks are available for the ninth annual race, to be held Saturday, July 25. The race has received TAC certification with courses for the 5-kilometer and 10-kilometer events sanctioned for records, said director Pete Spieles.

The races are sponsored by the Charlevoix High School cross country team and the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

A world-class distance runner, Drenth died suddenly at age 25 last June at an Oregon training center, where he was preparing for the 1988 Olympic trials.

Drenth qualified for the World Cross Country Championships three times, was Mid-American champion twice and ran in the NCAA finals twice. He was twice named an All-American in the 10,000 meters.

Medals and trophies, bearing a likeness of Drenth, have been designed by Doug Bergmann, a member of the Rayder cross country team. A plaque, on which the names of the winners of the 5K and 10K races will be engraved, has also been designed and made by Bergmann and will have its permanent home in the chamber of commerce building.

As in the past, there will be three races: A one-mile event at 9:30 a.m. in which the entire family may participate for a $5 fee and the 5K and 10K races which will begin at 10 a.m. The entry fee is $5 before July 25 and $6 on July 25.

In the one-mile event, there will be four categories ranging from 13 years and under through 30 years and over for both men and women.

The 5K event has six categories from 13 years and under through 50 and over for both men and women.

The 10K race will feature six age categories for men from 18 years and under through 50 years and older and four for women from 18 years and younger through 40 years and over.

The races will start at Charlevoix Elementary School on Division Avenue.

Ribbons will be presented to all runners. Medals will be presented to the top three finishers in each category. Trophies and plaques will be given to the first place winners, both male and female, in each race.

T-shirts will be awarded to the first 150 entries in the race.

Post-race refreshments will be available to all participants. There will be aid stations for the 10K participants.

Charlevoix merchants have made donations to support the event.

Entry blanks are available at the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce or from Spieles at 800 Park Avenue.

Amateur match play begins

The 76th Michigan Amateur Golf Tournament is moving into its final phase.

The tournament, being played at Belvedere Golf Club for the 25th consecutive year, begins match play Thursday.

The 64 qualifiers remaining from a field of 168 that began play Tuesday will be trimmed to 16 by Friday and four by Saturday.

The championship match will start about 12:30 p.m. Saturday.

To gain a berth in the five days of play at Belvedere, golfers had to qualify at one of eight sites in the state.

A record 828 tried to qualify in the Golf Association of Michigan finals in the third year of the Amateur's new format.

Among those exempt from qualifying is Peter Green of Franklin, last year's winner. Green won his third championship at Belvedere by defeating Greg Reynolds of Grand Blanc 3 and 2.

The tournament is medal – or stroke – play in the early rounds, turning to head-to-head match play on the final three days.

School sport physical exam procedure changes

Charlevoix middle and high school students planning to participate in sports or cheerleading must have a physical examination prior to the first practice session.

In the past, the medical staff at Charlevoix Area Hospital has given examinations at the high school. The medical staff, however, no longer feels this type of exam is sufficient.

In a letter to athletic director Dale Burge, it has been suggested all students planning to enter a sports program have a comprehensive preparticipation exam and updated exams if a significant illness or injury exists.

As a compromise for this year, the doctors have agreed to provide preparticipation exams to their own patients at no charge.

The exams will be provided in the physicians' offices from Monday, July 13, through Friday, Aug. 7. A reduced fee (approximately $15) will be charged to examinees who are not registered patients. Arrangements must be made individually in the offices of the participating physicians, Burge was advised.

Students must obtain an examination sheet at the high school and take it to the doctor's office.

Physicals are mandatory before a student may participate in any sport, Burge said. Anyone with questions may call the high school office.

Townhouse came to life and soundly defeated Connie's Place 18-7 with the aid of Gary Jakielek's homer. Townhouse got 17 hits off Dave Novotny while Bob Alexander allowed 10.

Although Pine Hill Nursery had home runs by pitcher Ken Peebles, Gary Wilson and Eric Towe, it fell to Topside Cafe 15-12 behind the pitching of Phil Skeel who allowed 17 hits. Peebles gave up 14 hits.

Timber techniques explored

Little Traverse Conservancy and the Michigan Forest Association are joining to promote conservation and proper timber harvesting in northern Michigan.

The program will provide a working demonstration of proper forest management on 70 acres of land owned by the conservancy, a northern Michigan conservation group.

Timber will be managed using the expertise of the Michigan Forest Association, a group of forest landowners and forestry professionals dedicated to promoting wise timber management practices.

Conservancy executive director Tom Bailey said the project will take place on the 70-acre Sims-Moffat Forest Preserve.

The groups hope the demonstration project will attract the attention of area forest landowners who don't know about proper timber management or who are afraid of turning loggers loose on their property.

For information, call Doug Boor of the Michigan Forest Association et 347-2272 or Little Traverse Conservancy at 347-0991.

School board OKs tax rate after hearing

The Charlevoix school board has approved leving school taxes based on rates approved by voters earlier this month.

Following a Truth-in-Taxation hearing mandated by state law, the board approved levying 1.25 mills for one year for facilities improvements and another half-mill for five years to operate the Public Library.

A Truth-in-Taxation hearing is required if the millage to be levied will generate more in tax revenue than it did the year before.

Voters also approved a renewal of general operating funds for one year at the regular June school election.

The school district is one of a few which operates the public city library.

In observance of the July Fourth holiday, the band will play a program of band music including the "Blue and Gray," a suite of Civil War tunes.

The 30-piece band will present a series of Wednesday evening concerts through July and into August.

Lifeguards return early to beaches

Charlevoix's public beaches officially opened Saturday, a week earlier than usual, with lifeguards at Depot and Ferry Avenue beaches on Lake Charlevoix and the Lake Michigan beach south of the pierheads.

Lifeguards will be at all three beaches from 11 a.m. until 6 p.m. daily throughout the summer, recreation director Dwight Boss said.

Three new lifeguards will be joining this staff. They are Packy LaBlance who will be a sophomore at Central Michigan University; Kristin Hendricks of Midland, a freshman at Michigan State University; and Kathy Klimas of Wyoming.

Colleen Bartley, who will be a senior at Michigan State and Ken Rhoads of Oscoda, a senior at Central Michigan will be returning for their second seasons.

Veteran swimming instructors will also be returning, Todd McNitt, of Wyoming, a senior at Central Michigan will be back for his fourth season and Wendy Roberts of East Jordan, a senior at Central Michigan will return for her second year.

The swimming program at Ferry Avenue beach is scheduled to begin Monday.

Summer reading program focuses on state birthday

"Celebrate Michigan....READ!" will be the theme of the summer reading program sponsored by Charlevoix Public Library.

The program will be launched at a party at the library at 109 Clinton St. at 1 p.m. Wednesday, July 1, and will continue for six weeks. The program will be directed by Anne Pfluecke.

The purpose of the program is to encourage reading during the summer. This year books relating to the first 150 years of Michigan will be made available to students in kindergarten through fifth grade.

College class slated on island

Folk, square, and social dance skills and how to teach them will be subjects of a Central Michigan University dance camp on Beaver Island Aug. 16-21.

Participants may earn two semester hours of graduate or undergraduate credit. Initial deposit is due by July 10. Final payment is due July 24. For information call (517)774-3041. To register call (517)774-7137.

Davis aide coming

Bill Huber, area representative for Congressman Robert Davis, will be at the VFW Hall in Charlevoix to discuss problems or questions about the federal government with constituents 12:30-2 p.m. Monday, June 29. No appointment is necessary.

Greg Stevens of Stevens Construction smoothes out the new sidewalk at the Charlevoix Historical Society's Hersha House museum. In the background is the society's new fence, recreating the style of the era.

Boyne house tour features 4 homes

The 80-year-old Presbyterian Church in Boyne City is one of the attractions on the Boyne City Historical Society's third annual house tour, scheduled for Saturday, June 27, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The church parlors will be open for coffee and cookies on the afternoon of the tour, and hostesses will be on hand to tell about the Italian glass windows, solid oak paneling and beams, vaulted ceiling, and other items of historical interest.

The four houses on the tour represent four different modes of living:

There is the turn-of the-century Victorian house on State Street which Leigh and Loretta Woodbury have spent the last 11 years remodeling, renovating, and filling with antiques.

There is the remodeled A-frame on Pleasant Valley Road which Nanette Kritcher has made into a one-person haven, with plenty of room for hobbies and materials needed for them. Of special interest is the terraced flower garden and "done over" corn crib.

There is the very contemporary home of Dr. Jay and Mary Ann Wiersma, located out of town on the south side of Lake Charlevoix. An older house served as the core this this house, but those looking for new and modern architectural ideas will find them in this home. Special emphasis is on view and energy efficiency.

Finally, there is the nineteenth century farm house in Boyne Falls which Norm and Jackie Atrman bought as a retirement project.

After much remodeling and decorating, it is now open for bed and breakfast guests. The lucky ones may be assigned the "Finnish Bedroom", all in blue with handmade rugs; or the "Spartan Room", decorated in green and white and filled with memorabilia of Norm's years at Michigan State.

Tickets are available for $6 at the Charlevoix, East Jordan, Boyne City, and Petoskey Chambers of Commerce, and in Boyne City at the Bread Box, the Depot, and Pippins.

The Depot, Pippins, Lena's Pub, Bread Box, One Water Street, and Dilworth-Wolverine Hotel restaurants will offer a 15 percent discount on luncheons the day of the tour to those showing tour tickets.

Proceeds from the tour will benefit the Boyne City Historical Museum.

Federal agency holding officer election

Election of a Farmers Home Administration county committee member will take place Tuesday, June 30. The FmHA county committee assists the county office in determining the eligibility of applicants for certain types of FmHA loans.

Farmers who live in Emmet, Charlevoix or Cheboygan County do their principal farming within the area for which the election is being held, and derive the principal part of their income from farming are eligible to vote.

The nominee for the area FmHA county is Alfred Foster. Committee members serve three-year terms on a staggered basis.

Ballots are available from the FmHA office at 231 State St., Petoskey. Marked ballots must be received at the office by June 30.

Coast Guard wives group plans picnic

by PEG OHLE

They know that Charlevoix will probably not be their home for long, but they do their best to participate in community activities while they are here.

The Coast Guard Wives Club is a small but energetic group of women whose husbands are stationed in Charlevoix aboard the Mesquite and at the Coast Guard Station.

During the year, this group of women has prepared Christmas baskets for needy families, gathered and organized clothing and toiletries for the Women's Resource Center, donated a carseat for transporting children in custody, helped with planting petunias, worked with the petunia auction, assisted with Red Cross blood drives, and, this summer, is sponsoring a child to attend Mount McSauba Summer Camp.

On Aug. 1, Coast Guard Wives will hold a picnic for all active and retired Coast Guard personnel and their families in the area.

In addition to participating in community affairs, the Coast Guard Wives Club is always "at the ready" to help Coast Guard families, especially when their husbands are on tours of duty away from Charlevoix.

Those wishing to attend should contact Donna LaFean at 547-5401.

Coast Guard cutter heads for Chicago

The Coast Guard Cutter Mesquite will soon leave its homeport in Charlevoix for a busy summer elsewhere on Lake Michigan.

The ship is scheduled to participate in the annual Cherry Festival at Traverse City on Sunday and Monday, July 5-6, before departing for Chicago to participate in extensive renovation of the Chicago Harbor Lighthouse. The work is expected to last through July and possibly into August.

The ship has taken advantage of summer-like weather to deliver approximately 4,000 gallons of diesel fuel to the North Manitou Light. The light, along with other aids-to-navigation maintained by the ship, ensures safe navigation through the Manitou Passage separating the Manitou Islands and Sleeping Bear Point on the mainland of Michigan's west coast.

New category started for boats in Venetian event

A new category of boats in the annual Venetian Boat Parade has been introduced by co-chairmen Tom Hawley and John Oehs. It is the commercial-industrial division of the Grand Electrical Boat Parade.

They said there would be a $50 entry fee with the winner in the division receiving 50 percent of the fees collected and the remaining half going into the 1988 fireworks budget.

There will also be a category for non-profit organizations such as service clubs and school organizations. The best float in this category will win a $100 prize. No entry fee is required.

Call the Chamber of Commerce office with entries in the sailboat under sail, classic boat or Grand Electrical Boat categories.

Panel named to formulate forum series

A steering committee is being established to explore ideas for a series of community forums on national and international issues.

Those attending a sample forum sponsored by an ad hoc committee seeking to stimulate discussion voted to establish the steering committee.

Patti Ulrich, temporary chairperson, said the steering committee would consider films and videotape programs in addition to seeking people to speak on issues such as world food policy and the situation in the Persian Gulf.

At the sample forum, James W. Marshall II of Charlevoix presented an historical perspective and answered questions about Central America.

Hospice holding annual meeting

The annual meeting of the Charlevoix County Hospice will be held at 7 p.m. Monday, June 29, at the United Methodist Church in Boyne City.

The membership meeting will begin with election of four board members. Seeking re-election are Michael Conklin and Ron Winchester. Seeking election are Merlin Delo, Edna Nielsen, Betty Rison and Bill Sturgell.

Camp applications are due by Monday, July 13. Cost for camp is $42.

Campers will participate in recreation, crafts, swimming, hiking and campfire activities. Campers will receive first hand experience in campfire cooking from Claudia Grutsch. Others involved in the program are Nancy Brooks, Gail Greenman, Nora Dowson, Barb Brooks and Kathy Sulak.

The Mill Restaurant has reopened on Boyne City Road in Hayes Township.

Mill restaurant re-opens

The big red farmhouse on Boyne City Road is again teeming with activity. The Mill restaurant has reopened under new management and with facilities for both formal gourmet dining and less formal family affairs.

The main dining room offers complete four-or-five course meals from a varied menu, and the Cellar serves smaller, but just as tasty meals, according to manager Duane Graham. Graham is a native of Petoskey and has been trained in hotel management schools. He returned from Texas to assist with remodeling and furnishing The Mill.

Vic Beck, who acquired a following as chef at Juilleret's in Petoskey and Duffy's in Harbor Springs, is in charge of the kitchen.

Cocktails are available in both the main dining room and the Cellar, and the Cellar, which seats 40 people, is available for private parties.

The rolling hills of Hayes Township surround The Mill, providing a rural setting just eight miles from downtown Charlevoix.

Wetlands discussion Thursday

The Lake Charlevoix Association will host a panel discussion on wetlands at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, June 25, at Charlevoix City Hall.

Participants will be representatives from the state Department of Natural Resources, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the Federal Environmental Protection Agency and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, along with John Campbell of Site Planning Development Inc. of Charlevoix.

Charter boat offers tour, picnic

Charter fishing and tours are available through a new business started by George Rowe.

Rowe, a recent retiree from Eastern Airlines, has moved to the Charlevoix area from Miami and purchased a charter boat.

The boat, a 31-foot Cris-Craft named Sunny Don II, picks up customers at Ward Bros.'s gas dock on Round Lake. Charters can be made by calling Rowe at 547-4138.

Rowe takes his charters fishing in Lakes Michigan and Charlevoix and on Lake Charlevoix boat tours. He has one package that includes a half-day trip and a picnic lunch.

He has been a fishing guide for some time in the Miami area, is a consultant on motor racing and does some outdoors writing.

Chamber members' get-together set

A "business after hours" get-together will be held at Duffy's of Charlevoix from 5 to 7 p.m. Thursday, June 25.

The event is for Chamber of Commerce members and their employees only. The informal gathering is intended to allow members' workers to meet and get to know each other.

There will be no formal program, and participants are asked to take plenty of business cards with them for exchanging.

Charlevoix County State Bank is the sponsor of the event.

Dorothy and Donald Schneider display some of the desserts in their Chocolates of Northport shop.

Mall chocolate shop opens

by PEG OHLE

They call it a "mom and pop" business. That it is, but it is also a mighty sweet business.

Donald and Dorothy Schneider, retired educators, are the owners of Chocolates of Northport, a new chocolate and ice cream store in the Market Mall.

The Schneiders have been in the chocolate and ice cream business since 1981, when they left their jobs in the Flint area and moved to Northport; but it all didn't just happen.

"We had an interest in an antique store in Flint, and when we moved to Northport, we bought a building downtown with the intention of opening an antique shop. Then, one day we were in Harbor Springs and noticed the lovely Kilwin's chocolate shop there," Donald explains.

"Dorothy noted there was no chocolate store in Northport, so we decided to go into that business instead of antiques."

From Northport, the business branched out into stores in Leland and Elk Rapids, and now Charlevoix. The Charlevoix store is the only one that sells ice cream, although the Elk Rapids store will soon begin selling it.

The Schneiders keep their store in the Market Mall open seven days a week from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m.

WETLANDS
The debate goes on

by PEG OHLE

The on-going battle over wetlands is expected to intensify following a Supreme Court decision on land confiscation.

The dispute has been carrying on for years between land developers and real estate interests on one side and the Department of Natural Resources, planning authorities, environmentalists and historical preservationists on the other.

At the center of the controversy in Michigan is a 1979 state law which prevents construction of buildings on property determined to be wetlands.

That law came into play in the Water's Edge development controversy in Charlevoix Township and has altered individual projects in the North.

Northern Michigan lawmakers have become involved in the dispute over wetlands since the Supreme Court ruling, and proposed changes in Michigan's law may have significant impact on future development plans.

Any change in the law "would affect the whole Lake Charlevoix watershed," says one area environmental activist.

The top court case involved land in a flood plain belonging to a California church group that used it as a recreation and retreat center.

The California case

Following a 1978 flood which leveled the area, Los Angeles County, by ordinance, banned all reconstruction in the area to prevent further flash flood disasters and possible drownings.

The church group went to court, claiming the county's action violated the Fifth Amendment which states that private property shall not "be taken for public use without just compensation." The Supreme Court agreed the ordinance unreasonably prevented all uses of the land, which amounted to confiscation without compensation.

Professional land use planners and others engaged in protecting certain areas (such as wetlands) from specified uses point out it is the preventing of all uses of the land that is the significant point here.

AROUND THE TOWN

Awnings are becoming a popular advertising accessory downtown.... More and more businesses are sporting them all the time.... At least 22 businesses have some sort of canvas awning or festoon.

Among the newest are the double awning that stretches across the front of The Bahnhof and the Shop of the Gulls and one covering Mettler's... Still to come are canvas billboards for Mayfair's new location at Edgewater Inn and for Country Casuals' new location at Mayfair's former location....

Another trend developing in the business community is giving the city a light blue look... A greyish-blue paint job lightened up the inside of the Weathervane restaurant and brightened up the inside of the Market Mall (soon to be Bridge Street Centre)...

Charlevoix IGA and its neighbor, Hugo's, got matching shades of blue on their exteriors.... And now a similar light blue has been used as an accent color to give Tim's Natural Foods a cheery new look....

Gone under these paint jobs is the natural wood color most of these buildings recently were ...

An effort is under way to showcase the Welcome as a wintertime attraction in Round Lake Harbor...

The sailing ship spends most winters here anyway, but John Haggard is spearheading a move to get its owners – the Mackinaw City State Park Authority – to authorize a permanent berth off East Park... Now the Welcome berths behind Wharfside for protection from winter winds, where it cannot be easily seen by tourists or residents ... New pilings would be needed in the park if the ship were tied up there...

This winter the Welcome is scheduled for its five-year inspection and will be at Walstrom Marine in Harbor Springs...

Candidates for Miss Charlevoix are needed. So far only two girls have signed up... Six are needed to make the pageant successful, says Jacquie Merta, executive director of the Chamber of Commerce...

If there isn't enough interest, Merta says, the pageant will be dropped from the list of Venetian Festival events... Deadline for entries is Friday, July 3...

The boardsailors are coming back to Ferry Beach this year.... It will be the seventh annual North American Sailboard Championships Friday-Sunday, July 31-Aug. 2.....

Also coming to town is the United States Yacht Racing Union Junior Championships... Thirty sailors ages 17 and younger will converge on the yacht club area Monday to Thursday, Aug. 9-13, for that event....

Pat Chisholm (left) chips out of the rough on the 16th hole in his final match with Pete Walz, who had several close putts that would not fall (right).

Belvedere's 25th straight Amateur: 'Just fantastic'

Belvedere Golf Club played perfect host to the 76th Michigan Amateur Golf Tournament - but Mother Nature wasn't quite so nice.

Sunny, warm weather for early rounds was followed by a two-inch soaker Thursday and off-and-on rain mixed with gusty winds during Saturday's finals.

"The course was in as good shape as I've ever seen it, and I've been coming up here for 30 years," said Dick Fairgrieve, chairman of the tournament. "It's just a fantastic place to be."

Winning the 25th consecutive Amateur at Belvedere was 22-year-old Pat Chisholm of Birmingham, who defeated Jackson's Pete Walz, 1-up, on the sudden-death 19th hole.

New laws alter B&B regulations

Bed and breakfasts will be given a major boost when Gov. Blanchard signs into law a package of five bills designed to reduce the regulatory burdens on them, area state Sen. Mitch Irwin says.

"Currently, bed and breakfasts are considered full-fledged hotels uder the public health and construction codes, requiring huge expenditures for restaurant-style kitchens and other building modifications."

Under the bills co-sponsored by Irwin, passed by the House and Senate and presented to the governor, bed and breakfasts with less than eight sleeping rooms would be required to meet the same building codes as a home and also would be subject to health department inspections.

Parking problems cause concerns

Summer parking shortages continue to be a perplexing problem.

Several parking issues confronted city council during Monday's work session:

– A proposal for angle parking on Park and Antrim between State and Bridge and on State from Park to Antrim;

– A complaint that a 10-year parking privilege for a downtown business owner and resident has been revoked;

– A request to close the first block of Antrim Street to help alleviate parking problems at Oleson's shopping center; and – A call for enforcement of a long-term parking prohibition in the Beaver Islander-Mesquite area.

Councilman Norm Probert suggested the angle parking scheme, saying it would gain 91 spaces. Park and Antrim would have to become one-way in the first block off Bridge Street, he said, for the plan to work.

Also, the ambulance route down Antrim would have to be changed, with Probert suggesting Garfield as the alternative. There are fewer houses along Garfield, and there is less congestion than ambulances encounter at the Bridge-Antrim intersection, he said.

Concerns were raised over whether the streets with angle parking would be wide enough for traffic and whether the city would lose state money allocated for upkeep of major roads.

Antrim was also the center of attention in a request from Oleson Food Stores to close the street from Bridge to State to allow parking controls.

It was suggested Oleson's might be considering a gate system – similar to one used by Milliken's department store in Traverse City – where shoppers would have to obtain a token from the store to exit the parking lot.

Such an approach would help the store keep its parking lot for its customers. Probert said there were 61 cars in the lot at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, but only 12 people (including four employees) in two adjacent stores.

Several council members and residents said customers of the Villager Pub were using the Oleson parking lot. Downtown businesses such as the Pub are not required to provide off-street parking.

While the street abandonment request did not receive support, council members were sympathetic to the store's problems.

Since the parking lot is private property, City Manager Mike Wiesner said, the police department can only enforce handicapped parking regulations.

Saying Oleson's is the anchor store for downtown, Wiesner said the city should consider one-way streets, angle parking, land acquisition for off-street parking or some other way to relieve the problem.

Parking at the other end of downtown concerns Nanci Burnside, who for 10 years parked in a space next to her store and apartment under an agreement with the former police chief, the late Jack Mol.

Now she is being told she cannot use the metered space without paying during the day. Pointing out other apparent violations of parking rules, she asked council approval to continue parking there.

Council said it would work to correct other problems – which include the Coast Guard reserving more spaces than allowed in its contract, Beaver Islander passengers parking for long terms at the ferry docks and another business owner parking in what may be the right-of-way.

But members were not willing to grant Burnside her request, saying she could park in a designated area behind her store or could park at the meter at night and move her car during the day.

Venetian boat parade matches decorator, vessel

In an effort to stimulate more entries in the Venetian Boat Parade this year, the parade committee is offering a new program to match boats without decorators to decorators without boats.

Under the program, boat owners willing to pilot their vessel in the parade but who may not have the time or manpower to decorate it will be assigned to individuals or groups that would like to decorate an entry but who don't have boats.

This year's parade will be held in Round Lake Saturday, July 25 and will cap the 57th Charlevoix Venetian Festival. The boat parade is the most time-honored feature of Charlevoix's annual summer festival which is named after a custom of candle-lit boat parades that is thought to have originated in the canals of Venice, Italy.

"We consider the boat parade the most unique and traditional part of Venetian weekend," said boat parade committee co-chairman John Ochs, "That's why we really want to see more people and boats participating. It's a lot of fun to prepare for the boat parade and ride in it. The matching program we're introducing this year will hopefully give more people the opportunity to participate."

Ochs and committee co-chairman Tom Hawley are inviting high school groups, service clubs, restaurant employees or any other groups to sign up to decorate a boat. Those interested need only register with the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce and pay the entry fee of $25.

Boat owners who will agree to let their boats be decorated can also register at the chamber. The only thing required of them is that they pilot their boat through the parade route on the evening of the event.

A cash prize of $200 will be awarded for first place in the "decorated" division of the boat parade.

For more information about the matching program or any other aspect of the Venetian Boat Parade contact Ochs during the day at 547-2424 or the chamber of commerce 547-2101.

Crews begin city-wide tree pruning

In an effort to lengthen the life of city trees, crews have begun a $40,000 trimming project.

With the aid of Ken Larison, a Michigan State University graduate student in urban forestry, Nelson Tree Service of Ohio has begun work on more than 2,000 trees.

To be trimmed are trees on city property – those along road rights-of-way and in the cemetery.

The crews have begun work in Brookside Cemetery and will be working roads in the southern portion of town.

Their work will eventually take them to the north side and, then – after the summer crowds have thinned – into the downtown area.

It should take until the second week of October to finish the work, Larison said.

Mostly the two crews will be removing dead, dying or diseased wood, Larison said. Some uplifting of branches to improve road and sidewalk clearances will also take place.

Larison asks residents to cooperate in the project by staying clear of the machinery and by allowing the workers onto private property when necessary.

Nelson's contract calls for the company to compensate property owners for damage the firm causes, Larison said, and the company has a good reputation for being careful.

Before he returns to school in September, Larison will be helping with plantings to beautify the entrances to the city.

The trimming program is an outgrowth of talks between the city shade tree commission and the city manager, said Barbara MacArthur, a member of the commission.

Opinion

Walk on the wild side

Parents of teenagers: Do yourself a favor.

Take a trip downtown between 10 and midnight. You may be surprised by who you see – and what's going on.

Get out of the car and just hang around for awhile. That's what a lot of the kids are doing. Some are only walking around, causing no trouble. But others are causing trouble.

A lot of it is harmless – running through the streets, turning street signs the wrong way, carousing with other teens.

A lot of it is next-to-harmless – cruising the streets with voices a little too loud, with radios a little too loud, with screeching tires a little too loud.

But some of it is not harmless – ripping warning signs from high-voltage boxes, writing graffiti on city property, puncturing the convertible top of the petunia fundraiser car.

It has been suggested that stealing golf course markers and a Peace Pole – plus defacing several other Peace Poles – might have been someone's "statement." But chances are these acts of vandalism were someone's "prank."

The kids who congregate in Oleson's parking lot or at Michigan Beach say they're the victims of small-town life – there's nothing else to do.

The absence of formal recreational activities is not license to frighten families and visitors from the streets, though.

And for the past few weeks, downtown has not been a pleasant place to walk at night.

So, parents of teens, take a little walk of your own. And don't be too surprised by the faces and voices you recognize.

BABY BIRDS CAN BE SEEN EVERYWHERE NOW. SOME WILL SURVIVE THE RAVAGES OF NATURE AND PEDATORS BUT OTHERS WILL NOT. WHILE PARENTS TRY TO PROTECT THEIR YOUNG, WILD ANIMALS AND FAMILY PETS DO TAKE THEIR TOLL, AS WITH A VERY FRIGHTENED BABY ROSE-BREASTED GROSBEAK THAT WAS FOUND HUDDLED IN A BED OF CLOVER AND STONECROP. NOT YET ABLE TO FLY, THIS WEE ONE APPARENTLY FELL FROM ITS NEST. IT SURVIVED FOR ONLY A COUPLE OF DAYS BEFORE BECOMING PART OF THE FOOD CHAIN FOR A LARGER ANIMAL.

Dodging deer..

Clockwise BY BOB CLOCK

If you value your life — not to mention the fancy grillwork and fenders on your Phantom Eight — watch out for deer on the highways, particularly at dawn or dusk.

Better still, keep a 24-hour vigil. Stray whitetails are not all that uncommon at any time of the day.

Thanks to an extremely mild winter, the local deer herd appears to be larger — and heftier — than ever. Even the young seem to be doing well. Judy spotted a doe and three fawns crossing the Boyne City Road the other day. Twins are not all that unusual; but triplets have to be a little out of the ordinary.

Furthermore, deer are coming right into town. The other afternoon Charlie Austin and Richard Kent Jr. of Charlevoix were skateboarding down East Dixon Avenue when a deer loped across the street just in front of them. Word has it that several deer actually have set up housekeeping on Old Island in Round Lake.

So keep an eye peeled for deer. Your insurance agent will thank you.

THE DEER WAS lucky. A few days earlier Charlie was skateboarding ('thrashing' in skateboarder jargon) on the South Side when a chipmunk ran out in front of him. The poor little critter never knew what hit him. What an ignoble way to meet your maker.

WILD TURKEYS also appear to be proliferating, particularly in the central and eastern areas of Charlevoix County. Judy spotted one feeding alongside the Boyne City Road that was so big that at first she thought it was a raccoon.

For several years local sportsmen have assisted in feeding the brood flocks introduced throughout Northern Michigan. Their efforts appear to be paying dividends, because more and more of the big birds are showing up various locations.

Les Beckett of Chandler Hill says that as a flock grows, splinter groups will peel off to form new flocks in other locations. If we're lucky, the wild turkey may one day become one of our principal game birds.

Several years ago, the Department of Natural Resources planted several wild turkeys on Beaver Island and their care and feeding became the chief avocation of the late Karl Kuebler, a retired conservation officer. Sometimes Kuebler would fly sacks of corn to the island — at his own expense — to feed them.

However, when Kuebler moved to the mainland he worried incessantly about his wild turkeys, a protected species. One day in Charlevoix he met a Beaver Islander on the street and inquired how the flock was doing.

"Oh, Karl, you worry too much about your turkeys," the islander told him. "They're doing just fine. In fact, they're delicious!"

It's an old story, but I love it. It speaks worlds about Karl — and the islanders' sense of humor.

BACK TO RACCOONS: I was walking downtown the other night when I spotted a young man up on the roof of the Weathervane Restaurant fiddling with several live traps near the cupola.

"What are you doing?" I called.

"Trapping raccoons," he answered matter-of-factly, as though everyone trapped raccoons on the roof of the Weathervane.

Suddenly I heard a sharp metallic clang. A young raccoon had succumbed to the aroma of fish bait and was trapped.

The swashbuckling trapper said he would take his captive out to M-66 and let it go.

Apparently a mama raccoon had decided the decorative cupola would be an ideal place to raise a family.

Theft of Peace Pole black eye on face of city

Letters to the editor:

Editor:

There is a scar on the face of Charlevoix the Beautiful incurred by the removal of the Peace Pole from the premises of the Methodist Church and the defacing of the Chinese panel on the Congregational Peace Pole, thus making a mockery of the inscription: "May peace prevail on earth."

This is a sad commentary on the state of mind of some person or persons unknown. Is he-she sick, vengeful, hurting, unmindful of the intent of the poles or just wantonly destructive? Whatever the motivation, we all share a portion of the blame in that we have failed to create a climate accepting of diversity. In a community the size of ours, all persons should be enabled to coexist in an atmosphere of good-will with respect for the rights and opinions of others. Otherwise how can we expect nations to come to any summit agreements?

A community forum to discuss peace issues is presently being organized. Can be dialogue? Watch for further notices.

Hayes very generous

Editor:

A very big thank you to Hayes Township for its very generous contribution to the Charlevoix Senior Citizens Center. Because of their support a paycheck for our nutrition people becomes more of a reality.

The board was kindness itself. They made me feel at ease while I "begged" making the atmosphere one of friendship and humor. Their concern for our senior citizen population was in evidence throughout the meeting. I commend them on their attitude.

Again, thanks from all of us at the center – and God Bless your generous contribution.

'Monster' by bridge makes city laughing stock of North

Editor,

I recently wrote a letter to the Courier about the "monster" at the bridge. Did you ever see anything like it? It has not only eaten the shoreline, but now continues to devour the hillside. The entire thing lacks "class," let alone having any sense of proportion, just walking by on the sidewalk makes one feel like a mere ant. This huge monstrocity certainly doesn't fit in a town the size of Charlevoix and has become a laughing conversation piece to all neighboring cities in the area. They are happy it wasn't built in their town and by watching our mistakes they hopefully will not make the same ones.

It gives one a feeling that Charlevoix is somehow desperate. This summer should be very interesting and winter even more so. A poll could be taken in the spring to see how it has helped area business from October until June of 1988.

Thanks to all who helped get Big League baseball going

Editor:

Charlevoix's Big League baseball is underway! And a big thank you to all who have contributed:

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Himebauch for the sponsor fees; Bee Simmons and Gordon Himebauch for the organizational help; Gary Drury, Scott Kelly, Mike Lopor and Jon Spieles for contributing all the coaching talent. (Practice looks so smooth - the games will be a joy to watch.)

The umpires for helping with their work commitments in advance; parents for their talented players. (We have some great kids out there!) Employers for all the understanding in schedule shuffling. Gary Loder for time and work in field upkeep.

The list continues for the endless hard work and financial support. You all are appreciated.

Courier appearance pleasing

Editor,

I was very pleased with the appearance of the last Courier. Maybe it was only the larger, easier-to-read headings (or captions) of articles, but it just seemed that things caught my attention more.

The title for the "praises" column was very clever, I thought – Oh Boix! Wonder who came up with that?

Know your Chamber

By JACQUIE MERTA
Executive Director

The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce board of directors has adopted a resolution supporting a uniform post-Labor Day school opening in Michigan for K-12 schools. What day school starts after Larbor Day doesn't really mattter as long as it's after Labor Day.

The board made its decision based on the following facts:

1. Tourism is already the second-largest industry in Michigan, providing jobs and paychecks to nearly 300,000 people and generating $611.7 million in tax revenues and $13.3 billion in expenditures.

2. Nearly two-thirds of those registered voters recently polled by the Michigan State Chamber of Commerce favor establishing a school opening date in September, after Labor Day.

3. The Michigan Travel Bureau estimates a later school starting date would add approximately $25 million to the tourism industry.

4. Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Texas, South Dakota and Minnesota have already adopted uniform post-Labor Day opening dates for their public schools. Other states are currently considering similar legislation.

5. A southwest Missouri State University report says that state saw a 25 percent increase in business Aug. 19-31, 1984, as compared to 1983 levels (before the law was in effect.)

Presently there is a campaign underway to "Extend Your Michigan Summer." Petitions are available for you to circulate or for you to sign. Contact the Charlevoix Chamber office for more information.

By becoming a petition circulator you can help strengthen the tourism industry, create jobs, provide a greater tax base, and prolong the summer vacation and travel-time for you and your family – and all of the people of Michigan.

Have we ever received mail addressed this way? Sure we have. How do we feel when this happens? Upset, rejected, nothing, file "13".....impersonal mail, impersonal communication (ie. number 3413-105W please be seated") is a reality–it's a part of our lives.

One consequence of this impersonal communication that I've noticed is that we begin to use it with others and with ourselves, and the result is that we take ourselves and others (and what we do) for granted. We fail to be personal and to be affirming.

We will always receive mail addressed as the above indicates.

However, we can change the way we respond and then become personal and affirming.

Step No. 1 – God addresses us on a personal level. "I am" is the name of God. "I am" loves you so much that He's willing to die to prove to you that Love.

Step No. 2 – God affirms us! Even when we're "bad," make mistakes, God affirms us!

Step No. 3 – Accept God's personal affirmation for you and of you! Through Jesus Christ we have seen this acted out.

Step No. 4 – Accept the love within you and others and share that affirmation with other people.

Step No. 5 – Keep doing it!

May God's blessing be upon us and may we bless others by acts of the kindness and love.

City moves ahead slowly on cable TV

Are the residents of Charlevoix interested in having the city start its own cable television system?

Finding the answer to that question is the next move city council may undertake in its months-long look at the feasibility of entering the cable business.

A rate hike by Northern Cable, the cable firm serving the city, prompted the city's interest in cable TV.

A study of the economic prospects of going up against the present company was performed by Roger Westenbroek, who made no recommendation whether the city should go ahead or abandon the idea.

While a couple council members – Shirley Roloff and Bill Bellows – say the study showed them the city should not proceed, others suggest it is too soon to tell.

Bob Timms has asked the city administration to obtain an opinion on the legal aspects of cable operation, and Bill Haggard has asked for an estimate on the cost of surveying residents.

Either an election or poll would be needed to solicit community interest, Timms says, with councilman Earl Muma suggesting a questionnaire could be included with electric bills.

A look at the findings of Westenbroek's study follows:

It would be a good idea for the city to enter the cable television business – if there wasn't already a firm providing the service in town.

That was the conclusion of a study the city council had made of the feasibility of starting a city cable TV service.

Council asked Roger Westenbroek of Power System Engineering of Charlevoix and Madison, Wis., to investigate the economic pros and cons of such an endeavor after it balked at providing Northern Cable TV with additional space for satellite dishes.

Northern Cable leases space at Mount McSauba for a satellite dish and tower. When it approached the council about adding a dish at the site, Northern Cable's representative also brought with her an announcement that the number of stations would be increased – and so would rates.

Unhappy councilmembers have no control over the cable service's rates, so to show their displeasure rejected the lease request and ordered the feasibility study.

A second cable firm – Bayshore Cable – offered to enter the fray and provide programming within the city, but later withdrew the offer because they did not act promptly on the study.

The study was requested in February and was returned to the city in April. The council first took it up in late May and Monday pursued the matter further.

Conclusions reached by Westenbroek were:

– It would be economically feasible for the city to operate a system if there were sufficient community interest to support it financially.

– Feasibility would be highly sensitive to the degree of market penetration that could be achieved.

– The "ultimate in CATV (community antenna television) services at economical rates cannot be achieved with two systems operating in competition within this limited market."

– General obligation bonds would be the best way to finance a city system.

Westenbroek said the issue of city operation of a cable system goes beyond economic considerations, however.

"The ultimate question is whether the best interest of the community is being served."

While cable television is most often a monopolistic service, Westenbroek noted, it is legally considered a competitive business with no marketplace or governmental control over service or rates.

If present service were considered inadequate, he said, the city has several options. These include;

– Granting the request for additional facilities (Northern eventually leased land outside the city and figured out a way to receive more than one satellite's transmissions on its original dish),

– Trying to negotiate rates and services with the private firm (Northern did lower its rate increase somewhat during discussions),

– Franchising a second operator (Bayshore was willing to wire the city and provide competition until it decided it could no longer wait for the city to decide what it wanted to do).

– Build a city system with an objective of becoming the sole supplier of cable services by providing services that would force the private firm to leave town, or – Try to negotiate a sellout of existing services by the private firm to the city.

Westenbroek's report contained estimates of costs and rates, with the rates varying by as much as 50 percent depending on number of subscribers.

His report estimated over $1 million in start-up costs, which include wiring the city and installing equipment and antennas. It costs about $16,000 a mile to install the distribution wiring, the report said.

Fixing a sewer main break under Bridge Street became a major chore when nearly two inches of rain turned the job into a muddy, two-day event. The 15-foot deep hole at the corner of Clinton caused traffic to be rerouted down State Street for two days.

East Jordan teen year's 1st traffic victim

A 16-year-old East Jordan girl became Charlevoix County's first traffic fatality of 1987 on June 25.

She was Melinda A. (Mindy) Meade, who would have been a senior at East Jordan High School in September.

Meade's 1981 Chevrolet Chevette collided hand-on on M-66 near Shaw Road with a GMC Blazer driven by David J. Tripplehorn, 22, of Charlevoix.

The accident occurred at 10 p.m. Wednesday, June 24, when Meade and her passenger, Brenda S. Drenth, 16, of East Jordan, were enroute home from jobs in Charlevoix.

All three were taken to Charlevoix Area Hospital. Meade was transferred to Little Traverse Division of Northern Michigan Hospital where she died Thursday morning.

Condo ban idea gets lukewarm reception

A proposal to limit further development of downtown condominium-type developments has received a lukewarm reception from the planning commission.

The negative reaction came not because the commissioners necessarily disagreed with the concept, but because members were unsure there was anything they could do.

There may be only three parcels affected by a proposal to limit uses to single-family and marine-related businesses within 200 feet of Round Lake and the Pine River Channel, said city planner Gerry Harsch.

One person definitely against any move to try to halt further multiple-family construction is Don Berlage, an attorney who owns one of those three affected parcels.

The proposal came from Mayor Ralph McRae, who has opposed further development of condo-type units before.

Planning commissioner Barbara Fels noted there is a lot of anti-condo sentiment in the city. Though condominium legally refers to a type of joint ownership – used for housing, marinas and hotels in Charlevoix – the word commonly is used to describe apartment-like housing units.

McRae's plan was to rezone property around the lake and along the channel to either single-family or marina-related categories. This, he reasons, would make it harder for developers to obtain permission to build condos.

Walt Hufford, chairman of the planning commission, and Berlage disagreed with the mayor on different aspects of the proposal.

"It appears a sledge hammer is being used to kill a gnat," Berlage said, explaining that it appeared only three properties would be affected.

The only parcels that do not already have single-family or marina zoning, multiple units in use on them or scenic reserver status to prevent construction, he said, are three along the channel.

The only property on Round Lake that Berlage could foresee as being ripe for development was Bellinger Marine, which already is zoned for marina use and would not be changed by the mayor's proposal.

"It appears it's spot zoning in reverse," Berlage said, "and discriminatory to put it mildly. And I strongly encourage the planning commission to reject this proposal."

Hufford said he did not understand what changing the zoning of the properties would accomplish. The procedure to try to obtain a rezoning of a property is the same whether the current zoning if single-family, some new category or anything else, he said.

Establishing some sort of lakefront zoning excluding condo construction would not eliminate the possibility of someone asking for a rezoning, Hufford said.

"I don't think either the present planning commission or the present city council can do anything to prevent changes in the future," he said. "We can't do anything that somebody in the future can't undo."

Although McRae said a condo limitation would make it harder to obtain approval for multiple-family housing, Hufford disagreed.

"If the current zoning does not allow multiple-family residential, how can you rezone to ensure it is more restrictive?" be asked.

Commissioner Dave Novotny said most of the condo units on Round Lake were there – or at least under construction – before the current zoning ordinance went into effect.

Commission John Friedly reminded commissioners that at one time there was talk of a height restriction around the lake and said that might be an area to be explored again. Presently, a 35-foot height restriction applies city-wide.

The commissioners agreed to hold a public hearing to solicit resident ideas on limiting condo units by zoning changes, height limitations or other means. No date was set for the hearing.

Girls basketball coach steps down

Henry "Butch" Wagner, who has been associated with the girls' basketball program at Charlevoix High School for 10 years, has resigned as varsity coach.

Wagner leaves after six years varsity coach with a record of 82 wins and 42 losses. Prior to serving as varsity coach, he was JV coach for four years.

Wagner said he was leaving to have more time to build a home in Hayes Township and to "just enjoy myself."

During his years as coach, Wagner's teams won four district titles and played in four regional tournaments, advancing to the finals twice.

"The last time was in '86 when we lost by two points to the team that advanced to the state finals," he said.

In '86 the team record was 21-4.

The Rayders finished second in Michigan-Huron Shores Conference play three times. During those years, Wagner had two All-Staters, Ann Wagner in '85 and Amy Pischner in '86.

Wagner said he would continue as seventh grade boys' basketball coach, middle school girls' track coach and middle school athletic director.

The search for a successor has begun. The 1987 season will open Sept. 3. Supt. Gordon W. VanWieren said the position would be posted and applications would be accepted at once.

This is the second varsity coaching position to be vacated this year. Earlier boys' varsity basketball coach Dave Smith resigned. Smith remains high school principal.

Candidates are presently being interviewed VanWieren said with selection expected in a couple weeks.

Congressman vows to monitor boardings

by SARA GAY DAMMANN

Coast Guard boarding procedures, particularly on the Great Lakes, will be closely monitored by Northern Michigan's Robert Davis and other congressmen.

Davis is a ranking member of the Congressional Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, of which the Coast Guard Committee is a subcommittee.

Davis announced his scrutiny of boarding procedures in response to numerous protests over armed boardings of pleasure crafts during safety checks and drug searches.

Davis and his committees will watch if modifications are needed in the law which gives the Coast Guard broad authority to stop and search boats.

According to Davis' staff assistant George Pence, the congressman has discussed public reaction with other members of the subcommittee and with Coast Guard Commandant Paul Yost.

"I will be monitoring closely the implementation of the Coast Guard guidance in the Great Lakes region, to insure that boardings are conducted in an appropriate and non-threatening manner without harassing law-abiding boaters. If the problem continues, I will seek appropriate changes in the statute," Davis wrote in response to questions for the Courier.

Title 14 section 89, a statue enacted in 1936 gives the Coast Guard the right to stop boats and conduct safety checks or full-blown drug searches without search warrants or many other restraints placed on land-based law enforcement.

According to Pence, Congress is reluctant to place these restraints on the Coast Guard because of special problems involved in apprehending drug traffickers by boat.

Three years ago, the tone of boardings nationwide changed from relatively low-key safety checks by unarmed personnel to more intense law enforcement boardings by personnel carrying side arms, and in some cases shotguns or M-16 rifles.

Last year the number of boardings increased radically. In the Charlevoix area, in September, 40 boats were stopped. Then Coast Guard officials announced boaters could expect continued intensity of boardings this boating season.

This spring, Charlevoix sailor Cliff Biddick refused the Coast Guard permission to board his boat. After a two-hour stand-off in Lake Michigan, Biddick was informed he would be "boarded by force, if necessary." He relented.

However, Biddick, who has frequently taught boater safety courses for the Coast Guard, announced his intention to fight for restrictions of the law.

Capt. James Butler, chief of operations for the Coast Guard 9th District, announced June 3 that local "station chiefs had been ordered to cut back on boardings of pleasure boats."

Butler said, however, safety checks would continue with less intensity.

No drug arrests had been made in the northern lakes and a few minor apprehensions had been made in the Detroit River, Butler said.

Teachers open art gallery

Mary Beth McGraw and Marina LaBlance, two Charlevoix teachers with a mutual appreciation for the arts have opened Signature Gallery at 107½ Bridge St.

"I've always wanted to have a gallery," said elementary art teacher McGraw. She and LaBlance, elementary music teacher, contemplated the idea all winter. LaBlance reasoned, "Nothing ventured, nothing gained."

According to LaBlance, their collection of original contemporary prints, pottery and sculpture complements rather than competes with other galleries in town.

McGraw attended the New York Art Expo this spring. She said the gallery now has access to "all the masters" and will be featuring them throughout the summer.

Venetian Festival weekend Pete Peterson will be featured in a one-man show. He will be in the gallery Saturday and Sunday, July 25-26 demonstrating his talent with water colors and oils. LaBlance says Peterson paints with precise detail by memory from his 25 years at sea.

Signature Gallery will be open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday to Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. As both McGraw and LaBlance begin teaching again in September, the gallery will be open only on weekends through the winter.

Swimmer's itch problems reported

A skin rash known as swimmers itch is being encountered by some area swimmers.

Swimmer's itch is caused by tiny larvae which penetrate into the skin of humans. As the larvae enter the skin, minor itching may occur. More intense itching may occur several hours later with the development of raised red spots.

Four to five days after contact, symptoms normally disappear but small red spots may persist for some time.

The larvae are part of the life cycle of blood flukes, called schistosomes, which live as parasites in certain mammals and birds. Water fowl are the main hosts for these parasites. Contact with humans is an accident.

Rinsing the body as well as possible and briskly rubbing with a towel immediately after swimming is an effective means of minimizing swimmer's itch.

Some relief from itching may be obtained through the use of soothing lotions. Cool baths in water to which baking soda has been added may also be helpful.

Hobbycraft fair needs more room

The annual hobbycraft fair is expanding. Because of the large number of entries, the show will occupy Bridge Park north of Burnsides as well as its traditional site in East Park.

There are 173 entries in the 19th annual Lakeside Hobbycraft Fair, says Jacquie Merta, executive director of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber-sponsored event will be held beginning at 9:30 a.m. Saturday, July 11 in East Park overlooking Lake.

"I don't think we've ever had the variety of entries that we've received this year – dolls and dulcimers, candles and gourmet chocolates, bird feeders and jewelry of every description. This should make it our best show," Merta said.

Entries came from the Upper Peninsula, Florida, California and as far away as West Germany.

From its beginning as the stepchild of the Waterfront Art Fair, the Hobbycraft Fair has grown into one of the top shows of its kind in the North.

Controversy over wetlands heats up following ruling

As most Charlevoix residents know, development of an area called Water's Edge on the south shore of Lake Charlevoix was held up for many months by a zoning ordinance that prohibited the type of intense development proposed by owners of the property.

Also, much of the property was determined by the DNR to be wetlands, which, by state law, required a permit from the DNR.

The DNR finally told Water's Edge land owners they could build 45 housing units on their property outside the wetlands area. The owners' original plan was for 135 units. The fact they were permitted to make considerable use of the property prevented the restrictions from being called "confiscatory."

There are several other local examples of how owners of wetlands have been able to build on their property by moving their houses to higher levels or building on pilings. No case of the DNR refusing every kind of use for a wetland area has been reported.

Michigan's law

Michigan's wetlands law is called the "Goemaere-Anderson Wetland Protection Act." It was passed in 1979 with the purpose, as stated in its preamble, "to provide for the preservation, management, protection, and use of wetlands; to require permits to alter such wetlands; to provide for a plan for the preservation, management, protection, and use of wetlands; and to provide remedies and penalties."

While the DNR has been working on a program of identifying wetlands throughout the state, the progress has been slow because of lack of funds, so many landowners say they have been unaware of use restrictions on their property.

Specifically, the wetlands act requires that all depositing of or placing fill material in a wetland; dredging, or removing soil or minerals from a wetland; constructing, operating, or maintaining any use or development in a wetland; or draining surface water from a wetland be done only by permit issued by the DNR.

On the other hand, wetlands can be used, without permit, for farming, horticulture, silviculture, lumbering, and ranching activities, including grazing; as well as such recreational activities as fishing, trapping, and hunting, swimming and bathing and hiking. Also, there are provisions for draining wetlands and building roads to carry on the permitted uses.

The act also carries the provision that owners of property who think their property is being taken from them without just compensation because they were refused a permit to carry on certain activities on the property may file court action.

If the court determines the action of the DNR constituted taking the property, the DNR may take one or more of three actions: Compensate the property owner for the full amount of the land value, purchase the property in the public interest, or modify its action with respect to the property to minimize the detrimental effect to the property owner.

Legislative action

With these provisions, can the Groemaere-Anderson Act be called confiscatory? State Rep. Pat Gagliardi, D-Drummond Island, thinks it might be. A few days after the Supreme Court decision, Gagliardi introduced legislation which many feel would weaken the wetlands act considerably.

It would exempt individuals who have not received prior notification that their property is a wetland from having to apply for a permit to develop; it would also require the DNR to give first priority for purchase to any property that cannot be developed because of the wetlands act; and, finally, it would provide for court action forcing the DNR to purchase property by any type of funding it can get.

Gagliardi said his main reason for introducing the legislation is the way the wetlands act is being enforced by the DNR.

"Many people have purchased land in northern Michigan and the Upper Peninsula for recreational use or retirement, only to be told that all they can do is look at it because it's a wetland. This is wrong," he said in a press conference. "My legislation will attempt to correct this situation."

Gagliardi said the wetland acts states individuals must be notified by the DNR that they own wetland property, but most landowners do not receive notification until they seek to build.

The same day that Gagliardi introduced his legislation, area state Sen. Mitch Irwin, D-Sault Ste. Marie, issued a press release stating he had sponsored a resolution, already passed by the Senate, asking Attorney General Frank Kelley "to rule on the legality and administration of state and federal wetlands laws."

Senate Concurrent Resolution 292 is now in the House Oversight Committee.

Irwin wrote in his press release, "A recent United States Supreme Court ruling that property owners must be compensated for permanent or temporary restrictions on use of their land necessitates a second look at the wetlands statutes."

Compensation is provided for in the Michigan wetlands act, but Irwin said it is his understanding no one has ever collected.

A spokesman in Irwin's office said the senator was simply trying to find out if the law was being applied equally and fairly to all persons.

Irwin said he hoped the House would act quickly on the resolution, and that the attorney general will rule quickly on the issue.

Actions watched

All this legislative action has not gone unnoticed by environmental groups or real estate interests in northern Michigan.

Jerry Puhl, president of WATCH, the leading watchdog on environmental matters in the Charlevoix area, told the Courier any tampering with the Groemaere-Anderson Act would be a real tragedy for the area.

"It would affect the whole Lake Charlevoix watershed," he said. The wetlands are important in helping the watershed filter pollution before it reaches the lake. There are so few wetlands remaining. Since 1900, 80 percent of them have been drained or filled.

"Most of the good land in the lake areas is gone. Other, less desirable, pieces are now being sold at reasonable prices and people want to build on them, even if they're swampy. It's all pressure from developers and real estate interests to change the law."

Puhl referred to the Water's Edge development which WATCH strenuously objected to in its early states, but now approves of as an environmentally sound project. "It's going to be a nice development now," Puhl said.

As far as Gagliardi's legislation goes, Puhl said WATCH would do everything in its power to see that it doesn't pass.

One of the first individuals to respond to Gagliardi's legislation was Barbara MacArthur of Charlevoix, an active member of the county's Democratic party.

"Please do not attempt to weaken the Wetlands Act," she wrote the legislator. "I know it's difficult to take the long view... but think in terms of the threat of environmental degradation which may be a threat even greater than nuclear war."

Gail Gruenwald, executive director of the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council, told the Courier she viewed Irwin's resolution simply as a fact-finding measure.

"He knows there are provisions for compensation if land is confiscated," she said.

With reference to Gagliardi's bill, she said she agreed it would be a good idea to complete the inventory of wetlands and what was needed was more money appropriated for this purpose.

"And if they want to notify landowners, that will cost more money, too," she said.

Tip of the Mitt has been active in inventorying wetlands in Charlevoix, Emmet and Cheboygan counties. It has completed a full inventory of Hayes Township and expects to have the shorelines of all major lakes in the three counties inventoried by the end of the summer.

"This information will be helpful to the DNR and other agencies," she said.

Hardships created

On the other side of the coin, there are many who feel the wetlands act is not being properly administered and is creating serious hardships on many property owners and the public in general.

Rick Lobenherz of Vacation Properties Network told the Courier, "I am not against the wetlands act. We need wetlands to preserve sensitive areas, but we also seriously need changes in enforcement of the act.

"The act was passed to cover protection of bogs, marshes and swamps. Now they are putting other lands under its jurisdiction. Many structures that were once approved by the DNR couldn't be built today," he said.

"A large part of the real estate around here is called wetlands. People have paid taxes on it for years, but if it is taken off the tax rolls because the DNR takes it over as a wetland, real estate taxes for other people will skyrocket. Also, because of the money the state will have to pay for compensation of these properties, government funds will soon be depleted."

The value of a piece of property on the lake is 90 percent more than it would be if the property were somewhere else, he said. If a person has to build away from the lake, the value of his property goes down by 80 percent and his taxes are 80 percent lower. When property is devalued this way, it costs the public in many ways.

"If someone owns a piece of property with cedar trees on it, the DNR and Corps of Engineers should be able to say, 'This what you can do with your property,' and show him a plan. Not just say you can't do anything.

"Right now, it takes months and sometimes years to get a determination from the DNR or Corps about whether a piece of property is a wetland. Think of the time and money that is being wasted by these delays," Lobenherz said.

"Someone has created a monster and we have to do something about it."

What's a wetland? What can be done on it?

by PEG OHLE

Wetlands are described by the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) as "those lands characterized by the presence of waters at a frequency and duration sufficient to support, under normal circumstances, wetland vegetation or aquatic life."

With this explanation of the subject matter, three members of the DNR staff joined representatives of the Army Corps of Engineers, U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service and the Environmental Protection Agency in a panel discussion of wetlands sponsored by the Lake Charlevoix Association.

Most of the time was taken up by explanations from the representatives telling what they do, and how wetland property owners may apply for permits to use their property.

An important fact was brought out: A single application, to the DNR, is all that is necessary to be considered by the DNR and the three other agencies if their approvals are also necessary.

The question of how to recognize a wetland was simply answered: Look at what is growing on it, get a copy of the Charlevoix County soil study prepared by the U.S. Soil Conservation Service (available at its office in Boyne City), and find out if the District Health Department will issue a permit for an on-site septic system on the property.

The DNR separates wetlands into four categories: Bogs, swamps, marshes and wet meadows.

Bogs are described as wetlands that have waterlogged soil with a spongy covering of spagnum moss. Vegetation may be woody, with black spruce or tamarack trees or shrubs like leatherleaf or bog birch.

Swamps are wooded wetlands with soils waterlogged near the surface during the growing season. Tree species include cedar, balsam, red maple, black ash and willow.

Marshes normally have water a few inches to several feet deep and fluctuate from wet to dry seasons and-or years. Cattails, rushes, pond weeds, lily pads and arrowhead are common marsh plants.

Wet meadows seldom have standing water but are saturated at or near the soil surface most of the year. Common plants found in wet meadows are grasses such as reed canary grass, sedges, joe-pye weed and spikerushes. The high water table is due to strong ground water influence.

The issuance of permits for work in a wetlands area is based on several criteria, according to Chris Shafer of the DNR Land and Water Management Division in Lansing.

"We try to determine if aquatic resources will be disrupted, and if so, if a prudent alternative exists. We evaluate all statutory criteria. We ask if the permit meets public and-or private needs. We try to find out what its cumulative effects might be," he said in listing some of the criteria.

Dick Sikkenga of the DNR in Roscommon reported that 75 percent of all permits applied for in the area last year were issued, either as is or with modification. He said his office, which covers 30 counties, handled between 18,000 and 20,000 applications last year.

Brad Wilkins of the DNR office in Gaylord told his listeners that since he was located nearer to Charlevoix County than any of the other DNR representatives, he would be the best person to contact in case of an emergency. He added that often the local conservation officer can be of help in wetlands matters.

Wally Gauthier of the Army Corps of Engineers in Detroit reminded the group that since Lake Charlevoix is considered part of Lake Michigan, all work done on wetlands near Lake Charlevoix requires a Corps permit.

He said his agency considered most of the same criteria as does the DNR in issuing wetland permits, but he specially stressed hydrology, soils and vegetation.

Bob Owens of the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service in Lansing explained that his agency really acted in an advisory capacity insofar as wetland permits were concerned, but that the agency was particularly interested in seeing that any work in a wetlands would be done in a way least damaging to wildlife.

Mike McMullen, biologist for the Environmental Protection Agency in Chicago, said his agency was mostly concerned with large developments and other disturbances of wetlands.

His agency receives all DNR public notices regarding wetlands for review. Last year, the agency handled 65 major permit requests from Michigan.

Running through all comments made by these six agency representatives was the assurance that their agency always tried to find some way of using at least part of a wetland property.

In the few cases where this has not been possible, the state has compensated the property owner, Shafer said.

Shafer also explained that the Michigan wetlands act differed considerably from a California law which permits banning all uses of a piece of property without compensation. (That law was recently declared unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court. See related story.)

"In Michigan, we try to find some feasible and prudent alternatives, but if we can't, we will, and have provided for just compensation," he said.

Shafer believes that although this difference in laws is quite apparent to those working with wetlands legislation, it may be some time before the average landowner understands it, with the result that many lawsuits will probably be filed by land developers and other land owners asking that they be permitted to use their wetlands as they see fit or be compensated for the value of the land.

John Campbell of Site Planning Development in Charlevoix showed slide pictures of some of the alternative use work his company has done in area wetlands.

July 4th: No local events, but plenty to do in county

by PEG OHLE

Charlevoix residents don't have an in-town parade to celebrate the Fourth of July because that and other festivities are reserved for the Venetian Festival, just three weeks away.

However, all the nearby towns are planning bang-up events on July 4, and there will be plenty of room for everybody.

CENTRAL LAKE

Down in Central Lake, Fourth of July activities begin on Friday evening with a free dance featuring round and square dancing in Thurston Park from 7 until 10 p.m. Music will be furnished by "The Down Home Ramblers."

The grand Fourth of July Parade begins at noon and proceeds down Main Street. The midway will open after the parade ends, and the beer tent will operate from 1 until 9 p.m.

Other afternoon features in Thurston Park include children's games, pie-eating contest, tug-of-war, arm wrestling and a chicken barbecue beginning at 2 p.m.

Then, at dusk, what is called the biggest fireworks display in the area will begin, with over $10,000 worth of fireworks being shot over Intermediate Lake.

BARNARD

The Barnard Grange will again host its annual July 4 Barnard Area dinner, which this year will feature roast pig prepared over an open pit of hot coals by John Martin.

The dinner will be served from 4 p.m. until 8:30, with all the trimmings to go with roast pork. Tickets may be obtained in advance or at the door at $4 for adults and $3 for children five to 10 years old. There will be no charge for pre-school children.

Dinner tickets will also include admission to the sesquicentennial program featuring Mr. and Mrs. William Parsons and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Warner, with Mrs. Warner as commentator.

An old-fashioned dance, with both round and square dancing to the music of Jasper and his Tag-alongs, will conclude the festivities.

HORTON BAY

Horton Bay's 9th Fun and Frolic Fourth of July parade carries the slogan "The Bay 100," in recognition of the 100th anniversary of Bay Township.

While paying due tribute to the township and its founders, the parade will feature the usual "out-of-step, off-beat" participants who have entertained hundreds of spectators each year since 1975.

Jon Hartwell, co-chairman of the event with Kathy Roloff, reported he had received the 100th entry in the parade. While most of the former participants will be on hand will new shenanigans to perform, there will also be some new ones, including:

– A lively group from Saginaw which will pay their respects to the Zilwaukee Bridge. (Will they sing, "Zilwaukee Bridge is Falling Down"?)

– A circus group of questionable background which will perform all sorts of dangerous acts after getting up enough courage.

– A brigade of wheelchair "patients" who will try the patience of the "nurses" who are pushing them.

– Charlevoix County's own real, live llamas which have come to live on a farm on Boyne City Road.

These new entries will join Horton Bay's Evil Knievel, who will try to better his motorcycle jump over a pile of Petoskey stones; musicians of all kinds – bands, kazoo players, professional groups like "Jelly Roll Blues" and Sean Ryan of "Winnebago" fame; horses and riders; horses and buggies, ponies and buggies; acrobatic roller skaters; antique cars, convertibles; clowns; and much, much more.

The parade starts at 1 p.m. at the corner of Boyne City and Horton Bay roads. Because Horton Bay is a one-road town, traffic through town will be detoured while the parade is in progress.

EAST JORDAN

East Jordan calls its Fourth of July celebration the "Jordan Valley Freedom Festival." It is a four-day celebration, beginning Thursday evening and continuing through Sunday.

The festival is a something-for-everybody event, beginning with a lip synch contest Thursday evening. Friday features include kiddy rides at the Tourist Park Beach area, an "Anything That Floats" parade, dunk tank, petting zoo, pizza-eating contest, gymnastics exhibition, youth parade, bingo, and youth teen dance.

Saturday, July 4, begins with the opening of a flea market and hobbycraft show on Murphy Field, followed by canoe races, Lakeside Arts Fair, South Arm water ski races, triathalon, and stunt flying. The big parade, with the theme "Sesquicentennial Salute," starts at 4 p.m.

Immediately following the parade, there will be a band concert in Memorial Park as well as a performance by Hartwood dancers. Evening activities include a Christian music concert in Memorial Park and a performance by Mainstreet. Then, at dusk, there will be fireworks over Lake Charlevoix.

Sunday activities include all kinds of beach games, more water skiing exhibitions, finalists in the lip synch contest competing at 4 p.m in the Tourist Park Pavilion, and, to complete the event, another teen dance, featuring Normandie.

BOYNE CITY

Boyne City also has a full schedule of events on the Fourth of July, including a parade in the morning.

Events begin Friday with a Boyne City Eagles fish fry beginning at 5 p.m. and a dance from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m.

Saturday's activities begin with the ninth annual Independence Day Run at 8:30 a.m. and the 10th annual Waterside Art and Craft Fair from 9 a.m. until 8 p.m.

The Boyne Eagles' outdoor concession will be open 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. and the P.M. Lions Mexican food stand will be open from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

The Fourth of July parade will begin at 10:30 a.m., followed by the volunteer fire department's barbecue, Boyne Valley Garden Club pie sale and Rotary chicken barbecue beginning at 11.

A demonstration by the Boyne Area Gymnastics Group will be held at 11:30 and the XI Gamma Sorority "money hunt" for children six and under begins at noon.

At 1 p.m. the Boyne City Nursery School chili cookoff judging and tasting begin. The annual funny raft race on the Boyne River will begin at 2 p.m.

Band concerts start at 3 p.m., and TJ's Tannery frog-jumping contest starts at 4.

The Eagles will hold a dance from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. and fireworks will be shot off over Boyne Harbor at 10:30 p.m.

Open, closed

Because July Fourth falls on a Saturday this year, some of the offices which are traditionally closed for holidays will be open Friday.

Open will be the Post Office, county offices and banks.

Closed will be Charlevoix City Hall, state agencies and the Courier.

To commemorate Bay Township's Centennial yaer, the township hall in Horton Bay will be open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, July 4, for a display of antiques, relics, pictures and books. In a special booth will be the helmet and canteen which Ernest Hemingway used in World War I. Kathy Roloff (left), of the pioneer Dilworth family and Helen Bergmann of the pioneer Johnecheck family, stand beside an heirloom Johnecheck high chair Nicholas Morris is trying out for size. Bergmann is wearing a handmade cotton dress made by her grandmother.

Mini-mart gets site plan OK

A plan for construction of a Shell mini-mart on Bridge Street has been approved by the city planning commission.

Approval of the proposal, which the planners had seen before, was delayed while Alpena Oil obtained variances on lot size and on clearances from surrounding property from the zoning board of appeals.

The gas station and convenience store building will be situated at an angle across the site, which used to contain a Shell service station and a house.

Replacing the old Shell sign – which was removed a couple weeks ago by the city as a non-conforming sign – will be a structure on a three-foot rise in the corner of the site.

Treed and grassy areas have been designed to make the site attractive, John Campbell of Site Planning Development said, noting that angling the building allowed more green space and handier access.

The Rev. Bruce Hamilton, Glen's assistant store manager Rob Westfall, store manager Harold Miller, general manager Glen Catt and Chamber of Commerce executive director Jacquie Merta gathered for a grand re-opening of Glen's Market and Family Center. Glen's expansion doubles the existing departments, adds a deli department, bulk produce, scanning system registers, a carport and drive-up service.

21-unit inn proposed on channel

by DON DIBLEY

A 21-room hotel is being proposed next to Hoffman Park on Park Avenue.

Plans for the hotel, called Pine River Inn, have been submitted for city approval by Northern Michigan Realty Services Inc. in the Pine River Building.

The planning commission will begin review of the proposal at its 5:30 p.m. Monday, July 13, meeting.

Also before the planners that night is a proposal to convert four apartments at the former Fairport Marine facility on Belvedere into four larger units.

The planning commission must make a determination whether the renovation falls within a zoning ordinance grandfather clause or whether a rezoning of the property is required.

No other action is scheduled yet on that proposal.

The planners will be looking at two segments of the hotel plan. The first deals with the overall site plan, the second with a height limit variance the hotel would need if built as presently planned.

Plans for the hotel indicate the building would have different looks from Park Street and from the Pine River Channel because of the hillside.

From Park Avenue, it would appear to have two stories with doors and windows leading onto balconies, plus five dormer windows at the roof level.

The view from the channel side shows there is another story of rooms below the two visible from Park.

Typical units, according to the plan, would be 660 square feet. Loft units on the top floor would have 800 square feet.

Because of a 35-foot height limit imposed by the city zoning ordinance, it would be necessary to receive a variance to allow for towers at each end of the building and four chimneys rising between the dormers.

The planning commission would recommend to the zoning board of appeals whether the variance should be granted. The zoning board is scheduled to meet Wednesday, July 15, on the variance.

The planning commission also must recommend to city council whether the site plan should be approved. It may make that determination Monday or it may, as it often does, wait until the zoning board decides on the variance request.

Another planning commission meeting is scheduled Wednesday, July 22, and the city council is scheduled to take up the plan Monday, Aug. 3.

The proposal is becoming public about two weeks after Mayor Ralph McRae's proposed limit on multiple-family residential units was aired by the planning commission.

McRae would like to limit development within 200 feet of the channel and of Round Lake to single-family residential or marine-related businesses.

Attorney Don Berlage, who owns the property where the hotel is proposed, spoke against the idea, saying it would affect only three parcels along the channel.

Commission chairman Walt Hufford said he did not think rezoning the few properties involved would accomplish much. A property owner could still request a zoning change, Hufford said.

The proposed hotel site is zoned for commercial scenic use, which allows multiple-family residences, hotels, retail shops and many other uses.

Presently on the site are two houses used as rental units.

Summertime means music in the park for Charlevoixans. And this year's community band concerts began with a larger ensemble and a larger audience than in recent years. Albert Solomon (above) is reflected in Don Dennecker's trombone, while director Terry Isenberger (right) leads the band. The concerts are at 8 p.m. Wednesdays.

New south pier, walkway in works

by DON DIBLEY

The army calls it erosion control. Residents and visitors will call it a nice walkway by the water.

By whatever name, a walkway along the south shore of the Pine River Channel will be built from the base of Memorial Bridge to the DNR fish station.

And reconstruction of the south pier extending into Lake Michigan is in the design stage.

It is possible the 925-foot walkway will be finished before winter, says Dave Wong of the design branch of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' office in Detroit.

Work on the pier probably would not be completed until next year, Wong says, because of the short construction season on the northern Great Lakes.

The corps considers the seven-foot wide walkway a splash apron and revetment aimed at preventing further erosion along the channel.

It will be lined by handrails along the water's edge, Wong says, but there are no plans for light fixtures. The walkway on the north side has light poles.

The way the corps looks at the south shore of the channel, it is divided into four sections.

The first section, extending 196 feet from the bridge to about the end of the office building paralleling the water, is scheduled to blend into the existing hillside as a sidewalk would.

The second section of 731 feet, out to the present concrete area, would have a 1½-foot wall between the sidewalk and the hillside – much as the north side walkway has.

City Manager Mike Wiesner is asking the corps to alter the plan for the first section so it, too, would have the wall – which also serves as a nice place to sit. Wong says Wiesner's request has not filtered down to the design branch.

Wong expects contract bidding to begin this month with construction to begin in September. He thinks the work could be completed this year.

Work would not start until next spring on reconstruction of the south pier, he says, since design work is still under way and bidding will not begin until later this summer or fall.

That work involves the third section of the south shore – a 401-foot area now covered with chipped and broken concrete paving – and the fourth section, the pier itself.

The 449-foot pier will probably be altered to approximate the look and safety of the north pier, Wong says.

The north pier is surrounded by sunken boulders which act as a breakwater. To make the south pier a comparable structure, Wong says, the pier would have to be moved a little south to allow the channel opening to remain its present width.

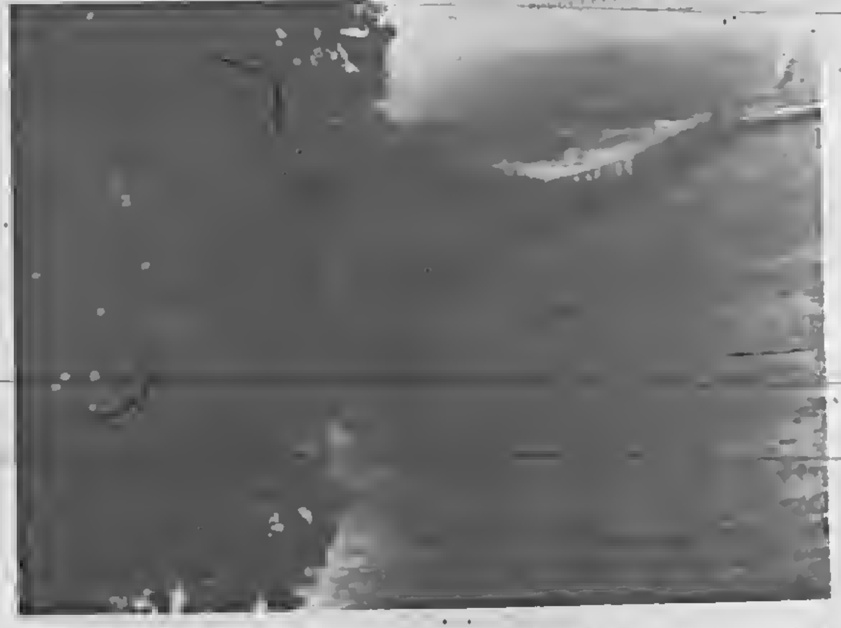
There are no plans that he knows of, Wong says, to remove or change the Coast Guard lighthouse at the end of the pier.

"We will be leveling that off," he says, noting that the structure is tilting. "We don't want it falling in the water."

Wong says the corps looks at the project as a way to prevent erosion of the bank, not as a way to help beautify one of the city's prime attractions.

"When we design any harbor structure, we do analysis from technical, environmental and economic standpoints as well as a safety point of view," he says.

The construction work will be done by private contractors, Wong says. The corps will administer and monitor the job, he says.



A cement walkway will soon make the jaunt down the south shore of Pine River Channel a little easier. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers also has plans to fix up the pier end approach at the Lake Michigan end of the channel.

AROUND THE TOWN

Jeff Drenth will be remembered in a memorial plaque placed in front of the Chamber of Commerce building.... The plaque is the idea of the Venetian Festival Jeff Drenth Memorial foot race committee and has been endorsed by the city....

The case will be handcrafted by the Woodwright Shop... Inside will be a walnut plaque with the names of the four annual race winners for the next 10 years inscribed on it.... The plaque will also contain information about the All-American distance runner....

The "condo look," a new innovation, is being proposed for a second-story addition to the Koucky Gallery building....

The addition, planned for two apartments, would be a modern glassy structure providing a view of Round Lake from double-level great rooms at the front of the units.... City planner Gerry Harsch describes the look of the Jack Begrow-designed units as "the condo look."

The Garden Club's tour of municipal plantings is included in the state sesquicentennial office's summer calendar of events....

The colorful tour begins at the welcoming sign on U.S. 31 south of town, takes in the window box at the post office and moves to the middle school, where sixth graders have been beautifying the grounds...

From Harsha House on State to the Father Charlevoix Look-out on West Dixon, the tour moves on to the highway triangle at Michigan and Petoskey.... A stop at the Memorial Garden at East Dixon and Mercer precedes a walk through the dunes and beach at Mount McSauba. Wrapping up the tour is a ride down U.S. 31 to view the 4½ miles of petunias.

Charlevoix Area Hospital is making sure overnight guests in the city know emergency help is nearby....

Handy, stand-alone cardboard "table tents" are being distributed to retail shops and motels... On one side of the tent is information informing visitors that the emergency room is open and staffed by a physician 24 hours a day and that the After Hours Clinic for minor illnesses is open from 6 to 11 p.m. weekdays and 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. weekends...

Charlevoix Yesterday

This very early picture of Charlevoix shows the city about 1885. The photo apparantly was taken from the hill overlooking Belvedere Avenue. The undeveloped west end of Belvedere Avenue is shown in the foreground, ending at Bridge Street, with its white frame buildings. A close look toward the corner of Antrim and State streets reveals the roof of the old municipal building with its towers on the roof. The spire of the Methodist Church is visible in the center background of the picture. Bob Miles' picture history of Charlevoix has a photo of Bridge Street taken in 1884 showing the Lewis Grend Opera House and the store of Messrs. Fox and Rose, built in 1869. Both of these structures are to the far upper right in this picture. (Picture courtesy of Margaret Fitch Erber)

12 from high school band attending summer camps

Twelve Charlevoix School band students are attending band or band-related camps this summer.

The first to go were six members of the 1987-88 Rayder Marching Band Flag Corps who have returned from a session at Fred J. Miller Flag Corps School at Midland.

The Band Boosters provided $300 toward the tuition to the camp and the girls raised the remainder through fund-raising projects.

The six girls who attended the camp are Shelly Swegles, Kaye Stoneham, Kirsten Joy, Sonja Bodels, Jodi Kluczynski and Heather Keller who were accompanied by coach Becky Resch.

Mike Stargardt, a junior, has been chosen as drum major to succeed Wendy Voisin. He has been the recipient of a full scholarship from the Band Boosters to attend Smith-Walbridge Drum Major Camp at Syracuse, Ind.

Five middle school band students will attend the Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp and Camp Emrey at Twin Lakes near Muskegon.

Sixth grade baritone player Eliana Gebott and eighth grade flautist Amy Shupert have been awarded half-tuition scholarships to the camp by the Band Boosters.

Marshall Music Co. has awarded half-tuition scholarships to trumpet players Matt Stargardt, an eighth grader and Troy Bonar, a seventh grader.

Jake Porath, a sixth grade flautist, will also attend Camp Emrey.

Decision due: Should others use area dump?

by PEG OIILE

The question of whether Charlevoix County will try to limit where trash entering a licensed, private landfill comes from may be answered this month.

A county waste management planning group has been wrestling with the issue for months. The county planner, who is working with the panel, believes a decision could be made at the next meeting.

The committee is split: some wanting to stop other county's from dumping their trash in Charlevoix County; others welcoming the business.

At the root of the controversy is Public Act 641 of 1979 – Solid Waste Management Act – which covers the disposition of all solid waste (garbage and trash) generated in public and private places.

Under Act 641, counties are given the responsibility of developing a plan designating how all solid waste generated within the counties is to be disposed of.

Specifically, counties are required to write a plan seeing to it that "all solid waste is removed from the site of generation frequently enough to protect the health and delivered to licensed solid waste disposal areas."

Charlevoix County, through its planning department, has prepared two such solid waste management plans, the last one of which became effective in 1984.

This plan called for depositing waste not only in the licensed Charlevoix Garbage Service landfill (recently renamed Charlevoix County Landfill Inc.) in Eveline Township, but also in landfills in Kalkaska and Crawford counties.

However, things have changed since then.

The landfill in Kalkaska was closed by the Department of Natural Resources some time ago, and the one in Crawford County has only limited approval.

Therefore, almost all waste from Charlevoix County is being deposited in Charlevoix Landfill, along with waste from haulers serving Petoskey, other areas of Emmet County, Antrim County and many other northern Michigan counties.

Some of this "imported" trash has been residue from oil well operations in counties east of Charlevoix.

This intensive use of the Charlevoix landfill is causing increased fears of water and air pollution among Eveline Township residents and growing concerns about the rapid filling of the landfill by Charlevoix County officials.

Because of all these recent developments, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners appointed a 13-person committee to write a new solid waste management plan for the county.

The committee has now held five meetings, with one major question repeatedly asked but not answered – should Charlevoix County try to allow the use of the landfill to residents only, to county residents and those of other nearby counties, or to anyone anywhere wanting to use the landfill?

There is a sharp difference of opinion on the committee about this key issue.

It is caused in no small part by the rules of Act 641, under which the committee was organized.

The law specifies that a county's solid waste management plan be written by a committee consisting of four persons in the solid waste industry, three representing the general public, two representing environmentalists, one representing the county, one representing cities, one representing townships, and one representing the regional planning commission.

One of the industry representatives on the committee is Dawson Way, owner of Charlevoix County Landfill Inc. In a larger county, four industry representatives may have been found without appointing a person whose own faciliity is in question, but Act 641 is making it difficult for Charlevoix County by creating a widely split committee.

Way, speaking of "free enterprise," strongly supports the idea of out-of-county waste continuing to enter his landfill. He also points out that he owns 60 acres of land adjacent to the landfill, into which the landfill could be extended as needed.

Way has been most critical of the failure of the committee to face up to a decision on the landfill, saying after the last meeting, "Every time you come to this point, you back away."

County commissioner Don Smith, a committee member, does not believe Charlevoix County should be a regional dump.

Another committee member, Nancy Ferguson of Marion Township, agrees and, along with some other committee members, believes a regional incinerator along with a landfill is the answer to the county's problems.

Other committee members, including Chairman Tom Wieland, say that although an incinerator would be an expensive proposition, it should at least be in the county's long-range plans.

However, Wieland is unwilling at this point to say what he thinks a more immediate solution might be. Dennis Jason, who like Wieland serves on the county planning commission, is equally undecided.

In line with considering regional facilities for solid waste disposal, County Planner Larry Sullivan is inviting representatives from most northern Michigan counties to a meeting later this month to discuss solid waste disposal, especially a regional incinerator.

It is hoped that meeting will take place before the next waste management panel meeting, scheduled for Thursday, July 23, so the committee will have more regional information with which to work.

Hobbycraft fair attracts 173 exhibits

Bonnie Webster of Charlevoix is among the first-time entrants in the annual hobbycraft show. Her specialties are baskets and flowers.

East Park will assume a festive air Saturday, July 11, when it becomes the site of the 19th annual Lakeside Hobbycraft Fair.

The event is sponsored by the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

One hundred seventy-three entries will be found along the rolling terraces of the park were crafts offered for sale range from scrimshaw to dry sinks.

The fair grounds have been expanded this year to include Bridge Park north of Burnsides in order to accommodate the number of entries.

"The variety of crafts represented will rival any we've had during the history of the fair – giving the fairgoers a wide choice to choose from" said Jacquie Merta, executive director of the chamber of commerce.

Exhibits will vary from woodworking to home-sewn clothes, pillows and doll clothes; jewelry; hand-woven items, hand knit and crocheted items, stained glass, ceramics, hand-dipped candles and gourmet chocolates.

Charlevoix crafts people will be well-represented with exhibits including everything from potpourri to afghans.

Among the veteran exhibitors will be Phyllis Young of Elk Rapids who has exhibited hand-crafted jewelry most of the fair's 19 years.

The fair will open at 9:30 a.m. and continue until dark.

Football field house to be built

A field house will be built at the high school football field. Architectural plans have been ordered by the school board.

The field house will serve as dressing rooms for home and visiting teams. In the building will be a weight room, storage for football equipment and a maintenance workshop.

The structure will remove the football program from the high school building and free locker rooms for other sports. Space under the bleachers now used as a weight room will be converted to storage space and give the custodial staff a place to make repairs.

A portable classroom where football gear is stored will be used for storage and allow a storage building to be used for the purpose for which it was constructed, to store motorized equipment which, until now, has been left out in the weather.

The concrete block structure will be 52 by 80 feet. Eventually a brick veneer will be added.

As soon as plans are drawn, contracts will be let for construction later this summer.

The school board has hired Patricia Miller, formerly with the intermediate school district, as part-time special-education teacher. Miller was a Char-Em teacher consultant for multiply-handicapped pre-school children 1973-84 and a teacher in the highly individualized program 1984-87.

An increase in the size of the class resulted in the need for a part-time teacher for one year.

In other action, the board moved more than $9,000 from the 1958 debt retirement fund to the 1979 debt retirement account. The 1958 high school bond issue has expired.

The elementary school bond issue will expire in 1988, leaving on the 1979 high school renovation and addition bond issue which will expire in 1990.

Opinion

Downtown parking — A lot of problems

Even with the addition of the Erber lot's 60 spaces, downtown parking is still a major concern.

Parking spaces are so closely monitored that the petunia auction prize Mustang got a ticket over the weekend.

The petunia car's privileged parking space – on the sidewalk in front of the chamber of commerce building – may have precipitated the gift from some disgruntled meter violator.

But the joke illustrates the problem – parking is no laughing matter in the summer.

It's a three-month problem, but one that impacts on the livelihood of nearly everyone in town.

The problems are many:

– There aren't enough spaces where they need to be;

– Some of the most popular parking areas are on private property not intended for general public use.

– Downtown businesses do not have to provide any parking of their own;

– Getting there isn't half the fun.

Tourists are fickle. They may want to stop and look around, but trying to find a parking spot can head them back out on the highway.

Sure, the sidewalks were jammed with people over the holiday weekend – and may be for most of the summer. But which stores couldn't use more customers? Which workers couldn't use a heftier paycheck?

How many customers are so glad just to get their cars from one end of downtown to the other that driving around to hunt for a parking spot is out of the question?

Summer driving problems and summer parking problems go hand-in-hand. Easing the traffic mess probably means yanking parking spots. Easing the parking mess probably means cutting down driving areas.

Neither looks like a good alternative.

Additional parking spaces may be forthcoming. The city has an option to buy a piece of property that fits the parking scheme perfectly and is looking at other property. But these are long-term possibilities.

In the past few days a couple of seemingly drastic alternatives have been suggested.

One, from council member Norm Probert, would install angle parking along parts of Park, State and Antrim. This, Probert calculates, would add about 90 spaces.

The down side is that Park and Antrim – in their first blocks off Bridge – would have to be one-way and that State would become extremely narrow.

The other suggestion came from the owners of the Oleson Shopping Center and, while it drew some smiles and chuckles; clearly defines the problem of parking on private property.

Oleson's lot is the most popular of those not intended for the general public – popular because it's visible to motorists and because the street time restrictions can't be enforced.

Probert took an informal survey on a Saturday night and found only about a half-dozen of the 61 cars in the lot belonged to people in the shopping center stores.

What Oleson's suggested – and the city rejected – was closing off Antrim from Bridge to State and letting Oleson's turn the street into a parking area.

Oleson's tried the polite way – having someone in the lot all day asking people not to park there – with rude response over the holidays, so an impolite way – fences and gates or towing – may be in the future.

But if Oleson's corrects its problem, where do those cars that should not have been in Oleson's lot go? The city's problem gets worse.

The state highway department is studying ways to adjust traffic patterns on Bridge – adjustments that are certainly needed – but the suggestions are likely to include elimination of parking spots. And the city's problem gets worse.

As soon as the Erber lot was paved and striped last week, it began to fill up. And if the Star of Charlevoix returns next year, more parking will be needed. And the city's problem gets worse.

Aside from the angle parking proposal, there appears little that can be done for the short term. But the Downtown Development Authority and city council should move ahead at full-speed on obtaining more land and readying parking lots for next year.

One small, but helpful, thing the city could do this year is provide better directional aids to the present lots.

While townspeople know about the lot along Round Lake off Clinton and about the new Erber lot, tourists driving Bridge Street get few clues where to park.

Northbound motorists get no signs at Clinton pointing them in the natural traffic pattern to the right toward the waterfront lot. There is a sign for southbound traffic perched high on a pole, but that directs motorists to turn left – not the best move during busy traffic hours.

There is no indication for southbound traffic at Clinton that a lot awaits them to the right. Northbound cars can't turn left there, anyway, so no sign is needed.

A couple big signs – maybe even across-the-road banners – to point tourists toward the city lots should be no problem. But whether there will be any spaces for them to park in is a problem.

Beacons of Blessing

A devotional column prepared by the Charlevoix Ministerial Association

submitted by
Rev. Bruce E. Hamilton
Community Church of God

In case you didn't notice it, there was a change in your phone service recently. You are now hooked up to your choice of four long-distance companies. I only bring that up because of a commercial by one of them touting fibre optics giving their network the quietest calls going.

Well, if you really do pay attention to the background noise in your long-distance calls, I have a question for you. Do you pay attention to the back-ground noise in your life when it comes to your Christian faith?

Paul writes to the Thessalonians, "we always thank God for all of you mentioning you in our prayers." How close attention do you pay to your prayers? If you're a worrier and you don't get those worries out before the Lord, you've got some background noise you don't really need. If you're afraid and you really have never fully let go of those fears, you've got some background noise you don't really need.

When the lines of communciation are truly clear between us and God, we find that there is real power in prayer. We really can pray about mountains being moved and know that God will move them, even if it's just one pebble at a time.

God wants the clearest connection he can possibly get between our heart and His. It is not accomplished through fibre optics or any other human technology. Jesus Christ makes the connection. With Him handling the worries, the fears, the doubts or whatever, the way is clear for God to do great things in our lives.

But – just like the long-distance phone companies, the choice is up to you. Without Christ, the background noise of life can be over powering. With Him, God's love for you comes through loud and clear.

City's work of art

Clockwise

BY BOB CLOCK

As promised, the new parking lot on Clinton Street — site of the former Erber garage — was completed before July 4.

Well, almost completed. The parking meter heads still have to be installed, garden areas planted and lights erected.

"It's not a parking lot," says Helen Weislik, proprietor of the Town House cocktail lounge on Bridge Street. "It's a work of art."

As one of the downtown merchants who is paying for — and will benefit from — the new facility, Helen is pleased that the designers went out of their way to make the new lot as attractive as a parking lot can be, including brick accents which serve as aesthetic relief from so much blacktop and concrete.

And when trees are planted and flowers are blooming, it could well live up to Helen's enthusuastic assessment.

HORTON BAY'S annual Fourth of July parade is history. And that so many thousands of people can jam themselves into such a tiny community at one time defies the imagination.

Crowd estimates are always suspect, since no one actually counts heads. If memory serves, the 1986 estimate was something like 10,000. If so, this year's crowd was half again as large — and the parade, which lived up to its advanced billing as one of the best in the state — was twice as long as last year's, thanks to plenty of new entries.

I was particularly impressed with the lawn chair precision marching brigade. Who else but the Horton Bay crowd would think of using lawn chairs as percussion instruments? Equally impressive was the uniformed lawnmower drill team from Villa de Charlevoix.

Betty Keits and her invisible marching band was hilarious, as were the many entries based on Windigo — or Sasquatch — which allegedly was sighted on the ice-bound shore of Lake Charlevoix near Horton Bay last winter — just in time for the "Sasquatchcentennial."

AN INTERESTING boat docked in Charlevoix over the holiday weekend. It was the 43-foot sloop Guerre de Course operated by the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps (NROTC) unit based at Marquette University in Milwaukee.

During the summer the boat is used to familiarize future naval officers with the idiosyncrasies of wind-powered craft. One of the young midshipmen told me that the Navy suddenly became quite alarmed that so many of its young officers were strangers to the ways of winds, tides and currents — things that played such a big role in the lives of seafarers in years gone by.

The ship, formerly called Night Train, was a gift by retired gunnery officer Blair Vetter of Evanston, Ill., to the Naval Academy Sailing Foundation, which charters the boat to Marquette's NROTC.

The Guerre de Course has placed a number of times in the Chicago-Mackinac race and will compete again this summer.

The present seven-man crew of midshipmen and officers departed Detroit two weeks ago, with stops at Tobermory and Kilarney, Ontario, before heading westward through the North Channel to Mackinac Island. The sloop left Charlevoix Monday for Grand Haven, last port of call before returning to Milwaukee.

At Milwaukee a more experienced crew will move aboard in preparation for the Chicago-Mackinac race.

Most of the midshipmen are attending college on full-ride NROTC scholarships, which include tuition, room and board and a monthly stipend. When they graduate, they not only will have their college degrees but also the rank of ensigns in the U.S. Navy.

Sounds like a fine deal. If you are interested, write to the Naval Reserve Officers Training Corps, Marquette University, 1530 Clybourn St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Where the deer and antelope play

EDITH GILBERT

By a fluke, I acquired 40 acres of land in Nevada. Having no idea what the property is worth, my sister, who lives in California, kindly checked it out for me. Is this property a developer lusts for? No! Is this property adjacent to a ski area? No! Is this property sitting on top of a silver mine? No!

Well, where is it and who wants it? Answer. It is in the middle of the Sheldon National Wildlife Refuge and the Fish and Wildlife Service wants it as a donation. If I'm interested, I'm to contact Don Gerig in Portland, Ore. He's a friendly fellow over the phone, and I ask him what is on the wildlife refuge.

"We have a lot of woods and streams filled with deer and antelope," he replied.

I can't remember another word he said because I started hearing music. "Home, home on the range, where the deer and the antelope play... Where seldom is heard, a discouraging word, and the skies are not cloudy all day...."

I felt myself go soft and mushy all over... I saw Fourth of July fireworks... I saw the flag waving against a blue sky... I thought about my family and how I was the first generation born in these United States. And I thought about those deer and antelope–it's their land too! They were here first!

Maybe I was humming, "Home, home on the range," over the phone, because somehow Don wasn't quite convinced when I told him I'd like to donate the property to the Fish and Wildlife Service without further ado. He kept calling back to see if I had changed my mind, been on the bottle, or maybe just wasn't quite all there. Yes, I assured him, I want the deer and the antelope to enjoy their playground with my compliments.

Last week, I signed the deed, and I couldn't be happier.

If you felt all Star Spangle Bannered and patriotic this Fourth of July weekend, you too can make a donation. Yes, of course it's tax deductible. Just call your local Little Traverse Conservancy – they're in the phone book.

The mailman brought a warm letter from Anne Higman Olmstead. She says she used to live "in Charlevoix, B.C. (before condos)". She worked for the Courier when the office was located on Bridge Street near Park Avenue. Although she has lived in California since 1958, she still subscribes to this paper. She writes, "You can take the people out of Charlevoix, but you can't take Charlevoix out of its people..."

How true!

Thanks, Anne, for the excellent article on the decline of service you enclosed from the L.A. Times travel section. Only today, I received an invitation to go to Boston to give a training seminar to young people on proper service in restaurants. Too bad I couldn't accept, but it was flattering to be asked.

You may be interested to know that North Central Michigan College is doing a "needs study" – a long-range plan for career training in the restaurant and hotel field. If it comes about, it's still at least a year off.

Do keep reading the Courier, Anne, and we'll try to keep it lively.

Weddings

Cynthia and Scott Parker

Wylie-Parker

St. Francis Xavier Church pews were trimmed with silk floral hearts and satin streamers for the May 9 wedding of Cynthia M. Wylie and Scott W. Parker. The Rev. Medard Buvala performed the ceremony before the altar decorated with ferns and ivory gladioli. A special blessing was given by the Rev. Hugolinus Kiener, the priest who married the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley D. Czerkie of Petoskey. The groom is the son of Mrs. Marian Parker of Charlevoix and the late K.E. Parker.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory satin gown with a fitted Venise lace bodice, elbow-length lace sleeves and scalloped bateau neckline. The skirt ended in a chapel-length train and the bride's veil was attached to a circlet of pearls.

Church organist Marilyn Ross offered a program of traditional music and served as accompanist for a solo by the bride. A guitar and voice solo was also offered by Dean Parker, brother of the groom.

Honor attendants were Mrs. Cathleen Kosc, sister of the bride and Alycia Wierzbicka. Bridesmaid was Suzanne Parker, sister of the groom. The attendants wore identical champagne lace gowns with handkerchief tea-length skirts.

New Testament readings were given by Connie S. Lewinski, sister of the bride. Epistle reading was given by Deborah A. Czerkie, another sister of the bride.

Barry Parker attended his brother as best man and groomsmen were Ron Brown and David S. Czerkie, brother of the bride. Ushers were Dean Parker, brother of the groom, Michael T. Czerkie, brother of the bride and Dirk S. Wylie, son of the bride.

A reception followed the ceremony at The Inland House, given by the bride and groom. Sarah Jane Czerkie served the wedding cake and Jennifer Czerkie attended the gift table and guest registry.

On May 8, the groom's mother hosted the rehearsal dinner at her Pine Point home. The newlyweds spent their honeymoon touring the East Coast and Canada and are now residing in Charlevoix.

The groom, an architect and builder, is owner of Charlevoix Building & Remodeling Co. The bride is a cosmetologist and electrologist in Petoskey. (Photo courtesy Lynn Carson)

National officers visiting Grange

The Barnard Grange of Charlevoix has been selected as one of five in the state to be visited by National Grange officers during a National Grange Campaign for Leadership Development Tour.

Roland Winter of Marshall, master of the Michigan State Grange, announced the selection.

A group of four national officers will be at the grange Friday, July 10, to meet members from throughout northern Michigan.

Norman Empey, master of the local Grange, said, "This is a rare opportunity for us to meet our national leaders, to ask questions, to hear what's happening in the grange on the national level and how it relates to the state, Pomona and subordinate levels. I hope every Grange member in the area will make an effort to attend the meeting."

The national officers who will be making the tour are Edward Anderson, master; Robert Barrow, lecturer; Harry Massey, membership director; and Robert Frederick, legislative director. Winter, the state master, will accompany the group.

The meeting will open with a potluck supper at the Grange Hall at 6 p.m. Friday. Those unable to attend the dinner may attend the meeting that will follow.

The family of Augusta Howe gathers for a five-generation picture. Mrs. Howe, the former Augusta Kent, who is 93, is second from right. Mrs. Howe took her first airplane flight when she and the Kaskeys visited Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kaskey Jr. in Anchorage, Alaska. Mrs. Howe resides on Petoskey Avenue in the house she has lived in since 1913.

Support group for emotionally impaired re-forms

The Michigan Association for Emotionally Disturbed Children has re-established a chapter in the Charlevoix and Petoskey areas.

The Chapter has been involved in getting the Mad Hatters, a theater group whose presentations promote understanding of children and adults with special needs or disabilities, to appear in the Petoskey area.

With support from the local Jaycees and the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, the group will present a free community performance in the early fall.

Members have been gathering information for a Teen Help Card, listing agencies and their services, which will be made available to teenagers in Charlevoix, Emmet, Otsego and Cheboygan counties.

For more information about chapter activities call Marj Loucks at 347-6706 after 5 p.m., Paulette Thorp at 547-9517 or Marge Bley at 537-4647.

Dearborn coach picked for varsity basketball post

James J. Kanine, 31, teacher and athletic director at St. Alphonsus High School in Dearborn, has been hired as varsity basketball coach at Charlevoix High.

Kanine, who was junior varsity and freshman basketball coach in Dearborn, will teach English at the middle school.

He succeeds David J. Smith, who resigned last spring after service as varsity coach since 1981. Smith continues in his position as high school principal.

A native of Shepherd, Kanine has a bachelor's degree from Central Michigan University with a major in physical education and a minor in English. He graduated in 1978. He also has a master's degree in administration from the University of Michigan (1986).

He was football and baseball coach at Shepherd High School 1975-78, teacher and coach at Servite High School in Detroit 1978-82 and athletic director and teacher at St Alphonsus in Dearborn 1982-87.

He has a varied background in coaching, having coached football for eight years including five years as varsity coach, JV basketball four years and freshman basketball one year, girls basketball, boys and girls track and baseball.

"I've done a lot of coaching but never on the varsity level in basketball, though I have been varsity coach in all the others," Kanine said.

He said he is looking forward to returning to a small town. "I came from Shepherd. I like a small town. I am looking forward to moving north."

He and his wife, Jane, have three children, ages six, three and one. He said they would be coming north shortly to look for a house.

Kanine was recommended for the post by the extra-curricular committee.

The tournament had opened with Davis Chevrolet defeating CPI 3-2; Wilkinsoo's Coostruction of Cheboygan defeating Connie's Place 19-12; Pine Hill Nursery beating House on the Hill 16-9 and Richard's Topside Cafe downlog Little Caesar's 10-4.

In second round action, Burger King defeated Davis Chevrolet 6-3; Grey Gables beat Wilkinson's 16-7; PBR shut out Pine Hill 17-0; and Moss Telecom defeated Topside 18-2.

In the loser's bracket, Connie's Place edged CPI 8-1; House on the Hill edged Little Caesar's 3-2; Wilkinson Construction shut out Davis Chevrolet 16-0; and Topside edged Pine Hill 6-5.

Then Burger King advanced in the winner's bracket by defeating Grey Gables 13-2 and PBR advanced by beating Moss Telecom.

House on the Hill beat Connie's Place 5-3 before being eliminated by Moss Telecom 13-5, while Wilkinson Construction sent Topside to the showers 16-3 before defeating Grey Gables 9-0.

Wilkinson's lost to Moss Telecom 10-1 which then succumbed to Burger King 8-3 to give the Big Rapids team its second shot at the title.

Kids learn theater skills at workshop

by SARA GAY DAMMANN

Fran Tolles leads a chorus of elementary age singers during a rehearsal at a theater workshop. Three participants in a "Winnie the Pooh" number (below) practice with pianist Margaret Thomson. The girls are (from left) Marie Essengberg, Autumn Spaulding and Allison Kujewiski.

Fran Tollas never lacks for musical visions and dreams, most focused on young people.

Whether teaching voice to individual students, working with community choirs or finagling grants to bring music to senior citizen centers, Tollas' vision of music is something she is determined to share.

Last week, some 30 children from Charlevoix, East Jordan, Alanson, Boyne City and Kalkaska got a taste of what her visions and talents combine to create.

Singing, dancing and acting, youngsters from seven to 13 sampled the disciplines of musical theater.

"There's a lot of talent in this area and there are a lot of good music camps for children, but they are all very expensive," she said as she watched her students hurrying to prepare for a dress rehearsal.

"There are several of us who have talked for years of creating a musical theater experience for children in Charlevoix. This is just a beginning."

For the past three years, Tollas has recruited colleagues in drama and dance to offer a week-long, fairly intensive workshop for children in musical theater.

This year Margaret Thomson, a retired elementary music teacher from East Jordan; Mary Irwin, a drama teacher from East Jordan, and Kathy Fitch, a dance teacher in Kalkaska; joined Tollas to work with the children. The workshop was conducted under the sponsorship of the Crooked Tree Arts Council.

The teachers wove together mini-scenes from "Big River," "Little Shop of Horrors," "Pinochio" and "Winnie the Pooh." For four days their students met in separate workshops refining the dance, vocal and drama parts.

Friday, parents were invited to the First Congregational Church for a final presentation. The finale of the review was a chorus of an original musical piece by Tollas, entitled "Michigan, Northern Michigan," a journey around northern Michigan set in 3-4 time to a softshoe rhythm.

Soil district dinner features veteran speaker

Former "marketing man of the year" Walt Buescher will be the principal speaker at the 39th annual meeting of the Charlevoix Soil and Water Conservation District on July 16.

Buescher's presentation will begin at 8 p.m. Social hour begins at 6:30 with dinner at 7 p.m. The pancake and sausage dinner costs $3.

Reservations may be made at 582-7341. Walk-ins are welcome.

A native of Indiana, Buescher is retired from a three-decade career in the farm equipment industry. Combining humor with a serious message, he will discuss major contributions made by agriculture and industry. His visit is sponsored by Sperry New Holland.

In 1972, Buescher was named "marketing man-of-the-year" by the National Agri-Marketing Association. He has addressed farm audiences for 25 years.

He entered the farm equipment industry when rubber tires were beginning to make their appearance on tractors and the first successful automatic field pick-up baler was starting a revolution in hay harvesting.

A graduate of Valparaiso University, Buescher and his wife live in Pigeon Forge, Tenn.

Yachting Notes

A. NONY MOUSE

The Charlevoix Yacht Club's 1987 spring series is history. Conditions were predominately light as the weather has been fairly settled and warm.

The lack of good breezes hasn't deterred the skippers and crews as 36 boats have registered and raced, unofficially a record turnout for the early series.

Traveller with Dave Irish at the helm dominated the A fleet as his total of 7.25 points placed him well ahead of Dave Strawbridge's Pygmalion. Just love the esprit de corps and crew shirts sported by those aboard Miss Piggy though.

Respite, the largest boat racing this year at 46 feet, nailed down third place, not an easy feat on a short course with legs of only one plus miles. Gary Gleason's new Schock 35 Sorcerer was fourth in the series despite missing the first three races and then winning the last three. Sorcerer has to be marked as the favorite for the upcoming summer series based on that information.

Gotcha, Columbine, Tigger, Night Moves, Wing Nut, Mint Julip, Merry Hell, Babe, Slapshot and J22 finished in that order to complete the A Fleet group.

If Traveller dominated the A Fleet, Bandit with Josh Barnes destroyed the B Fleet with five firsts and one second. Blasen III, perenial contender, locked up second place early in the series with Mikey Carland (Tireless) and Lou Hollow (Phoenecia) in a dead heat for third. Cygnus, Nulli Secundus, Te-Gl and San-Sue-She completed the B fleet standings.

The Jib and Main fleet had 14 boats registered and the only real race for first place among the 3 fleets. When the last light air race was completed, John Gaskin's Sandpiper took first place honors while last year's dominate boat Maureen with Norm and Elaine Tolman, maintained second place.

Flash with Gordon skippering was third followed by Rihit, Kittiwake, Stalworth, Hot Mustard, Cheemaun and Mud Duck. Canusa, Cabaret, Apothecary, Cool Whip and Sonrise completed the third fleet.

All in all, it was a fun spring series though a little more consistent help from the wind gods would have been appreciated by all.

The first race of the six-race summer series is slated for Wednesday, July 8. Anyone interested in more information may call Dave Strawbridge evenings, 547-5553.

3 Majors teams in title playoff

The second half of the Major League season ended with Charlevoix Lions, American Legion and Oleson Foods tied for first place.

The first game of the play-off for the second half title saw Lions edging Legion 7-6 with the winning run scored in the bottom of the sixth inning with two men out.

Travis Blissett got a hit after two players were out, stole second and went home on a single by Jamie Crain to score the winning run.

Blissett was the winning pitcher with 13 strikeouts. He allowed only three hits. Don Jess, who took the loss, had six strikeouts and gave up 12 hits.

Ben Whitley had three hits, Blissett three including an over-the-fence homer and Cain and Bill Dreyer two hits each.

Kids' leagues

The following games were played in the Charlevoix Recreation Department's Peanut League: Tigers 16, Yankess 1; Reds 10, Dodgers 4.

In the Ponytail League, scores were Cardinals 11, Royals 2; Orioles 15, Angels 4.

In T-ball, scores were Orange Sox 25, Green Sox 14; Grey Sox 25, Raspberry Sox 18; and Tan Sox 16, Blue Sox 15.

ANIMAL CRACKERS IN HORTON BAY

Horton Bey's annual Independence Day parade has a growing reputation for being a little different then other area July 4th events. This year's parade drew e crowd variously estimated at 6,000 to 10,000 as Bay Township celebrated its 100th birthday. Animal acts -- both real and not-so-reel mede up a big part of the parade, ranging from a 100-person circus to e pet hamster. Some of the critters seen along the parade route were (clockwise from top left) a land shark, a gentleman ape and his "Temmy Mae," e chicken playing a saxophone, Smokey and e lobster.

Lake plan hearings in August

As the Lake Charlevoix Management Advisory Committee plan continues to be brought before local government agencies, at least two hearings for the general public are being set up.

They will be held in August, and exact dates and places will be announced soon, according to the county planning department.

Also, to publicize and implement the lake management plan, the planning department is working with the Charlevoix County Soil Conservation Service in applying for a $50,000 Clean Water Incentive Program grant.

The grant would pay for printing the plan and to assist with an inventory of wetlands in the Lake Charlevoix watershed, after which landowners would be advised of wetland classifications.

"We hope to be able to make an inventory of the wetlands and designate those that should probably be purchased by government agencies or by a nature conservancy because they have no other feasible or prudent use," County Planner Larry Sullivan said.

Part of the Clean Water program money, if received, would also be used to make a study of farm management procedures in the wetlands of the Lake Charlevoix watershed.

Areas that are used for grazing, especially, can cause water pollution, according to Sullivan. However, there are now state and federal funds available for such preventive measures as holding ponds for manure which is later used for fertilizing.

The Soil Conservation Service last year completed a similar study of the Bear River watershed, which is being used in several land use programs.

Liquor permit endorsed at Edgewater conventions

City council has toasted attempts to attract conventions and meetings to Charlevoix by endorsing a liquor license application for the Edgewater Inn.

The new hotel would use the permit for its cafe, pool area and convention center. It will not install a standard bar operation, says developer Jon Hisey.

The application must be approved by the state Liquor Control Commission.

Hisey was joined in appealing for council approval by several business people including the manager of the rival Weathervane Terrace motel.

The Weathervane's Harold Krutsch said a meeting room at the Edgewater would "sit idle like my conference room does 80 percent of the year" without a liquor permit.

Convention business at the Edgewater would help business at the Weathervane, he said, particularly in off-season times.

Others speaking in favor of the license included Edgewater chef and former Grey Gables operator Dave Phillips, downtown businessmen Karl Gulewicz and John Ochs, Chamber of Commerce head Jacquie Merta, City Manager Mike Wiesner and realtors Dick Goergi and Gene Steele, chairman of the Downtown Development Authority.

Steele said he recently attended a meeting at the Grand Hotel on Mackinac Island, where service bars were set up on the porch and on terraces.

"It's all part and parcel of the whole resort scene," Steele said.

Several others spoke of the importance of having liquor available for banquets and conventions. To compete for convention business with nearby facilities such as those at Boyne Mountain and Schuss Mountain, Merta said, it is necessary to have drinks available.

Councilwoman Shirley Roloff raised concerns about parking during conventions, but Hisey, Georgi and councilman Bob Timms said parking appears adequate to them. The hotel has 119 parking spaces for its 60 sleeping rooms, six shops and five offices.

Hisey agreed to a request by councilman Norm Probert that he agree in writing to refrain from giving the cafe an outward appearance of being a bar.

But Probert's attempt to make the egreement part of the motion to endorse the application failed when councilman Bill Bellows entered a motion before he did. Bellows' motion was to endorse the application without reservation.

The motion was approved unanimously by the five council members present – Roloff, Timms, Bellows, Probert and Bill Haggard. Earl Muma was absent.

A copy of "The History of Michigan Banking," a special publication marking the 100th anniversary of banking in the state, is presented to the Charlevoix Public Library by Charlevoix County State Bank. Gordon Wellman gave the book to librarian Marybeth Wellick in memory of Marian Bridge and Ester Hawley.

Tour of 5 area homes helps buy hospital device

Five area residents have opened their houses for the sixth annual home tour sponsored by the Kappa Sigma chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority.

The tour, scheduled for 1 p.m. Wednesday, July 15, for the benefit of the Charlevoix Area Hospital, will offer tour-goers an opportunity to see how home owners have utilized their locations to advantage and created a setting for gracious living by use of furnishings, fabrics and accessories.

Among the homes to be visited will be that of Robert and Jane Lieberman who, with the help of architect Hans Weimer, have converted a machine shop owned by Mrs. Lieberman's late father, Carl Kohler, since the early 1900's into a small home whose view of Round Lake is its finest feature.

A view from the many windows a few feet from the south shore of the lake offers a panoramic look at the ever-changing scene in the landlocked harbor.

Mrs. Lieberman has used many antiques and French collectibles and color in the funishings to add charm to an already beautiful setting.

By contrast the home of Arthur and Sue Kleinpell nestled on the north shore of the lake between Thistledown and the water's edge is of native stone.

Again, the windows looking to the south across Round Lake add expanse to the living room which is dominated by a unique fireplace crafted from a single boulder.

Fresh colors, such as the pink in the Laura Ashley bedroom, add charm and intimacy to this lovely home.

Nestled among the pines atop a sand dune is the home of John and Ranny Riecker with a view of the wide expanse of Lake Michigan to the west.

A collection of antiques and European treasures, selected with care by the Rieckers, brings out the strong points in this home designed by Virginia Olsen who utilized stone in an unusual manner, especially in the fireplace which is a focal point in the house.

Located on the city's north side is the English Coswald cottage owned by Thomas and Judy Jervis where a vine-covered entryway spells "welcome" to all visitors and where the expanse et the rear of the house is the site of a patio and in-ground pool where refreshments will be served during the tour. Also featured are a built-in hot tub and fountain.

A "Plain and Fancy Kitchen" by Stephanie of Petoskey utilizing hunter green plaids, is patterned after an English pub making it a favorite room.

The only country house on the tour is that of Jeff and Darlene Anderson – a California contemporary home located on the side of a hill that slopes down to the north shore of Lake Charlevoix.

The massive living room with its 15-foot cathedral windows offers occupants an unparelled view of the lake while enjoying the informal setting created by the use of casual furnishings designed for leisure.

Color in the furniture coverings, the art, seasonal flowers and accessories brings the room to life.

A mezzanine to the rear of the living room offers a view of the living room area and beyond to the lake. All rooms in the house are designed to give a view of the lake.

The ground level of the home offers a storage area for a variety of equipment with which to enjoy numerous water sports.

Tickets for the home tour are available at the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, the Appletree gift shop and the Shop of the Gulls.

Proceeds from the event will help in the purchase of a flexible sigmoidoscope fibroptic instrument used in the diagnosis of cancer of the colon according to Pamela Newcomb, chairwoman of the tour.

In this year's house tour (clockwise from top left): the Andersons' house on Oyster Bay, the Liebermans' on Round Lake, the Kleinpells' on Round Lake, the Jervis' on Meech and the Rieckers' on Michigen.

Annual Beaver Island museum week focuses on sesquicentennial

The Beaver Island Historical Society will hold its 8th annual Museum Week from Monday to Saturday, July 13-18.

The society, which observes its 30th anniversary this year, has planned the week in honor of the state's sesquicentennial and the arrival of the first permanent white settlers on Beaver Island.

Events include a tour of the island's facilities and institutions, a quilt workshop, and a square and folk dance in the parish hall.

The tour at 11 a.m. Monday, will cover the medical center, community school, three churches and fire hall. In the evening, musicians including Claudia Schmidt, of "Prairie Home Companion" will sing and play folk, country and traditional favorites at 8 p.m. from the Print Shop porch.

Gwen Marston and Joe Cunningham, quilters and authors of books and tapes on quilting, will hold a workshop, at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the community school. Ramon Nelson, who has been collecting High Island lore and that of its colonists, the House of David, will show slides at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday at the school.

Industry courted by city

Finding people who want to move to Charlevoix isn't very hard, but luring industries to locate here has proven difficult.

So, in an effort to drum up interest in the industrial park, the city is taking an unusual step.

At the urging of Mayor Ralph McRae, council is hiring a Detroit area real estate firm to sell the idea of building in the park to downstate firms.

Schostak Brothers & Co. Inc., which specializes in sales of industrial properties, has agreed to become the exclusive sales agent for the industrial park.

Schostak has 15 sales representatives who deal only in industrial properties. The city is hoping its contacts in the manufacturing arena will enable the firm to lure employers to Charlevoix.

"There is a lot of competition among various cities for new plants," McRae wrote council members in explaining the proposal. "It takes a very hard sell effort to get anywhere."

The city has spent more than a half-million dollars on preparing the park to accept industrial facilities.

In order to keep the city's revenue at $10,000 per acre parcel, the price is being increased to $12,500 to cover commissions for Schostak and a local realty firm that would handle the closings.

There are 10 parcels which the city is trying to attract manufacturers to build on. Right now, McRae says, there are 26 manufacturing facilities employing 1,044 workers in the community – most in the surrounding townships.

To pay for promotional materials – such as brochures and advertisements – the city has budgeted $5,000 for Schostak's use. The city will retain whatever materials are unused in the year-long effort.

Also available to show prospective manufacturers is a videotape being made of the industrial park by a Traverse City firm.

Copies of the $600 video will be sent to interested firms and placed in such places as the chamber of commerce and harbormaster'a office so executives can view it during stops in town.

Condo ban near lakes is rejected

by DON DIBLEY

No issue in Charlevoix evokes as much emotion as the proliferation of multiple-family housing.

And a lot of that emotion boiled to the surface as a proposal to ban what are commonly called condos near the city's waterways was aired before the planning commission.

The proposal by Mayor Ralph McRae to limit future development within 200 feet of waterways to single-family residential or boating-fishing businesses was defeated 4-2 by the commission.

Don Meggison and Barbara Fels voted for the limitation, while Alvin Ranger, Dave Novotny, John Friedly and chairman Walt Hufford voted against it. June Cross was absent.

A second proposal by McRae was not taken up because it was presented after the planning commission agenda was published.

That proposal called for a moratorium on consideration of plans for the construction of multiple dwellings, apartments, condominiums, condominium-hotels or other R-4 (planned residential zone of four units or more) developments.

McRae wanted a 180-day moratorium to allow for the enactment of tighter controls on multiple-family dwellings.

The planners also had a specific request – for approval of a 21-room hotel – to take action on, and the spirited public hearing on the mayor's proposal often mixed specific with general.

The hotel proposal was returned to the developer without action after the planners failed in a 3-3 vote to determine that the proposal was allowable under the site's present zoning.

Don Berlage of Northern Michigan Realty Services Inc. said he did not want to seek a rezoning of the property at 105 and 107 Park Avenue because he thought the site's commercial scenic designation encompassed his plans.

The public hearing started slowly as Hufford began asking around the room if people in the crowd of 50 or so had any comments to make.

"Naturally, I would oppose it," Berlage said as the first person to reply. Several others – mostly in the development or realty businesses – echoed his reaction with short expressions of opposition.

Even McRae chose to hold his comments until later as Hufford circled half the room soliciting comment.

Doris Lundteigen was the first to speak for the limitation, saying she would like to see single-family housing remain along Pine River Channel.

Billie Smith, Roberta Whitley and Jill Stewart spoke against further development along Park.

In speaking against the limitation, John Haggard and Suzy Reis talked of financial considerations.

Haggard said the owners of lakefront, undeveloped land would have to have their tax assessments greatly reduced if they were prevented from developing the property to its highest potential.

Reis warned that removing the availability of higher-priced multiple-family units would drive up the price of single-family homes and drive out moderate-income families.

Several planning commissioners favored tackling the issue on a case-by-case basis, but McRae said "every time you do it case by case, the public loses."

Fels agreed with the mayor and entered a motion along the lines of his proposal, which was seconded by Meggison. The motion was defeated.

AROUND THE TOWN

Charlevoix is getting some free advertising it couldn't afford to buy... Two hours of air time on the most listened-to radio station in Michigan....

Warren Pierce, mid-day host on WJR in Detroit, will broadcast his show live from Charlevoix on Friday, July 24, as the Venetian Festival gets into full swing.... Pierce is bringing his show to Charlevoix as part of a Michigan sesquicentennial look at several Northern Michigan cities....

A master of the remote broadcast, Pierce has done his show from such far-flung places as Prince Charles' wedding in London and a record-setting around-the-world trip on commercial airliners.... His 1 to 3 p.m. show will include interviews with local people and may be aired from an Edgewater Inn balcony overlooking Round Lake.

Another shot in the arm for the city's tourist industry is an upcoming article in the Jewish News, an influential newspaper in the Southfield-Detroit area....

The article, written by frequent summer resorter Susan Weingarden, is scheduled to appear in a couple weeks with several photos of Charlevoix sites and activities.

The assault on Charlevoix's world record cherry pie continues.... Traverse City has formalized plans to bake a 14-ton pie Saturday, July 25....

The pie is expected to contain 18,865 pounds of cherries, 7,478 pounds of sugar, 1,081 pounds of flour, 855 pounds of corn starch and 703 pounds of shortening.... It will yield about 100,000 servings....

The event is planned as part of entertainment for the National Governor's Conference.... Charlevoix residents baked a seven-ton pie during the national bicentennial celebration in 1976....

More trash containers are on their way.... The Downtown Development Authority is looking at catalogs of containers and thinking about possible slogans they may carry....

In the meantime, the city has purchased 50 55-gallon barrels and is painting and placing them around town....

Sweltering heat greeted crowds at the annuel Hobbycraft Feir as visitors end exhibitors fought 92-degree temperatures -- with dipping feet in Round Lake or hiding under umbrellas common ways to fight the heat.

Charlevoix Yesterday

This picture shows construction in progress on the old bank building at the northwest corner of Bridge and Clinton streets. The building was completed in 1904 and burned in the winter of 1924. The third floor was used as a dance hall and theater, according to Fran Martin. The building was rebuilt immediately following the fire with only two floors. Notice the old frame structures on Bridge Street and Clinton Street and the overhead telephone and electric wires. (This picture was loaned by Carol Robbins who found it in the album of her mother, Helen Jones. Robbin's grandparents were Linde and Harvey Campball who owned the ferryboat "Tha Beaver.")

Mesquite leaves for Chicago

After hosting an open house in Charlevoix and participating in the National Cherry Festival in Traverse City, the Coast Guard Cutter Mesquite has turned to the less-glamorous task of renovating the Chicago Harbor Light Station.

After completing its work in Chicago, the ship will go to South Haven, Toledo and Cleveland before returning to Charlevoix in mid-September.

More than 300 people toured the ship during the July Fourth open house at the city dock in Charlevoix. The guided tours provided visitors a first-hand look at life aboard a Great Lakes cutter.

The Mesquite participated in the opening day of the Nation Cherry Festival.

Approximately 300 toured the ship before the Mesquite took the National Cherry Queen, her court and members of the festival committee for a cruise along the shoreline of Grand Traverse Bay.

The ship then returned to Charlevoix to prepare for the trip to Chicago, which has begun.

Venetian: King, queen and more fireworks

An appearance by a world-renowned trick softball player and a bigger fireworks display are set for this year's Venetian Festival.

The 57th Venetian will be held Thursday, July 23, through Saturday, July 25, and is expected to attract about 30,000 visitors.

The King and His Court will play an area all-star softball team Wednesday, July 22 (see story below).

And the selection process for the Venetian Queen will be different this year (see story at right) with the traditional pageant eliminated.

With the help of city council, the Chamber of Commerce will be able to present a larger fireworks display to cap off the weekend.

Council members have agreed to increase the city's share of the fireworks' cost by more than $1,000.

The city had budgeted $1,900, but will increase that to $3,000, with Mayor Ralph McRae personally pledging another $100. The chamber's budget for fireworks is $1,000.

The fireworks are exploded over Round Lake following the lighted boat parade on Saturday night. Fireworks should begin a little after 10 p.m.

Five Charlevoix teens are competing for the Venetian Queen crown under the contest's new format. They are (from left) Jessica Houghton, Wendy Voison, Sue Annis, Kim Hand and Nikki Kurchinski.

Format altered for Venetian Queen selection competition

This year's Venetian Queen will be crowned in a less-formal setting than previous years' pageants.

Five teens are candidates to reign over this year's Venetian Festival and represent the community until next July.

Those vying for the crown now worn by Tara McLelland are Sue Annis, Kimberly Hand, Jessica Marie Houghton, Nicole "Nikki" Kurchinski and Wendy Suzanne Voisin.

This year a panel of judges will meet the candidates at a luncheon, then have a personal interview. Later the candidates will be interviewed briefly on the stage in East Park during Friday's "Evening of Magic" before the judges make their decision. The queen will then be crowned on the bandstand in the park.

"There was not the interest in the pageant so we have decided on this method rather than dispense with the idea of a queen entirely," said Jacquie Merta, executive director of the sponsoring Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

The five candidates are: –Sue Annis, 19, is 5-foot-3 and has brown eyes and brown hair. She is the daughter of James and Lorriane Annis.

–Kimberly Hand, 17, is 5-foot-8 and has blue eyes and brown hair. She is the daughter of Merle and Jane Hand.

–Jessica Marie Houghton, 17, is 5-foot-5 and has blue eyes and brown hair. Albert and Elaine Houghton are her parents.

–Nicole Kurchinski, 17, is 5-foot-7½ and has green eyes and brown hair. David and Lee Kurchinski are her parents.

–Wendy Suzanne Voisin, 18, is 5-foot-7 and has blue eyes and light brown hair. She is the daughter of Donald and Vicki Voisin.

On Saturday, July 25, the queen and her court will ride in the street parade at noon. They will then be introduced from the stage in East Park at approximately 8 p.m. Saturday during the musical program prior to the Venetian Boat Parade on Round Lake.

During the upcoming year, the queen will represent Charlevoix in various festivities around the North.

Famed softball pitcher brings trick show to city

Eddie Feighner

Softball legend Eddie (The King) Feigner will lead his 4-man King and His Court team against the full-sized 9-man Charlevoix All-star team Wednesday, July 22.

The event will help kick off the annual Venetian Festival, said Ike Boss, director of the Charlevoix Recreation Department, which is sponsoring the game.

The game will start at 7:30 p.m. with gates opening at 6 p.m. at the softball field on Carpenter Avenue.

Advanced tickets can be purchased from Charlevoix slow-pitch team members or at the Chamber of Commerce, recreation department or, Carpenter Avenue ballpark concession stand.

Advanced prices are $2 for students 18 and under and for senior citizens 62 and over and $3 for adults. Gate prices are $4 for adults and $2.50 for seniors and students.

In his 42nd season on the road, Feigner is still firing away with 90 mph speeds, exhibiting 30 different pitches and striking out the side as if on command.

His routine includes pitching blindfolded and from second base.

'Night of music' features Iowa Rose, Dance All Night

Friday, July 24, has been designated as "music night" at the Venetian Festival with the return appearance of Iowa Rose. The four-piece musical group from western Michigan will perform with dance duo Dance All Night in East Park, said Jacquie Merta, director of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

Incorporated into the program will be the coronation of the 1987 Venetian Queen.

Iowa Rose will be appearing prior to performing on the opening night of the 79th annual Governors' Conference at Grand Traverse Resort at Acme.

Its performance ranges from boogie woogie to soft ballads featuring Mary Wilkinson, vocalist and rhythm guitarist. Other musicians are Jeff Rose on mandolin, guitar and bass; Mark Schrock on bass, mandolin, fiddle and harmonica, and David Raffenaud on piano, accordion and bass.

The dance team Dance All Night – Patricia Reeser and Daniel Gorno – performs traditional American, French Canadian, English and Irish dances. In honor of Michigan's Sesquicentennial, they are performing an original composition entitled "Sesqui-Saturday Night."

The band will be playing from 7 until 10 p.m. Friday with the coronation scheduled for 8 p.m.

Conservation corps provides Adult training, community projects

by PEG OHLE

During the days of the Great Depression, there was a federally financed program called the Civilian Conservation Corps which provided thousands of young people with a chance to learn marketable job skills while doing constructive work.

Today, there is a smaller, state-financed program called the Michigan Civilian Conservation Corps (MCCC) which is providing much the same service.

One of the MCCC camps is located near Vanderbilt in Otsego County, and six Charlevoix County young adults have gone there to prepare for a productive, independent life.

An MCCC crew built a dock at Depot Beach, where two Camp Vanderbilt overseers – Scott Gasperin, the camp director, and Arnold Morse, the education director – talked about the program.

The program is open to independent adults age 18 to 25 who are receiving general assistance from the Department of Social Services and are referred by that department.

While living in a camp setting, they work in the woods cutting wood for campfires, planting trees, making picnic tables for the transportation department, building bluebird houses and performing many other conservation and community services.

One group is now dismantling a structure to move to a state park.

The dock constructed at Depot Beach is being used for sailing classes conducted by the Charlevoix County Youth Activities Program.

"The work we do saves the state and other local governments money," Morse said. "We give back $1.25 for every $1 spent on the MCCC."

Members of the MCCC receive a small salary along with a place to live, food, clothing and instruction in various skills.

If they haven't finished high school, they are encouraged to take classes toward getting their diploma or a general education certificate.

Last semester, at Camp Vanderbilt, 70 percent of the MCCC workers took academic classes, some at the college level and others in the vocational field, as well as high school.

The MCCC really provides lessons in living, Gasperin said. "We give them experience in getting up and going to work on time. They are mostly people who don't have skills – life skills – and they're here to work and learn.

"There is no psychiatric treatment and no drug rehabilitation. If they needed that, they wouldn't be here. They're here because they want to be."

People are permitted to remain in the MCCC for a year at the most, with the intention being that when they "graduate" they will be able to get and keep a meaningful job. They will not be eligible for unemployment insurance.

To help toward this goal of habilitation, they listen to speakers in various fields of employment and often have field experiences in areas of interest.

Some of the people at Camp Vanderbilt have worked in the sheriff's office in Otsego County while taking courses in law enforcement at North Central Michigan College.

The Michigan Civilian Conservation Corps has been in operation for only two-and-a-half years and is still in its fledgling stage.

Besides Camp Vanderbilt, there is another residential camp at Proud Lake in Oakland County and one to be opened soon in Baraga County in the Upper Peninsula.

Another part of the program provides employment and training for some 500 young people who live at home and commute to job sites.

According to Morse, Michigan is one of 12 states with a civilian conservation corps program, but it has more than paid off, not only in value or work received but in getting thousands of young people off on the right track.

Doug McComb of the Charlevoix County Department of Social Services calls it a "real positive experience" for those who participate in the program.

Arnold Moore (left), camp education director, and Scott Gasperin, camp director, talk about the work of the Michigan Civilian Conservation Corps.

Opinion

Falling into the trap?

Tourist town. Tourist trap.

There's a thin line between the two. But where is it drawn?

A lot of the distinction is in perception. And a lot of people around town have the perception that things are changing.

Not necessarily for the better.

It's a hard thing to put your finger on, perception is. But the thoughts – or often the feelings – linger that something isn't as it was.

Is it something physical, such as the ever-changing makeup of the stores downtown? Is it something attitudinal, such as the anti-fudgie sentiments expressed by many?

Or is it just the season – that season of endless lines, of packed sidewalks, of gridlocked streets?

Certainly Charlevoix has not become a Mackinaw City – a town of nothing but gift shops and fudge shops, a town that rolls up the sidewalks when the summer season is over.

But neither is it a Petoskey – a city that welcomes its summer visitors but doesn't surrender itself to them.

It is a town that welcomes its tourists and caters to them. It is a town with a magnetic attraction.

It is a town, though, that many long-time residents think has been lost to the gold rush mentality – flock in, scrape away anything worthwhile and move on.

The perception of tourist trap can be traced partly to the vacillating tenancy along Bridge Street, with decade-old businesses counting their contemporaries on their digits.

The perception can be heightened by counting the types of retailers filling many storefronts. With no judgment made on the quality, here is the quantity (along Bridge from Belvedere to Dixon):

– Seven places sell; as a mainstay of business, T-shirts or sweatshirts;

– Four feature ice cream treats, a pair candy or fudge, and another candy and ice cream;

– There are three art galleries;

– And six tourist gift shops;

– Ten stores specialize in clothing other than T-shirts and sweats;

– Bicycles can now be rented at two establishments; – And there are 14 places to sit down and eat. To those restaurants can be added another 10 not downtown and a handful not in the city limits.

Each of these places – while many are class establishments – adds a little to the perception.

The perception that the town isn't what it was. The perception that it isn't what most want it to be.

Perceptions, fortunately, can change. And so can towns. The first step is recognizing that it's a short trip from tourist town to tourist trap.

Back in 1927, old Brother Lott, an 88-year-old friend of mine, was building a log cabin for himself. Now he and his friends had gotten just about everything done except for building the chimney for the fireplace. The day was getting on and they were getting kind of tired and hungry. So everybody really got busy and threw that chimney up in a hurry.

There was only one problem. They didn't set a proper foundation for the chimney. Instead of using big rocks at the bottom and little rocks at the top, they used the same size rocks all the way up. Guess what happened?

To tell it the way Brother Lott did: "We put the heat to that chimney and just about the time the smell of beans and cornbread was really gettin' good, we heard this loud crack and the whole thing came down. We all knew why. It took us 'til two o'clock in the morning but we rebuilt and built it right."

Sometimes we treat our lives a lot like that chimney building project of Brother Lott's. We hastily throw things together and are devastated when they fall apart.

We forget that God has a plan, a real sense of orderliness, for our lives. Instead of realizing that God has given us the faith to move mountains, we settle for a belief that's only an occasional match for a molehill.

If things occasionally fall apart on you, ask yourself whose plan you are following. Molehills are hardly a ripple in our lives if we're following God's plan. Mountains ought to plant a sense of expectation within us as we watch and see what neat things God is going to do next.

Hospice thanks those who helped

Editor:

The Charlevoix Country Hospice would like to again thank all the wonderful people who helped to make our second dinner-auction such a success. Thanks to you we do not charge for our services to the terminally ill patients and their families throughout Charlevoix County.

Some businesses and individuals were left out of the ad we had in the paper. We want to thank them publicly, too. Everyone was very generous in donating goods and services to be auctioned or given as door prizes: Bahnhof of Petoskey, Boyne Mountain, Bullfrog Light Co., Century 21 - Mark Kowalske of Boyne City, Charlevoix County Press, Circle Herb Farm, Expressions Unlimited, Carol McTaggart, Shop of the Gulls and Ye Nyne Olde Holles Golf Club.

Calling all boats

Clockwise

BY BOB CLOCK

The Chamber of Commerce wants to make this year's Venetian Boat Parade the best ever — but more boats are needed, according to the organizers.

If you have a watercraft suitable for lighting and parading around Round Lake during the climax of the Venetian Festival, by all means stop at the Chamber of Commerce office and pick up an entry form.

The boat parade certainly is one of the most fascinating mid-summer spectacles in North America. And you can be a part of it with very little effort — or a great deal of effort — depending on how fancy you want to be.

Every boat entered means the parade will be that much longer and more exciting.

A LOT OF US have got our comeuppance last week with the televised appearance of Lt. Col. Oliver North before the House and Senate Iran-Contra committee.

North, with his boyish good looks and a chest full of medals, apparently has won the hearts of the American people. The arrogance I expected was there, but it was tempered with a forthrightness that was somehow engaging. Some observers have likened him to a young Jimmy Stewart.

In fact, North has so captivated the imagination of the American people that there is talk — some facetious, some not — of running him for president next year on the Republican ticket.

Before an "Elect Ollie" campaign gets under way, however, I think we should all keep in mind that North's behavior as a functionary of the National Security Council not only violated the express wishes of Congress but also showed contempt for human life and common decency.

Let's remember that North was behind the sale of arms to Iran, the very same nation which held the American Embassy staff in Tehran hostage for 400 days. And to date the Ayatollah Khomeini, the old buzzard who runs that country, has yet to say, "I beg your pardon."

Let's also remember that the principal beneficiaries of the sale of arms to Iran were the Nicaraguan Contras, a band of right-wing extremists whose only goal in life is to oust the duly elected Nicaraguan government. That government, by the way, still — for some unknown reason — maintains diplomatic relations with Washington.

IT IS UNFORTUNATE that North's interrogators emerged from the hearings as the guys in the black hats. After all, they are the ones who were attempting to defend the U.S. Constitution and the rule of law. If they appeared belligerent in their questioning, they had a right to be. The Constitution obviously has been violated and the rule of law has been thrown out the window by North and his superiors.

Democracy, at least the way most of us understand it, means something entirely different to North. It makes you wonder how many government classes he skipped in high school. Or if he really understands what America is all about.

But North has survived the hearings as a full-blown national hero.

"Isn't he wonderful?" a little waitress asked a customer in a downtown Charlevoix eatery one morning last week.

"Not when you consider the grave implications of what he did," the customer responded.

"Oh, I don't know about that," the waitress answered. "I just think he is so darned cute!"

I hope none of live to see the day that "cute" is one of the criteria for election to the presidency.

In fact, I don't want to be around if a military marionette like Oliver North is ever elected to the Oval Office. But stranger things have happened in this old country of ours.

How in the world did Joe McCarthy ever get elected to the U.S. Senate?

City council's attitude is spend-spend-spend

Letters to the editor:

Editor:

Re: Charlevoix City Council's response to director Sherry Black's request for help with senior citizen activities.

Reluctantly on a split vote the munificent amount of $1,000 was proferred. Considering that neighboring cities gave more, our council's primary objection was that many senior citizens are too well off to receive additional help.

Now, one must remember that these are the same council members who of late have advocated the policy of spend-spend-spend. To wit: ferry beach purchase ... too much money. Also, questionable reasoning and for whose benefit? Not the citizenry, who will pay.

Next, the foolishness of optioning the Newman property and not buying. How about the wisdom of the property trade for the Erber Building, and the purchase of the post office building (after a new roof was installed)? Consider also, the screwed up affair of the post office and the public safety building which eventually required change of an alley purchase of part of Sybil's property and finally the purchase of the post office building.

Now, finally we come to the last "brain storm," the purchase of the house adjoining the new parking lot. Of course, the $70,000 purchase price is only the beginning, add another $70K-$100,000 to tear down the house and pave the parking lot.

All this, plus the additional cost to expand the new water treatment plant is being done, not for the average tax payer-citizen but, instead, for the tourists. Our city is being run for the benefit of the few at the expense of the many.

Do not forget all of the studies advocated by the council. Each of which cost the taxpayers thousands of dollars. Now the council is going to pay for a re-appraisal of residential properties (with taxpayer's money) and you can bet your bippy it is not to reduce taxes.

How about spending $2600 for a video tape to lure businesses to our city when any prospective entrepreneur can readily check the past history of business endeavors and quickly determine that Charlevoix council does not have the expertise necessary to maintain a continued controlled city growth within budgetary restraints.

However, only the voters are to blame, not necessarily those who do vote - but, those who sit and bitch and are too busy to spend 15 minutes on election day. I certainly hope some intelligent people wake up to what is happening to Charlevoix before it becomes just another tourist trap.

A further example of council's inability is demonstrated by the results of the recent $5,000 study regarding Cable TV. A large group of citizens were aware of the result before the study was authorized.

The council has for many years advocated the policy of "do not listen to the tax payers" just spend their money. After all who knows what is best for the citizens? Mother Charlevoix! - Not necessarily, after all we, the senior citizens, know how to vote.

Poor response from Congress

Editor;

On June 10 you printed my letter to our U.S. Senators Levin and Riegle concerning the Coast Guard boarding situation, accentuated by Mr. Biddick's experience in May. I thought you might be interested in the responses I received... or did not receive.

There was actually no response from either senator, but I had sent a copy of the letter to each congressman from Michigan and did hear from a few. Bill Schuette simply sent a copy of the United States Code containing the statutory authority for such Coast Guard actions... which I didn't consider much of a response to my concerns. Next, Guy Vander Jagt responded by sending me a copy of a letter from the Coast Guard in direct response to my letter to the congressman. This at least attempted to pacify my concerns.

The best response came from your own Bob Davis, who happens to serve on the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries in the U.S. House of Representatives. Congressman Davis' letter is attached if you should choose to share it with your readers.

To date, I have received no other responses from the 20 elected officials representing Michigan in Washington.

Bert Schafer
Holt

Davis' letter said, in part, that Coast Guard Commandant Paul Yost has agreed "changes in policy were needed and has issued new guidance." Among the changes, Davis said, was an order that the "level of boarding is commensurate with the threat." Said Davis: "It is clear to me that our part of the country does not present situations of extreme risk, and I see no reason for the Coast Guard to conduct every boarding with an assumption of illegal activity or personal danger."

Charge for answering false alarm going up

Persons using automatic burglar and fire alarm system service provided by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department will soon be paying more and paying for false alarms.

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners has raised the initial service fee from $30 to $50, and the annual renewal fee from $30 to $50. The old fees have been charged since the service ordinance was passed in 1975.

The county board also added three new sections to the ordinance.

One section provides for charging the alarm owner $50 for every false alarm received by the sheriff's department.

A false alarm is defined as "any alarm condition which is registered with the sheriff's department not resulting from criminal activity for which the alarm was intended."

Alarms set off accidentally would not be called "false alarms" if the sheriff is notified within five minutes. Also, alarms set off by storms would not be considered "false alarms."

Another section provides for the termination of service if false alarm invoices are not paid within 90 days after billing, and still another section requires all alarm systems be equipped with automatic turnoffs.

Sheriff George T. Lasater indicated in his activity report for last year his staff responded to 162 false alarms – 80 in residences and 82 in businesses.

They responded to three founded alarms in residences and three in businesses.

– Hilda Gibson will continue as membership chairman.

The society meeting was held at the historic Greensky Hill Church and featured a tour of the site including the council trees and the cemetery near the shore of Susan Lake.

The program featured remarks by Mrs. Willard Shomin of Petoskey, a descendant of Peter Greensky whose name the area bears, Ben Green of East Jordan and Jay Oliver of Charlevoix.

They spoke of history of the church, which dates to the 1830's, and of the people who have been prominent in its continued existence.

A social hour in the dining room was hosted by Phyllis Gill. Sixty members and guests were present for the meeting.

The next regular meeting of the society will be held at Harsha House at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 4.

Yachting Notes

A. NONY MOUSE

The Charlevoix Yacht Club sponsored its second annual George LaBlance Memorial Cup July 11-12 with 13 sloops racing to Beaver Island and back amid thunderstorms, gale-force winds, hail, rain and the nemesis of all mariners, lighting.

The yachts were divided into three divisions for the race.

The first boat to cross the finish each day was Gary and Sharleen Gleason's new Schock-35, Sorcerer. The overall winner of the storm-shortened race was Tom Orlow and his family aboard Slapshot.

The LaBlance Cup was awarded to the Orlows by George LaBlance III, the grandson of the late first commodore of the Charlevoix Yacht Club.

Division I: Flash (Gordon), Mud Duck (Bickersteth), Apothecary, (Ochs).

Division II: Nulli-Secundus (Miller), Blasen III (Jurries), Cygnus (Stewart), Kittiwake (Sievertsen-Lane).

July 8 marked the first Wednesday night race of the summer series of the Charlevoix Yacht Club on Lake Charlevoix.

The finishing order for the JAM Division was Maureen, Ribit, Peregrine, Flash, Apothecary, Canusa, Cheemaun, Sandpiper, Cabaret, Hot Mustard, Sunrise, and Stalworth.

PHRF A: Sorcerer, Respite, Gotcha, Night Moves, Miss Piggy, Wing Nut, Tigger, Mint Julip, Babe, Mr. Breeze.

Walk on city scenic route can lead to Mackinac

A walking tour of Charlevoix for visitors and residents has been set up by the Charlevoix County Youth Activities department.

The tour, almost a mile in length, begins at the Clinton Street-Bridge Street corner of East Park and proceeds west along Clinton Street to Park Avenue, northwest along Park Avenue to Grant Street, north along Grant Street to Palmer Avenue, east along Palmer Avenue to the Pine River Channel, and along the channel to Bridge Street, back to the starting point.

The Grant-Street-Palmer Avenue portion of the walk provides a good view of Lake Michigan and its sandy beach.

The walking tour is part of the state's "Walk Michigan" program. Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan will award a weekend on Mackinac Island – including lodging, meals and a "Walk Michigan" jacket – to the winner of a drawing among people who have walked in Charlevoix County.

The drawing will be held some time before Labor Day.

Those wishing to participate in the program should pick up a registration card in East Park between noon and 1 p.m. on any of these days: Friday, July 17; Friday, July 24; Monday, July 27; and Wednesday, July 29.

Jail cook hangs up skillet after 10 years

by FRAN MARTIN

After 10 years as cook at the Charlevoix Sheriff's Department jail, Marge Warner has retired.

"I'm out. I served my time," she said as she handed Sheriff George T. Lasater the keys to lockers and freezers in the kitchen.

The department hosted a retirement buffet luncheon to which fellow county employees were invited.

She was presented a watch and a plaque and a framed resolution commending her for her years of service from the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners. Lasater and Larry Matthew, chairman of the board of commissioners, made the presentations.

Warner said the thing that bothered her the most about the job was never knowing how many prisoners there would be for a meal.

"There were times when I'd prepare for a given number and a short time before the meal someone would come back with the news that there'd been an arrest and there would be as many as six or eight more," she said. "That and making certain that there was food that could be supplemented in a hurry in the event this would happen were my greatest concerns.

The department operated on a tight budget with a given amount allowed for food which wasn't easy for me. After I was there a couple years, I figured we could bolster the budget by having a garden. Harry Potter (now retired janitor at the jail) and I suggested this to the sheriff.

"We said he had the manpower at hand and we could raise our own fresh vegetables rather than buying them. We could freeze and store the excess for use through the winter. It started as an experiment and now it's part of the program."

Marge Werner, who retired efter 10 years as cook at the Charlevoix County jail, is given gifts by Sheriff George T. Lasater and Lerry Matthew, chairmen of the board of commissioners.

Venetian Times

Inside: Your special guide to 57th Venetian Festival

It's Venetian Festival time again – the 57th year Charlevoix has come alive with land and water activities at mid-summer.

This year's Venetian has the traditional events – with a few new twists thrown in.

One change parade watchers will notice on Saturday morning is there are lots and lots of clowns this year. In honor of the state's sesquicentennial celebration, parade organizers have rounded up what they hope will be 150 clowns of all sizes and ages.

The clowns will gather after the parade to release the 1,500 brightly colored helium balloons they have been carrying throughout the parade. The balloons have been donated by McDonald's of Charlevoix.

Another change this year involves the inclusion of a commercial category in the lighted boat parade on Saturday night.

And that ship in Round Lake Harbor – where the Mesquite usually sits – is the Katmai Bay, another Coast Guard cutter that is filling in for an open house on Thursday. The Mesquite is doing lighthouse repair work in Chicago.

The Venetian Queen pageant is also somewhat different this year, as the traditional formal event has been replaced by a more-relaxed contest Friday night on the East Park stage.

For all the details on this year's Venetian, pull out and save your copy of the Venetian Times included with today's Courier.

CONDOVERSY

Multiple housing debate entering third decade

by DON DIBLEY

"Is this type of harbor-front development desirable or isn't it?"

That question was asked about condominiums in a 1968 editorial in the Courier.

The answer remains elusive.

The issue in 1968 was the same as in 1987 – which is better for Charlevoix, individual houses or multiple-family dwellings?

Condominium legally is a form of ownership, but in common use the word has come to mean – at least in Charlevoix – any multiple-family housing unit.

While many people look at Charlevoix as the condo capital of the north, the city was a latecomer among northern resort communities. Places like Harbor Springs, Boyne Mountain and Boyne Highlands, Schuss Mountain near Mancelona and Timberlee near Traverse City had condo-type townhouses before Charlevoix.

And condos did not come easily to the city. A plan by Jim Davis to build an apartment building on Round Lake may have been the first seed in the dispute. That was in 1966.

Then, in 1968, the controversy took root when Jack Begrow obtained a permit to put a six-unit luxury apartment building on the north shore of Pine River Channel.

That project never grew, but the present-day controversy took full bloom when Begrow proposed a 32- to 36-unit building on the south side of Round Lake.

With the Wharf proposal came introduction into Charlevoix's lexicon of the word condominium.

Since then, of course, several condominium buildings have been built along the city's waterways. Apartments were followed by hotels and boat slips.

Proponents say condos make sense – they provide the means for many people who couldn't otherwise afford a summer home to have one because of rental opportunities, they make efficient use of the land, they are easy on city and school governments while providing top tax dollars.

Opponents say condos make no sense – they eat up valuable waterfront property, they block views of nature's beauty, they promote overcrowding and traffic problems, they cause nearby property values to unfairly rise.

Both proponents and opponents have another opportunity to air their views tonight when the city planning commission meets.

The planners will consider a request from Mayor Ralph McRae for a 180-day moratorium on review and approval of multiple-housing units and will re-hear a proposal to build a 21-unit motel along the Pine River Channel.

This is McRae's fourth attempt to get the planners to take some action to slow development along the shorelines.

On June 8, he initiated his request to limit land uses near the water to single-family residential and marine uses.

On June 24, he asked the planning commission to adopt his proposal, but received a lukewarm reception.

On July 13, the commissioners held a public hearing on the request, failing to adopt it. It was at that meeting that McRae proposed his moratorium, but the planners did not take up the idea because it was submitted after the agenda was posted.

This is lawyer Don Berlage's second attempt to get the planners to permit him to build a motel on Park Avenue without having to make a rezoning request.

Berlage contends his request falls within the allowable uses on a commercial scenic-zoned parcel. The planning commission voted 3-3 on the question of whether the use is allowed, and Berlage sought a rehearing with all seven members present.

Berlage, who also contends the mayor's proposed moratorium is illegal based on a recent Supreme Court decision, says there are only two or three places where lakefront multiple housing could be built.

Both proposals are on the planning commission's 7 p.m. agenda.

What do you think?

The debate over condominium development in Charlevoix continues more than 20 years after the first Round Lake apartment was proposed. In this very unscientific survey, the Courier wants to know what you think about current and future condo development. This is not a poll but just a request for opinions we can share with our readers. Let's start with a question first asked in the Courier in 1968:

Is this type of harbor-front development desirable or isn't it? ____________________

Should limits be placed on further development of multiple-family dwellings? Why? ____________________

Should more hotel-motel rooms be provided downtown for overnight guests? Why? ____________________

The Edgewater Inn has caused considerable comment – both from those who see it as an eyesore and from those who see it as a boon to the local economy. What do you think? ____________________

Nuclear plant opening doors

Big Rock Point celebrates its 25th anniversary this summer by opening the nuclear power plant to the public. A two-week public tour program will take place Aug. 10-21.

The event will provide the public with a rare opportunity to go inside a working commercial nuclear plant and learn, first-hand, about its operation. Visitors will see many areas of the plant including the control room, the turbine generator, and the distinctive green containment sphere which has been a Charlevoix area landmark since 1962.

Guides will be knowledgeable Consumers Power employees actively involved in operating and maintaining the plant or in providing support services from the utility's corporate headquarters in Jackson.

Tickets for the tours are available, free of charge, from the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce and the Petoskey Regional Chamber of Commerce. Those taking the tour must be at least 10 years old and have some form of identification with them.

Completed in 1962 at a cost of $27 million, Big Rock Point was the first commercial nuclear plant built in Michigan. It is capable of generating 69 megawatts of electricity, an amount sufficient to serve a community of 50,000 people.

AROUND THE TOWN

An engineer in hip boots measuring the depth of water is on the cover of the July Water Levels News Letter from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.... There is a slight smile on his face....

The smile probably is caused by the end-of-June Lake Michigan-Charlevoix elevation about 12 inches below what it was one year ago and about the same as one month ago.... However, the June mean level was still about 19 inches above the long-term average, and about 52 inches above the all-time June monthly mean low, which was set in 1964....

The corps' forecast of levels for Lake Michigan-Charlevoix shows the lakes are expected to be above the long-term average level during the next six months. The lakes are expected to begin their seasonal decline this month and, at the end of December, they are expected to be about 22 inches below what they were at the same time in 1986.

Hoffman Park is taking shape with the addition of plantings.... Grass and a bed of petunias have been added to the Park Street site, dressing up the brick and concrete walkway....

Still to come are stairs to Pine River Channel and a fence or curb between the park and the row of shops backing up to it....

The Downtown Development Authority is also looking for community groups which may be interested in helping with planting and maintaining the city's newest park.

Another park coming along nicely is Rotary Park on Carpenter Avenue.... The Rotary Club has quietly been putting together a recreational facility near the softball diamonds....

In already are a climbing gymnasium piece, berming and sand.... A concrete pad has been laid and a 30- by 60-foot basketball court is expected to be ready in about a month....

The Rotary has also been working with the Chamber of Commerce on improvements in front of the chamber's building.

Businesses spring up, change hands around town

Businesses sprout up in Charlevoix faster than weeds in petunia beds each summer. Some intend to become permanent fixtures, others plan to just stay the summer. Here's a look at several recent additions, compiled by Marlee Brown.

Beached Whale

Four years after opening Cravings, owners Marty and Mary Sue Walker have begun a customized silk-screened T-shirt shop, the Beached Whale, next door.

The name was the winner in a contest among the store's employees.

The pink and yellow shop is full of T-shirts and sweat clothing with designs for children and adults. This "fun wear" has been popular for two years in their Vero Beach, Fla., shop, Marty Walker says.

"Having two stores is easier than one because it makes the business less seasonal," he says. His biggest problem is getting enough cotton T-shirts, he says because they must be ordered six months in advance, due to a cotton shortage.

Walker believes having Cravings and Beached Whale as neighbors will help each other's business. The Bridge Street shop is open 10 a.m.-9 p.m. Monday-Saturday and noon-6 p.m. Sunday.

Charlevoix Candy

The Charlevoix Candy Co. has opened at 212½ Bridge St. Owner Dawn Carlson carries a wide variety of candy.

Walls in the shop are covered with a rainbow of Jelly Belles. Fudge and hand-dipped chocolates are homemade in Mackinaw City. Gummy products come from Germany.

Carlson owns another shop in the tourist village of Fishtown, near Traverse City. She plans to commute between her two shops this summer.

The Charlevoix Candy Co. will be open 10 a.m.-10 p.m. seven days a week, possibly through December.

Burger King

Burger King has opened what Charles Smelt, director of operations, calls "a new image facility" at 1408 South Bridge St.

Brass railings, hanging plants and framed artwork contribute to the look which has oak chairs and woodwork replacing plastic. The restaurant also has a self-serve beverage bar.

Owner Dick Andresen of Mt. Pleasant owns 10 other Burger Kings throughout the state: Smelt operates the stores in Big Rapids, Cadillac, Kalkaska and now Charlevoix.

Leslie Swenor is the store manager in charge of 60 employees.

Burger King's hours are 7 a.m.-1 a.m. Monday through Thursday, 7 a.m.-3 a.m. Friday and Saturday and 9 a.m.-1 a.m. Sunday.

Captain's Cove miniature golf course is lighted from four 60-foot towers which spread light across the site's man-made hill and waterfalls. The course has become a new landmark at the city's southeast entrance on M-66 near Captain's Corner.

Captain's Cove

Captain's Cove – an adventure golf course – in the Captain's Corner shopping center has opened.

The opening was long in coming for the Grand Rapids partners who started the project over a year ago. Their second contractor, Angelo Vozza Enterprises, took over construction this spring and just missed a goal of opening by the Fourth of July.

According to partowner Richard DeSpelder, Captain's Cove has been popular in its early days because miniature golf games can be tailored for young or old players at various speeds.

DeSpelder is pleased with compliments he has received on the asthetic improvement waterfalls and green hills have made at the M-66 entrance to Charlevoix.

Captain's Cove also has video games and a snack bar. The course is open 10 a.m. to late evening.

Greenleaf Gardens

Marianne and Doug Perrault have purchased Greenleaf Gardens from Ed and Peter Douma. The Perraults managed the flower shop for a year before purchasing the business.

Since the purchase, they have expanded the business. A third greenhouse is under construction to house an increased inventory of house plants, flowers and shrubs.

Perennial chrysanthemums will be grown on site this fall and poinsettias at Christmas time.

Doug Perrault studied business marketing at Northwestern and has studied ornamental horticulture and landscaping.

Both learned to arrange flowers from a floral designer in Traverse City, their former home. Perraults now live in East Jordan with their two children.

Greenleaf Gardens is open 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday year-round. The shop is located ½ mile south of the airport at 06918 Barnard Road.

Cabana Club

After five years of selling wholesale T-shirts across the country. Gayle Laffrey of Birmingham has gone into retail sales with the Cabana Club, a T-shirt and sweatshirt shop at 409 Bridge St.

Because she still operates her wholesale store in Birmingham, Laffrey is only in the Charlevoix shop on weekends. "My six Charlevoix employees basically run the business," she said.

Laffrey calls her merchandise, "handprinted resort wear." Shirts and sweatshirts are decorated with designs of seven artists. she plans to have special designs for the Venetian Festival and the Waterfront Art Fair.

The Cabana Club is open 10 a.m.-10 p.m. every day through the summer.

Kitchens & Interiors

Jim Tank displays his craftsmanship in his showroom at Kitchens and Interiors, 200 Antrim St.

The shop is full of kitchen cabinets, shelves and drawers. Behind the showroom is Tank's woodworking shop, where he builds custom furniture, staircases and mantels. Tank considers himself an artisan because he says he designs with understanding and consideration of the raw material's characteristics.

Tank built kitchens, interiors and houses for more than 10 years in the Charlevoix area before opening his showroom. Because he worked alone, customers sometimes had to wait a year for Tank's carpentry.

Tank now works closely with three apprenticing carpenters.

"If a job is done wrong, it is ripped out and redone," said Tank who says he is hard to work for. There is a human factor in custom work which should be appreciated, not eliminated, Tank says.

Tank's fourth employee, Mary Steele, runs the showroom. she also draws kitchen layouts and gives estimates.

Tank is working with an Amish custom cabinet company which will produce anything he draws in 11 species of wood.

Tank is taking a course to become a certified kitchen designer. He says Kitchens and Interiors is unusual because it can take a project from design to installation.

The show room is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday.

Cotton Harbor

Owners of Cotton Harbor at 317½ Bridge St. have refurbished a portion of the old Mont's Restaurant; making it a retail clothing store.

With white walls, light wood floor and white wicker furniture, the atmosphere is like that of an old front porch according to Randy Carey.

Carey owns the store with his wife Penny, brother Topper and sister-in-law Jaqui.

The majority of clothing is 100 percent cotton, which is the theme of the shop which carries men's and women's "resort wear."

Cotton Harbor is open seven days a week througbout the summer.

Little Caesar's

Little Caesar's Pizza in Captain's Corner is Roger Skiba's second franchise in Northern Michigan.

Skiba said his Petoskey franchise taught him the business can do twice the sales in a small carry-out shop in a busy shopping center than it can in a traditional pizza parlor.

Skiba said Charlevoix can easily support three pizza shops.

Besides pizza, Little Caesar's menu includes hot pasta dishes, sandwiches, crazy bread and salads.

The Charlevoix Little Caesar's opens every day at 11 a.m. year-round.

Krouse's Tire

Pam and Dave Murray have purchased Krouse's tire, a retail tire store.

The Murray's plan to add a Penzoil quick oil and lubrication service to the Cooper tire outlet. The store also has an automatic car wash and an outdoor car vacuum.

Murray says the building at 1108 Bridge St. was the first gas station in Charlevoix. The Murrays are refurbishing the store.

Krouse's Tire is open 8 a.m.-5:30 p.m. Monday to Saturday.

Brown's Dry Cleaners

Brown's Dry Cleaning has opened in conjunction with the Laundrette at 1204 Bridge St. Joyce Kern, owner of the three-year-old Launderette, runs the Charlevoix drop-off, pick-up location of Brown's Dry Cleaning.

Mary and Andy Brown, siblings and owners of the longtime Brown's Dry Cleaning of Cheboygan, have also opened a dry cleaning service on Mackinac Island.

Brown's Dry Cleaning is open with next-day service from 7:30 a.m.-9:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 8 a.m.-8 p.m. Sunday.

Opinion

Letters to the editor:

Merchants responding to demands of consumers

Editor:

Quite often in a free market society, the market dictates which business will succeed and which will fail. The merchants of Charlevoix have responded to consumer demand, not created it.

Sounding alarms in opinionated editorials make great copy, but also smack of a typical journalistic slant - talk to people who support your opinion, and ignore the big picture. Not terribly scientific. Did you ask any merchants in Petoskey how the summer trade has been? My own research suggests that the Charlevoix economy has never been healthier from a tourist standpoint.

It would be very helpful to our economy to have more factories to broaden our year round livelihood. But if you haven't noticed, the state of the Americas reveals we are turning into a service-oriented society as we lose our manufacturing edge abroad. May we suggest, in the future, such topical editorials as "that darned cement dust" or "25 good reasons to live without nuclear energy." It would seem we have one edge over Mackinac Island - we don't need to ban cars as long as we keep getting horse— from our own paper.

Condo development helpful

Editor:

As an economic development professional, I believe the continuing Charlevoix condo controversy reflects a confusion between Charlevoix's historic resort industry and its more recently developed tourism industry. Many of the comments at last Monday's public hearing on the mayor's proposed condo ban addressed impact actually attributable to tourist traffic (traffic congestion, parking problems, the bridge bottleneck) and not caused by condominium development or occupancy.

Charlevoix's early history as a summer resort community, when families stayed for the summer and fathers commuted by train for the weekends, is still evident today in the fine collection of Victorian and early twentieth century summer homes of the Chicago and Belvedere Clubs and the old railroad depot. Lifestyles and modes of transportation have changed over the years. Demand for second home development in northern Michigan is perhaps stronger now than ever as more affluent lifestyles make the "summer place up north" a possibility for more than the very privileged.

The growth of a day-tourism industry in Charlevoix in recent years is a poor substitute for the resort industry for which Charlevoix is noted. The impacts we notice in the peak of our summer months are virtually impossible for a community the size of Charlevoix to alleviate. Tourism is an unstable industry, with trips cancelled due to weather or the high price of gasoline.

The benefits to the community from second home (including condominium) development far exceed those derived from tourism, where spending may be limited to a sweatshirt, an ice cream cone, or a meal. Condominiums support the local building trades during construction, require maintenance and management upon completion, and their owners typically purchase groceries and other household items, including furnishings, in the local area. The owners of these condos represent a "captive market" who are more likely to visit Charlevoix more frequently and to stay longer to make their investment worthwhile. This offers Charlevoix an opportunity to broaden its seasonal economy.

Condominium development substantially increases the city's tax base, enabling a higher level of services for permanent residents, but does not create significant demand for services, especially when accomplished through the redevelopment of central city property not requiring extension of utilities and services.

Continuing development of Charlevoix's resort industry, through second home and condominium development, offers the best potential for not only enriching, but also stabilizing, Charlevoix's economy. It can accomplish the same objectives as industrial development – jobs, tax base, support for existing businesses, and creating demand for new businesses.

Instead of blocking condominium development, we should be working to capture the opportunity it represents. Charlevoix's land use development regulations offer adequate protection from being "overrun" by condos; we should have more concern about being run over by an RV on Bridge Street. I sincerely hope that we will refocus our energies to make the most of our unique opportunity in the future.

Charlevoix not tourist trap

Editor:

Charlevoix turning into a tourist trap? Give me a break!

Charlevoix has never looked more wonderful. Its reputation as a beautiful attraction to see is becoming worldwide as evidenced by the number of visitors from everywhere.

What more practical memento than an originally designed shirt or candy?

Check out the shops, the owners have gone to great lengths to avoid birchwood canoes or cheap trinkets.

No, Charlevoix isn't becoming a tourist trap – far from it.

Asians get taste of Charlevoix

Dear Editor:

I know, from reading Edith Gilbert's column, what fun she has in hearing of Charlevoix sweatshirts spotted around the world.

I thought you'd like to know that over the next two weeks, Charlevoix – or near Charlevoix – products will appear throughout the Far East.

My husband, Ron Pair, owner of Midwest International, left Sunday on a business trip to Shanghai, Hong Kong, Taipei and Seoul.

At each of his four stops, he'll be presenting his hosts with canvas Charlevoix tote bags filled with Rocky Top Cherry Butter, Kiwanis Maple Syrup, "Charlevoix the Beautiful" drinking glasses and post cards of various views around town.

I'm not sure what the morning meal consists of in China and Korea, but these Charlevoix delicacies could cause a whole new breakfast revolution in that part of the world.

Beacons of Blessing

A devotional column prepared by the Charlevoix Ministerial Association

submitted by
Rev. Bruce E. Hamilton
Community Church of God

The story is told of a father and daughter out on one of the Great Lakes in a boat. As they were steering for shore, they got caught in a violent storm that threatened to capsize them. The coast was rockbound and dangerous. At their home on the shore, the mother lit a lamp and climbed upstairs to an attic window that overlooked the water.

"It won't do any good, mother," the son called after her.

But she went up anyway, put the light in the window, knelt beside it and prayed. Out in the storm, the daughter saw a glimmer of gold at the water's edge. "We'll steer for that," the father said.

Slowly but steadily they came toward the light and at last were anchored in the inlet by their home.

"Thank God," cried the mother as she heard the glad voices and came down the attic stairs with her light. "How did you get here?" she asked.

"We steered by your light," answered the daughter, "although we did not know what it was out there."

All this deeply touched the son who was known for being a bit on the wild side. "Perhaps," he thought, "it's time I steered by mother's light." As the reunited family slept, he surrendered his life to God and asked Him to guide him over life's rough waters.

Several months went by and a serious illness struck the son. "He can't live long," was the doctor's verdict. And on another stormy night, it was obvious that he lay dying.

"Don't be afraid for me," he said as he saw his family's tears. "I'll make safe harbor because I am steering by mother's light..."

I really like that story because it reminds us of just how powerfully our lives can reflect God's love. Every waking moment of our lives, we can touch someone with the strength, grace and glory of His love. We need to look at our lives more from that perspective.

The challenge is to be reflectors of God's glory. I Peter 2:9 spells it out, "...you are a chosen people, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people belonging to God, that you may declare the praises of Him who called you out of darkness into His wonderful light."

Is your life reflecting God's light? Can others steer by the glow of God's love at work in you?

Smile gone at Oleson's

Clockwise

BY BOB CLOCK

It has been a bad week for shoppers at Oleson's. Every time I step inside the store I look for Frank Przybylski at his old stand near the front door.

Frank didn't exactly work for Oleson's, but he was there most days, greeting customers with a hearty smile, keeping the grocery carts properly nested and being generally helpful to shoppers.

But Frank suffered a heart attack at home last Monday and was gone before the ambulance arrived.

Which, at 87, is not a bad way to go.

Why did Frank hang out at Oleson's?

I never could get a proper answer out of him, but I think I know why.

He genuinely liked people and enjoyed being helpful. Besides, where else could you meet so many friends every day?

When Frank wasn't at Oleson's, you'd usually find him downtown with his special friend Gladys Pelletier on his arm. Sometimes they'd sit on a park bench to exchange pleasantries with passersby.

They also were regulars at Saturday night mass at St. Marys.

In recent years Mrs. Pelletier's eyesight has started to fail and Frank was her good right arm in doing household chores.

At the rosary service, Mrs. Pelletier expressed the fear that she would spend the rest of her life grieving for her old friend. I hope not, because that's the last thing Frank would want. He wanted everyone to be as happy as he was.

It was fitting that two Oleson's employees were among Frank's pallbearers — store manager LeRoy Buchanan and Danny McKenzie. Others were Louis McKenzie, Tony Faculak, Mike Przybylski and Clem Olach.

KEN COEN of East Dixon Avenue reports that a bad situation has developed at the boat launching ramp parking lot.

Ken, an avid fisherman, says that spots reserved for boats and trailers are being occupied by visitors to Ferry Avenue Beach.

As a result, boaters have to find some other place to park their cars and trailers after launching their boats. Sometimes the closest spot is some distance up Stover Road or down Belvedere Avenue.

Of course, other boaters must wait until the boater trudges back to the ramp and removes his boat from the slip before the next boat can be launched. The trek isn't so easy for Ken, who walks with an artificial hip joint.

On Saturday, Ken says he counted 28 cars without boat trailers in the lot. There were more, he says, but he stopped counting at 28.

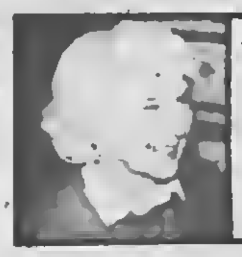
As far as I can see, we are going to have parking problems in that part of town until the addition to Ferry Avenue Beach is developed, with additional parking spaces.

In the meantime, it would be courteous of beach visitors not to monopolize the launching ramp parking area.

THE TOWNIES will meet the Belvedere Club Sunday, July 26, for their 26th annual Venetian Festival softball game, according to organizers Sam Supernaw and Warren Belding.

This year's game, which starts at 1 p.m. near the Belvedere Club's west gate, will be dedicated to the late Detroit Tiger Norm Cash who drowned last October while visiting Beaver Island. Cash lived in Charlevoix during the summer and played in last year's Townie-Belvedere game.

Supernaw and Belding have announced the following starting lineup: Steve Ager, Sam Supernaw, Pete Ance, Steve Dunkleberg, Dave Novotny, Carlo D'Angelo, Warren Belding, Topper Carey, Brendan LaBlance and Bob Schofield.



'Round Town

Radar saves party

EDITH GILBERT

The behind-the-scene crisis at the "heavenly" wedding of my nephew Peter Jay Smith and Nancy MacArthur last Saturday bears repeating. It has to do with the sudden and unexpected storm that hit at 6:15 for the "half after six o'clock" wedding at the Congregational Church, which was followed by an out-door reception on Michigan Avenue.

Metta McGarvey and crew were in charge of setting up for the sunset dinner in the garden overlooking Lake Michigan. They needed tables and chairs for 130 guests. On each table was china, flatware, glasses, napkins, petunia centerpieces, votive glass candleholders and placecards. Then the rains came! The tables were one inch too wide to go through the french doors, so they had to be disassembled and reset indoors.

In the meantime, Bruce MacArthur, father of the bride, tracked the storm, thanks to KHQ's radar equipment, which forecasts weather very accurately. The earlier 6:15 storm prediction had been right on schedule. When Bruce called KHQ again at 7:15, he was told "go for it."

Again KHQ was on target. The skies cleared and all the tables, chairs and placesettings were reset for the third time within the hour. A delicious meal prepared by Penny Shaw and Beverly White, professionally known as Putting On The Ritz, was beautifully served.

I doubt if the guests present were aware of the behind-the scenes turmoil. They had too much fun listening to the Epsilon Jass Band, and enjoying the bride's spur-of-the moment solo rendition of "Someone to Watch Over Me." (In case you didn't know, Nancy MacArthur is a member of the Army Field Band and Soldier's Chorus.) It was enough to give one goose bumps.

You'll be pleased to know that the Kappa Sigma Charlevoix 6th Annual Home Tour was a huge success. Five outstanding homes attracted the largest crowd ever. Over 450 people attended the event on a beautiful sunny day and the proceeds went to benefit the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

A small group, gathered at the Jervis Cottage, were in for a special unscheduled and splashing surprise. My younger sister, Margot, who is visiting me from California, was taking pictures in the garden. As she stepped back to focus the camera on the English Coswald Cottage, she stepped right into the free-form swimming pool with all her clothes on. Her pink skirt ballooned out, and we saw her pink shoes floating by, a most comical sight. Laughing and wet from top to bottom, she good-naturedly cried out, "How stupid of me."

Barb Evanish efficiently fished out the car keys from the bottom of the pool and dried Margot off with a beach towel. But unfortunately, the camera was ruined. Margot told me she wanted to make an impression on my friends when she revisited Charlevoix, but not exactly in such a dramatic and original way–nor with such a loud splash.

Family

Weddings

Lynn and Richie Hand

Zemske-Hand

Lynn A. Zemske and Richie M. Hand were united in marriage June 27 at the Bay Shore Presbyterian Church, with the Rev. Milton J. Walls Jr. officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Brousseau of Coventry, Ky., and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Hand of Charlevoix.

Approximately 100 guests witnessed the double-ring ceremony in which the bride was given in marriage by her father.

The altar was decorated with baskets of royal blue carnations, gladiolus and lighted candles, and each pew was marked with blue flowers tied with white ribbons.

The bride wore a Southern Belle gown of white dotted Swiss fashioned in off-the-shoulder style with bouffant sleeves. Her headpiece was a flowered hat with veil, and she carried a bouquet of silk blue and white roses and carnations.

Dorothy Morany attended the bride as maid of honor, and Kimberly Hand, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid. They wore royal blue gowns and carried bouquets of blue and white carnations.

Julie Miller, niece of the bridegroom, and Amanda DeFusco, niece of the bride, served as flower girls. They wore dresses of sheer organza trimmed with royal blue satin ribbon, halos of baby's-breath, and carried baskets of blue and white flowers. Albert DeFusco III, nephew of the bride, was ringbearer.

Jeffrey Kerr attended the bridegroom as best man, and David Zemske Jr., brother of the bride, was groomsman. Kevin Whitley and Dan Hand served as ushers.

Pauline Crandell provided selective organ music for the ceremony.

A reception at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Boyne City followed the ceremony. It was hosted by the parents of the bride and bride[illegible] and Mr. and Mrs. Dale Miller. The rehearsal dinner was hosted by the parents of the bridegroom and Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Kerr at the Kerr home in Horton Bay.

Following a wedding trip to Florida, the newlyweds are at home on Upper Bay Shore Road in Charlevoix.

Bethany Lutheran Church celebrating 40th anniversary

Bethany Lutheran Church will celebrate its 40th anniversary with a festival at 3 p.m. Sunday, August 2.

Three former pastors have been invited to participate in the celebratory service. The Rev. Albert Engler will be the lector, Pastor Duane Imig the liturgist and Pastor Jim Plackner the preacher.

Music will be provided by Maxine Brown and Plackner on the organ and piano and the choir directed by Vicky Piller will sing several selections. A banner has been designed and is being constructed by Peggy Wickstrom.

The church was formed in 1947 when a group of people of Lutheran background petitioned the Rev. Harold Krach, pastor of Zion Lutheran Church in Petoskey, to assist them in starting a congregation.

Services were held on Sunday afternoons in Charlevoix City Hall community room until the congregation secured land on Bridge Street.

With financial help from Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod's Michigan district, of which the church is a member, and the manual labor of the members, a church designed by Uno Suomela was constructed.

A sailboat heads across Lake Charlevoix during the third annual Irish Cup. The more competitive boats raced from Lake Charlevoix to Harbor Springs, while the fun class competitors headed for Ironton.

Charlevoix boats finish 1-2 in Irish Cup race

Charlevoix sailors took the top two places in the third annual Irish Cup.

Dave Strawbridge topped the field of 55 boaters with a corrected time of 2:11:32 in Pygmalion. Second was Gary Gleason in Sorcerer at 2:14:09.

There were seven classifications of boats – two spinnaker, three main and jib and two fun fleet.

Top finishers were:

Spinnaker Division A -- 1. Strawbridge, 2. Gleason, 3. Terry Mol and Doug Huyser.

Spinnaker Division B – 1. Fred Pike, 2. Mike Carland, 3. Wes Dilworth.

Main and Jib Division C – 1. Jack Begrow, 2. Lowell Blossom, 3. Larry Beck.

Main and Jib Division D – 1. Charles Bowers, 2. John Gordon, 3. Robert Wood.

Main and Jib Division E – 1. Bob Grove, 2. John Gaskin, 3. Bill Patenge.

Fun Fleet Division F – 1. Dave Loring, 2. John DeGroot, 3. Ford King.

Fun Fleet Division G – 1. Gordon VanWieren, 2. Mike Acker, 3. Roy Herald.

While the fun fleet sailed to Ironton, the more serious sailors raced from Lake Charlevoix to Harbor Springs.

Foot race medals picture Drenth

Medals bearing the likeness of the runner whose name they bear will be presented to the top three winners in the mile, 5K and 10K races of the Venetian Festival Jeff Drenth Memorial Foot Race.

The races honoring Jeff Drenth, will be held Saturday, July 25, as part of the Venetian Festival.

The medals and a plaque to be housed at the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce have been designed by all-state runner Doug Bergmann, captain of Charlevoix's 1986 cross country team which placed second in the state.

Entries are still being accepted for the event beginning at Charlevoix Elementary School. The one-mile race is scheduled for 9:30 a.m. and the 5K and 10K races at 10 a.m. Registrations will be accepted between 8:30 and 9:30 a.m. To register prior to the race, entry blanks are available at the Charlevoix of Commerce. The entry fee is $5 prior to July 25 and $6 the day of the race. A family fee for the one-mile race is $5.

The one-mile race is open to men and women 13 years and under to 30 years and over; the 5K to those 13 years and under to 50 and over and the 10K to men 18 years and under to 50 and over and for women 18 and under to 40 and over.

Ribbons will be awarded to all entries in the races. The top three finishers in all 30 age categories of the three races will receive medals.

Post-race refreshments, provided by Charlevoix merchants will be available. First aid stations will be open to 10K runners.

Robert Drenth, father of the late Jeff Drenth and official starter at the Central Michigan University Chip Relays will be assisted by his sons, Walter, Mark and Doug at the start and finish lines.

Drenth, 24 at the time of his death as the result of a heart attack, was a world class distance runner and a candidate for the 1988 Olympic team when he died June 2, 1986.

In naming the annual foot race in his memory race coordinator Pete Spieles, who had been Drenth's high school coach, said, "He had a great influence on racing in the area and had worked on and was dedicated to the Venetian Festival Foot Race in which he set a record that still stands. Therefore, I feel it is fitting that the race bear his name."

The permanent plaque at the Chamber of Commerce office will bear the names of top finishers in the 5K and 10K races each year.

Walstrom's Sea-gals of Harbor Springs came out of the loser's bracket to defeat North Emmet 8-2 and capture the title in a Pigtail tourney played at Charlevoix.

In fact, the two teams met three times in the tournament. The first time, the Sea-gals sent North Emmet to the loser's bracket by a 4-1 score. North Emmet moved on to meet Harbor Springs in the finals after eliminating Charlevoix 7-2.

In the game with Charlevoix, Lisa Kerbesky allowed four hits while Melissa Cox gave up seven including a home run by Yvonne Phillips.

North Emmet's win sent the tourney into an extra game with Tricia Naganashe pitching the Sea-gals to the title 8-2. She allowed 10 hits and Kerbesky gave up 13.

Naganashe had three of her team's 13 hits and Lori Sprague added two singles. Jennifer Bennett had three hits and Kerbesky two for North Emmet.

Yachting Notes

A. NONY MOUSE

Finally, wind on a Wednesday evening blessed the sailors of the Charlevoix Yacht Club as a high-pressure cell moved into the Charlevoix area, bringing 10 to 17 knots of wind and an excellent sailboat race.

Sorcerer was first in the A fleet for the fifth straight race while Wingnut, Bill Babel's little J22, played the windshifts beautifully to squeak out second place in front of Pygmalion. The order of finish from there was Slapshot, Mint Julip, Night Moves, Babe, Merry Hell and Gotcha.

Bandit continued her sterling strings of first in the B division while Tireless with a heavy air crew on board was second. Blasen nailed down the third spot despite some real trouble at the windward mark followed by Cygnus, Phoenicia, Kittywake, Foxy Lady, San-Suo-She, Nulli Secundis and Te-Gi.

The Jib and Main fleet had a new winner for the third week in a row as Flash took line honors with Sandpiper second and Cheemaun third. Results in the C fleet were rounded out with Apothecary, Tigger, Maureen, Canusa, Hot Mustard, Stalworth, Cabaret and Sonrise.

I had almost forgotten what fun sailing could be with some breeze.

Ladies take note – The annual Ladies Classic Race is scheduled for Sunday July 26, at 11 a.m. This is the only "all-women" event in the area and, as always, promises to provide real competition for female skippers and crew.

Immediately following the olympic triangle race, the husbands of the racers will sponsor a cookout at the Charlevoix Yacht Club.

For more information contact race coordinator Claudia Kenifeck.

Home runs dominate play in men's slowpitch league

It was home run night at the Carpenter Avenue field when all but one of six slow-pitch teams in action clouted at least one round-trip hit.

Grey Gables had six as the team kept its record clean with a 16-8 win over Richard's Topside Cafe, Pine Hill Nursery had two in defeating Connie's Place 13-4 and Davis Chevrolet had one in its win over Townhouse 12-6.

Mike Loper had three homers and Gary Drury, Gene Morrison and Kim Makarowski one each among the 19 hits Phil Skeel allowed. Ray LaVoie gave up a homer by Paul Skeel among the 16 hits he allowed.

Gary Wilson and Ken Peebles of Pine Hill hit homers off Jim Martin, who allowed 10 hits. Peebles, who claimed the win, gave up one home run to Larry Lemerand among the nine hits he allowed.

Bob Alexander allowed 19 hits, among them a home run by Cris Havens, in Davis' win. Dave Melke allowed 11 hits.

Little Caesar's defeated Connie's Place 12-10 as Bill Gauthier gave up 15 hits. Martin allowed 12.

Pine Hill scored 17 runs on 19 hits allowed by Ray Flowers, who was on the mound for Townhouse in Pine Hill's 17-7 win. Peebles, the winning pitcher, gave up nine hits and hit two homers while Wilson added one for Nursery.

Davis defeated CPI 21-3 as John Melke hit an inside-the-park homer for the winners. Bruce Metiva allowed six hits as the winning pitcher. Bill Green gave up 23 hits.

Pete Peterson

Painter of sailing vessels turns attention to Great Lakes ships

by SARA GAY DAMMANN

A major one-man show of the works of painter Pete Peterson is coming to Signature Gallery for three days beginning Friday, July 24.

Peterson paints classic sailing vessels and sea scenes. His watercolors, oils and limited-edition silkscreens and serigraphs are in major private collections and museums.

Signature Gallery co-owners Marina LaBlance and Mary Beth McGraw invited Peterson to Charlevoix when they opened the gallery this spring.

They say Peterson is anxious to learn more about the Great Lakes, because his works have focused on ocean vessels and draw from his knowledge of the Aleutian Islands, North Pacific, Bering Sea and Arctic and Atlantic oceans.

Among Peterson's works is an 11-painting series entitled "To the Great Ones," a varied view of wind-powered ships and their times. Included are the four-masted schooner the Falls of Clyde; the U.S. Constitution or Old Ironsides; the Roanoke, the last of the down-easterns; and the famed China clipper Thermopylae.

The show opens at 6 p.m. Friday, July 24. Peterson will be painting in the gallery both Saturday and Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m.

He has told the gallery owners he plans to being studies of Great Lakes vessels while in Charlevoix and may start painting Great Lakes scenes during the weekend show.

Peterson is bringing 30 works to Charlevoix, some original watercolors and some limited-edition serigraphs. Included will be his current series on the America's Cup yacht races.

McGraw became interested in carrying Peterson's work after viewing his collections at the Spring Art Expo in New York.

"His pieces are highly detailed. The authenticity of the ships is unparalleled. And I am told that if you know tides and prevailing winds, you can tell what time of day his paintings represent."

Artists joining gallery

Five artists are being welcomed into the Bridge Street Gallery with a party Friday, July 24.

Joining the artists displaying at the gallery are Bill Allen, Ken Scott, Krys Lieffers and Doug and Laura DeLind.

Available to visitors at the 7 p.m. event will be hors d'oeuvres and punch.

The annual "Splash" promotion will continue until Aug. 17 at the gallery featuring the works of Northern Michigan artists.

Sari King portrays the mermaid at the Bridge Street Gallery's "Splash."

Obituaries

Pischner

A memorial prayer service for Charles R. Pischner, 73, of Green Bay, Wisc., was held at Winchester Funeral Home Friday, July 17. Rev. Bernard Scheid of Chicago officiated.

A graveside service was held Saturday at Holy Cross Cemetery on Beaver Island.

Mr. Pischner died Dec. 19, 1986, at Green Bay, Wisc. A funeral service was held at St. Philip Church in Green Bay on Dec. 21, 1986.

Born on Beaver Island Feb. 2, 1913, son of Herman and Alice (Allers) Pischner, Mr. Pischner was raised on the island. On Dec. 27, 1941, he married Alice Gallagher at Green Bay, Wisc., where they always made their home. Mr. Pischner was a merchant seaman until his retirement. He was a member of the International Shipmasters' Association.

He is survived by his wife, Alice; two sons, Jack of Richmond, Va., and Clyde of Iron River; five grandchildren; a brother, Willard of Charlevoix and a sister Evelyn Prokup of St. Ignace.

The family suggests memorials to the Inter-faith Seaman's Ministry.

Lanie Wilderom conducts class aboard a sailboat as part of the Youth Activities-sponsored sailing course.

2nd sailing class session set

The Charlevoix county Youth Activities department is registering boys and girls from 8 to 20 for sailing lessons at Depot Beach.

Classes for those from age 8 through 13 will be held from 10 a.m. to 12:45 p.m., and classes for the older group will be held from 1:45 to 4 p.m.

This will be the second session for the sailing classes. Youth Activities Director Mike Davis says the first session was very successful and he hopes to be able to sign up the needed number for this session.

Students are supervised by adult instructors and are provided with life jackets which they must wear at all times when on the water.

Instruction includes daily chalk talks, on-shore drills, and every-day water practice. While learning, the children proceed through seven steps, from seaman third class to skipper.

The more advanced students may be placed with a Charlevoix Yacht Club racing skipper for a taste of adult racing.

Registration may be made at the offices of the Youth Activities Department at 208 Mason St., just west of the County Building. Further information is available by calling the office at 547-5930.

Cost of the program is $90 for the two-week session, but several scholarships are available for children who cannot pay this amount. Participants must have some swimming skills.

Fund set up to buy bus for trips

The Charlevoix County Commission on Aging is setting up a memorial fund to accept contributions for the purchase of a bus to be used for out-of-county trips of senior citizens.

According to Art Saworski, director of the commission, use of County Transit System buses is limited to Charlevoix County and adjoining areas, such as Petoskey.

"We could probably buy a used bus from the state for not too much money and we would arrange trips for the seniors," Saworski said.

City gets ready to pave 3¼ miles of roads

The first concrete – or asphalt – work in the city's $1.6 million road: sewer-water improvement program is expected to begin in September.

Bids are being solicited for 19 separate paving projects. The bids will be opened at 11:30 a.m. Thursday, July 11.

The resurfacings are the first-year projects in a five-year plan worked up by an infrastructure needs study committee.

The needs study committee pared down a $3.9 million, 15-year program proposed by city staff.

City council increased citywide taxes by almost 4 mills in June to pay for the improvements. The program will be reviewed on an annual basis, with funding for any subsequent years being approved a year at a time.

The overall program includes storm sewer and water main construction, sidewalk replacement, sanitary sewer work and street pavings.

Work to be done in 1987 besides the pavings is construction of a water main across the lower Pine River Channel near the old railroad crossing.

Since the needs study made its recommendations, City Manager Mike Wiesner has added a couple of street sections to the list.

Final determination will be made by city council after bids are received.

Here are the streets included in this year's resurfacing plans:

– Burns for 450 feet from Crouter to Auld.

– Carpenter for 1,200 feet from Charlo to Norwood.

– Central for 300 feet from Cherry to Elm.

– Eaton for 1,200 feet from May to the top of the hill near Leonard.

– Ferry for 2,270 feet from Eaton to the curb section approaching Belvedere.

– Grant for 400 feet from Park to the fish hatchery.

– Grant for 1,270 feet from Antrim to Garfield.

– Green for 450 feet from State to Bridge.

– Lake for 1,320 feet from Park to Garfield.

– May for 1,300 feet from Garfield to Carpenter.

– Park Row for 300 feet from Cherry to Dixon.

– Nettleton for 450 feet from Petoskey to Crouter.

– Newman for 2,100 feet from State to Sheridan.

– Norwood for 1,000 feet from Carpenter toward Garfield.

– Robinson for 450 feet from State to Bridge.

– Sheridan for 630 feet from Garfield to Westwood.

– Sunset Drive for 800 feet from Circle Drive to Michigan Beach.

– Westwood for 930 feet from Sheridan to Beacon.

– Wood for 450 feet from State to Bridge.

Wienser estimates it will take about 4,500 tons of asphalt to cover the 3.25 miles.

Parade clowns still sought

Organizers of the Grand Venetian Street Parade are still looking for volunteers to march in the parade as clowns.

Honoring Michigan's Sesquicentennial year, plans are to have 150 clowns in the Saturday, July 25, parade.

All clowns will provide their own costumes but there will be make-up stands at the parade line-up. Clowns can be any age but young children should be supervised. The parade is scheduled to start at noon Saturday, at the intersection of Carpenter and Bridge Street.

Those interested in marching as clowns should contact the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

Cruiser burns in Round Lake

A boat docked in Round Lake was severely damaged by fire early Tuesday.

The 21-foot Meklir's Michigass is owned by Sam Meklir of Bloomfield Hills. No one was aboard at the time of the 3:50 a.m. fire.

The fire at the foot of Clinton Street was spotted by the Coast Guard and bridge tender, who called the city fire department. The Coast Guard assisted in extinquishing the fire and towed the boat to Bellinger's Marine.

Lakes expo set

The third annual Lake Expo will be held from 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Sunday, July 26, at the University of Michigan Biological Station on Douglas Lake.

It is sponsored by the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council, a nonprofit organization which works to protect the quality of water resources in Emmet, Charlevoix, and Cheboygan Counties. The Expo is free and open to the general public.

Among the activities planned are pontoon boat trips from 11 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. during which participants will collect water samples, measure water clarity and learn how oxygen and temperature vary at different lake depths.

Gordon Wellman, president of Charlevoix County State Bank gives a check to Dave Arnold, who built the Operation Petunia watering truck tank. On hand for the presentation (at right) ere LoAnne Brown, bank vice president; Butch Russell, who donated the paint job done by Floyd Genia; end chairman Dale Boss, who has been making daily waterings during hot weather. Each watering of the five-mile, 50,000-petunia bed takes about 45,000 gallons of weter. Also contributing to sprucing up the truck purchased by donations have been Boss' wife Merilyn, who painted the flowers and wording; the Bosses, who paid for the cab, chrome bumper and stereo system; Mayor Ralph McRae, who provided Dutch street organ music tapes from a world tour for the sound system; LexaLite International; Medusa Cement; and Bo and Jim Boss, who pinstriped the truck.

Other counties' views asked on landfill

by PEG OHLE

Members of the Charlevoix County Solid Waste Planning Committee want to get some answers from nine northern Michigan counties about their present and future plans for disposal of their solid waste.

Also, they want to know if the governments of these counties are willing to pay for cleaning up surface and ground water contamination should it result from disposal of waste from their counties in the Charlevoix County Landfill.

Haulers from the nine counties have, at one time or another, all deposited garbage and-or trash in the privately operated Charlevoix County Landfill located in Eveline Township.

The Charlevoix County committee is in the process of updating the Charlevoix County solid waste plan and is trying to determine whether or not unlimited dumping in the Charlevoix landfill by out-of-county haulers should be continued, and what other types of waste disposal facilities should be considered.

The committee, through its chairman, Tom Wieland, is asking the nine county boards to answer five questions:

– How much solid waste do you now generate annually, and what volumes do you project for the next 22 years?

– What facilities do you use to dispose of waste generated in your county (landfill, transfer station, incinerator)?

– What alternative disposal methods and-or disposal sites are listed in your current solid waste management plan?

– When was your current solid waste management plan approved by the Department of Natural Resources?

– Can you state the willingness of your county to participate financially in the cleanup of surface and ground water contamination should it result from the disposal of waste from your county in the Charlevoix County Landfill?

All counties in Michigan are required by law to write a plan seeing to it that "all solid waste is removed from the site of generation frequently enough to protect the health and delivered to licensed solid waste disposal areas."

The last solid waste management plan written for Charlevoix County was approved by the Department of Natural Resources and became effective in 1984. However, two landfills in the 1984 plan have been closed, leaving only the Charlevoix County Landfill to accept garbage and trash from not only Charlevoix County, but a much larger out-of-county area.

The counties using the Charlevoix landfill, to which Wieland's letter was directed, are Antrim, Emmet, Cheboygan, Presque Isle, Otsego, Crawford, Kalkaska, Grand Traverse and Leelanau.

Information supplied by these counties will be used by the Charlevoix County Solid Waste Planning Committee as it proceeds with writing a new plan.

The next meeting of the committee will be held Thursday, July 30, at 7:30 p.m. in the commissioners room of the District Health Department Building in Charlevoix.

Representatives from some counties may appear personally to present the information.

Several members of the committee have expressed hope that northern Michigan counties can get together on some kind of a regional plan for solid waste disposal, perhaps with a combination of landfills, incineration and recycling facilities.

School board hears talk on foundations

The Charlevoix Board of Education Monday heard Shirley Martin of Educational Foundation Consultants, Inc. of Williamsburg outline the advantages of a foundation and explain how it would operate once established.

The focus of a foundation, she explained, is to provide resources for any number of qualified purposes including education. She outlined in detail the method of organization and further implementation through use of a local board.

The initial investment would be approximately $7,000. No action was taken by the board after hearing the presentation.

57th Venetian features several new happenings

Some new twists along with many traditional events mark this year's 57th Annual Venetian Festival on Wednesday to Sunday, July 22-26, in Charlevoix.

Named after the colorfully decorated boat parades first held on the canals of Venice, this yearly celebration has grown to become the centerpiece of summer activities for Charlevoix residents and visitors alike.

The fun starts early this year with an exhibition softball game between famed athlete and showman Eddie Feigner, whose team is known as "The King and His Court" and the Charlevoix All Stars at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, July 22.

The game will be at the Charlevoix City Ballfield with tickets costing $3 for adults and $2 for senior citizens and students. Gates open at 6 p.m.

On Thursday, July 23, the Leisure Time Amusement Carnival will open for the weekend in the parking lot off East Clinton behind Cinema III. The carnival rides will continue through Friday and Saturday.

Also on Thursday, the U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Katmai Bay, a 140-foot ice breaking vessel, will be docked in downtown Charlevoix and will host an open house from 1 to 4 p.m. For the past two decades Coast Guard open houses on Venetian Weekend have been held on the buoy tenders Sundew or Mesquite so this year's tours will be interestingly different.

Harsha House, the Charlevoix Historical Society museum on State Street next to First State Bank, will be open Thursday from 1 to 4 p.m. and will keep the same hours the following Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Also operating on Friday and Saturday will be many food booths in East Park manned by service clubs, churches and youth groups. Even a dunk tank will be featured this year.

A special guest to the community for this year's festival will be Warren Pierce of Detroit radio station WJR. Pierce plans to broadcast his popular afternoon show live from Charlevoix from 1 to 3 p.m., interviewing several local individuals.

Friday evening's activities get under way at 6 p.m. in East Park with a "Night of Music" at the band shell. The folk-bluegrass-swing band

Iowa Rose returns this year, again with the Dance All Night cloggers. The concert lasts until 10 p.m.

Also on Friday evening is the coronation of Miss Charlevoix at 8 p.m. on the East Park stage. This marks a departure from the format of recent years in which the pageant was held on Thursday evening of Venetian weekend in the high school gym. But it is actually a return to the format of the competition as it was held for many years.

Queen candidates, wearing evening gowns, will each answer one question on the stage and 1986 queen, Tara McLelland, will give her farewell address before the crowning of this year's royalty.

Back at the city ball field, the 12th annual Charlevoix Fastpitch Tournament will begin at 6:30 p.m. Friday. The tournament is sponsored by the Charlevoix Recreation Department and features 10 of West Michigan's finest teams. It will continue through the weekend with finals scheduled for 3 p.m. Sunday.

Saturday is the most action-packed day of Venetian weekend. At 9:30 a.m. the Jeff Drenth Memorial Footrace gets under way at the Charlevoix Elementary School featuring 1 mile, 5K and 10K events.

Run for many years as the Venetian Footrace, this event has been renamed for Charlevoix native Jeff Drenth who was a world-class distance runner before his sudden death from a heart ailment two years ago. Registration for the races will be held from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. at the elementary school.

At noon the Grand Venetian Street Parade will start from the intersection of Carpenter and Bridge (one block further south than in past years) and proceed north on Bridge through the downtown to Clinton Street where it will turn west to State Street.

The Venetian Parade is always a treat for the whole family -- even if the sunlight does bother some visitors' eyes.

The longer parade route this year will hopefully enable more people to watch the parade comfortably.

Serving as honorary grand marshal of this year's parade will be Fran Martin whose long journalism career in Charlevoix has made her one of the community's most respected members.

In honor of the Michigan Sesquicentennial celebration, parade organizers are attempting to have 150 clowns marching in the parade.

They will be joined by a colorful assortment of bands, floats, drill teams, color guards, queens, antique vehicles, skaters, horses and other entries. In recent years the parade has featured upwards of 80 entries.

Following the street parade, entertainment begins in East Park and continues through the afternoon and early evening. First to perform will be parade bands including the Newman Navy League drum corps, the Sons O'Scotia, the Grand Traverse Highlanders and the Plymouth Fife and Drum squad.

Following a presentation by the Fitness Firm at 3 p.m., special duo of Polynesian dancers called the PuaLei Dancers will perform on the East Park stage at about 3:30 p.m.

They will be followed by several area musical groups including The Local Jam from 4 to 6 p.m., the Bay View Brass Quintet at 6 p.m., Larry Wojcik's 17-piece Big Band at 7 p.m. and the Charlevoix Alumni Band at 8 p.m.

At 7:45 p.m. WKHQ's Tim Moore will present the newly crowned Miss Charlevoix and her court.

boats will be assembling in Lake Charlevoix for the annual Venetian Boat Parade.

Starting at about 8 p.m. with the sailboats under sail, the parade will enter Round Lake and circle around the perimeter vying for prizes in each of three categories.

Boats in the classic category will circle at about 9 p.m. and as the sky darkens the decorated boats with their colorfully lit displays will enter the harbor.

Capping the day's activities will be a spectacular fireworks display launched over Round Lake from near the Beaver Island ferry dock. Thanks to additional financial support from the city of Charlevoix and many donations, this year's Venetian fireworks display will be almost twice as big as recent years.

On Sunday, July 26, an all-you-can-eat pancake breakfast will be held at the American Legion Hall on East Garfield from 8 a.m. to noon. Tickets are $2.50.

As the Fastpitch Tournament winds up Sunday afternoon, the Charlevoix Buffs will host a Model Airplane Fun Fly from 1 to 5 p.m. at their field off Sequanota Road in Eveline Township, one-half mile from Ferry Road.

Iowa Rose

Iowa Rose headlines

Friday, July 24, has been designated as "music night" at the Venetian Festival with the return appearance of Iowa Rose. The four-piece musical group from western Michigan will perform with dance duo Dance All Night in East Park, said Jacquie Merta, director of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce,

Incorporated into the program will be the coronation of the 1987 Venetian Queen.

Iowa Rose will be appearing prior to performing on the opening night of the 79th annual Governors' Conference at Grand Traverse Resort at Acme.

Besides playing at concert halls and festivals throughout the Midwest and Canada, Iowa Rose has been featured on National Public Radio and TV's Nashville Network. The band has recorded two albums.

Its performance ranges from boogie woogie to soft ballads featuring Mary Wilkinson, vocalist and rhythm guitarist. Other musicians are Jeff Rose on mandolin, guitar and bass; Mark Schrock on bass, mandolin, fiddle and harmonica, and David Raffenaud on piano, accordion and bass.

The dance team Dance All Night – Patricia Reeser and Daniel Gorno – performs traditional American, French Canadian, English and Irish dances. In honor of Michigan's Sesquicentennial, they are performing an original composition entitled "Sesqui-Saturday Night."

The band will be playing from 7 until 10 p.m. Friday with the coronation scheduled for 8 p.m.

Past, present musicians invited by marching band

The Charlevoix High School Band will march in the Venetian Festival street parade Saturday, July 25.

All members, present as well as past, may march in the parade said director Terry Isenbarger.

A rehearsal has been scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Thursday, July 23, in the high school band room.

Fran Martin selected as parade marshal

Fran Martin has been selected as the honorary grand marshal of this year's Venetian Festival parade.

Martin, who has been an area newspaper reporter for 48 years and has been involved in numerous community events, was chosen by the parade committee.

Martin was asked to be the grand marshal because of her dedication to the community over the years, the committee said.

"She's always doing nice little things for people," said parade organizer Merell Harrod, "like remembering kids' birthdays."

Everybody in town knows Martin, Harrod said, and the Venetian organizers wanted to honor her.

"Everything you do, you do because you want to," said Martin in talking about the many community activities she has been involved with over the years.

A familiar sight in her motorized wheelchair, Martin has been an institution in Charlevoix for decades.

A registered nurse, she graduated from St. Mary's School of Nursing in Grand Rapids before an auto accident left her legs paralyzed.

She has been a reporter for the Petoskey News-Review (then the Evening News) since 1939 and for the Courier since 1943.

When the correspondent for the Petoskey paper quit, a friend who worked there suggested to Martin that she apply.

When she protested that she knew nothing about newspaper work, Martin recalls, "my friend said it was time to learn."

Besides her newspaper work, Martin has been involved in community projects ranging from the court jury board to the Charlevoix Area Hospital Guild, both of which she is currently a member of.

She is also the home service volunteer for the Red Cross.

She served on the Community Chest (now the United Way) and was among those who helped organize the Waterfront Art Fair.

Martin also was a member of the committee that installed the first lights at Kipke Field in 1954.

Many of the high school athletes she reports on now are the grandsons of athletes she covered in earlier years.

Her special interest in schools and children was acknowledged by the Class of '85, which dedicated its yearbook to her.

She is also proud of an award she received from the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference a couple years ago.

"Normally they don't go outside their own organization," she said. The athletic conference recognized her efforts in covering high school sports for four decades.

Naming her grand marshal, Harrod said, "was done out of love and affection for her because of all the things she has done for all of us."

5 seek queen's crown in revised pageant

This year's Venetian Queen will be crowned in a less-formal setting than previous years' pageants.

Five teens are candidates to reign over this year's Venetian Festival and represent the community until next July.

Those vying for the crown now worn by Tara McLelland are Sue Annis, Kimberly Hand, Jessica Marie Houghton, Nicole "Nikki" Kurchinski and Wendy Suzanne Voisin.

This year a panel of judges will meet the candidates at a luncheon, then have a personal interview. Later the candidates will be interviewed briefly on the stage in East Park during Friday's "Evening of Magic" before the judges make their decision. The queen will then be crowned on the bandstand in the park.

"There was not the interest in the pageant so we have decided on this method rather than dispense with the idea of a queen entirely," said Jacquie Merta, executive director of the sponsoring Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce.

The five candidates are: – Sue Annis, 19, is 5-foot-3 and has brown eyes and brown hair. She is the daughter of James and Lorriane Annis.

–Kimberly Hand, 17, is 5-foot-8 and has blue eyes and brown hair. She is the daughter of Merle and Jane Hand.

–Jessica Marie Houghton, 17, is 5-foot-5 and has blue eyes and brown hair. Albert and Elaine Houghton are her parents.

--Nicole Kurchinski, 17, is 5-foot-7½ and has green eyes and brown hair. David and Lee Kurchinski are her parents.

–Wendy Suzanne Voisin, 18, is 5-foot-7 and has blue eyes and light brown hair. She is the daughter of Donald and Vicki Voisin.

On Saturday, July 25, the queen and her court will ride in the street parade at noon. They will then be introduced from the stage in East Park at approximately 8 p.m. Saturday during the musical program prior to the Venetian Boat Parade on Round Lake.

During the upcoming year, the queen will represent Charlevoix in various festivities around the North.

Venetian Queen candidates (clockwise from top left) are Kim Hand, Jessica Houghton, Wendy Voison, Sue Annis and Nikki Kurchinski. The winner will be chosen Friday night in East Park.

Last year's Venetian queen, Tara McLellan.

King and His Court bringing softball exhibition to city field

Softball legend Eddie (The King) Feigner will lead his 4-man King and His Court team against the full-sized 9-man Charlevoix All-star team Wednesday, July 22.

The event will help kick off the annual Venetian Festival, said Ike Boss, director of the Charlevoix Recreation Department, which is sponsoring the game.

The game will start at 7:30 p.m. with gates opening at 6 p.m. at the softball field on Carpenter Avenue.

Advanced tickets can be purchased from Charlevoix slow-pitch team members or at the Chamber of Commerce, recreation department or Carpenter Avenue ballpark concession stand.

Advanced prices are $2 for students 18 and under and for senior citizens 62 and over and $3 for adults. Gate prices are $4 for adults and $2.50 for seniors and students.

In his 42nd season on the road, Feigner is still firing away with 90 mph speeds, exhibiting 30 different pitches and striking out the side as if on command.

His routine includes pitching blindfolded and from second base.

Feigner has pitched before small crowds and large. In 1966, 44,000 watched him pitch in the Astrodome and in 1976 he played before 46,000 in Dodger Stadium.

Three slugging teammates complete the Feigner team. They include shortshop Craig Estrada, a former minor leaguer in the San Diego Padres organization, catcher Tim Mackin, a former pro softball leaguer and Dave Booth, who hit 125 home runs last year in his first year as first baseman.

Feigner has more than 117,000 strike outs in his career and Mackin averages 300 homers a season.

Venetian Memories: A HOMECOMING

The 57th Venetian Festival featured a clown-filled street parade, spectacular fireworks and a downtown packed wall-to-wall with people. Inside today's Courier are views of various activities. After the parade, clowns gathered at the fish pond in East Park to release (above) the 1,500 balloons they carried. And at night, people watching the boat parade gathered on the Round Lake docks to watch the show.

Boat parade winners were: Classic -- Princess Blanc, owned by Bill and Julie Munro of Fenton; Lynn, owned by Jack Malpeli of Charlevoix; Maggi, owned by Doug Bergmann of Charlevoix; Commercial -- Charlevoix County State Bank, Gil-Again owned by Gil Ziegler; Individual -- Mike and Kay Coulter; Frank Ochs; second division -- F. James Stewart; Best of show -- Gil-Again.

Readers say no to more condominiums

Condo opponents are having their say while proponents are saying nothing.

At least that's how a Courier request for comments on the two-decade controversy is shaping up.

Of the questionnaires returned from last week's paper, not one so far contains ~~nice~~ words about condominium or hotel development near the downtown lakes.

As stated on the questionnaire, the completely unscientific request for comments is not intended to be a poll. There have been about two dozen responses so far.

Here are the questions and excerpted samplings of the answers:

Is the type of harbor-front development desirable or isn't it?

"No – it creates extraordinary congestion by people and traffic. It places demands on water and electrical systems and sewage systems."

"Let's go for high value, low density development (residential) instead of a special purpose resort or conference center."

"Condo development is okay up to a point, but that point has been reached in the Round Lake area."

"One is more aware of the commercialism of our town now than the breathtaking beauty and serenity we once had."

"Do not clutter the remaining view that is left to us."

"They also spoil the view of the lake for those who can't afford such expensive accommodations or who would like to share the view with many instead of just the condo owners and their guests."

"Harbor areas now available should be saved for boat shops only or boat related business."

"I think we are destroying our children's inheritance."

"Look at what Medusa did to our south shores. It is really too late now to try to save our natural beauty."

"The harbor front is interesting to see and watch. If it is covered, it denies all of us an enjoyable activity."

"There are few differences between condominiums and tenement housing. History shows us that the condos of today will be the tenements of tomorrow."

"Round Lake is already almost completely surrounded. Traffic and parking already a serious problem."

"I think we have built more con-

200 foot limit from water eyed

Proposed limits on land uses near the city's lakes may be considered by the planning commission Monday, Aug. 10.

Wording of "overlay" zoning restrictions is being worked on by the city attorney at the direction of the planners.

Such limits, if approved by city council, would apply on top of whatever restrictions apply now in the zoning category existing in the specific area outlined.

Commissioner Barb Fels drafted a request to the city planner for a zoning law amendment that would limit uses within 200 feet of Round Lake and Pine River Channel to single-family housing or marine-fishing uses.

She also proposes a 32-foot height limit in that area; the present limit is 35 feet.

The planners asked the city staff to come up with the proposal after rejecting Mayor Ralph McRae's request for a 180-day moratorium to review existing laws and recommend changes.

City attorney Jeff Van Treese told the planners, in a letter, he considered the moratorium illegal under Michigan law.

McRae earlier asked for a ban on condominium-type buildings within 200 feet of Round Lake and the Pine River Channel but that request was rejected in a vote of the planning board.

A request by Don Berlage to go ahead with a 21-unit hotel on the Pine River Channel is stalled at the planning commission.

After planners disagreed, on a 3-3 vote, with his assertion the hotel is allowed under the property's present zoning, Berlage asked for a rehearing before the full board.

When the commission was again one shy, Chairman Walt Hufford put aside Berlage's request.

Constitution essay 3rd in state

Sean Henne a student at Charlevoix High School has been selected as the Michigan third place finisher in a U.S. Constitution Bicentennial Essay contest.

Robert Helmus of Grand Rapids was the winner and Kevin K. Russell of Schoolcraft was runner-up. Henne will receive $250.

The essays were selected from among 15 regional finalists. Nearly 300 Michigan high school students entered the writing competition. Nationally, nearly 13,000 high school students participated in the National Bicentennial Essay Contest.

Henne submitted two essays in regional competition and received first and third place awards. Henne's third place regional winner was selected as the third place winner in the state competition.

Helmus, Russell and Henne will be honored on Aug. 20 in ceremonies at the Michigan Supreme Court.

Sean's prize-winning essay appears on page 7.

AROUND THE TOWN

Charlevoix's world record cherry pie lost its place in the record books over the weekend when Traverse City prepared a 14-ton dessert as part of the National Governors Conference and Michigan Sesquicentennial celebration.... The pie contained 20,736 pounds of cherries and 3,689 pounds of sugar, along with flour, corn starch, vegetable oil, salt, shortening, water, salt and dextrose....

Charlevoix baked the pie Traverse City surpassed back in 1976 as a U.S. Bicentennial event.... The seven-ton achievement is commemorated at the south fire station in Charlevoix Township where the giant pie tin remains on display.

This year's Charlevoix the Beautiful Visitors Guide and the annual Charlevoix Directory gatefold birdseye-view of the community have hit the streets.... The two publications were delivered for businesses to hand out to visitors before the Venetian Festival weekend began.....

The visitors guide features 50 Things You Should Know About Charlevoix and is packed with information from local firms.... The directory shows the location of many city attractions.... The directory was produced by the Chamber of Commerce and the visitors guide was produced by the chamber and the Courier.

Heat wilts petunia treasury

Keep Charlevoix Beautiful is seeking additional donations for its Labor Day fund-raiser.

The grand prize is a 1987 Ford Mustang convertible. Other items are being sought for the auction, which will be held at the Weathervane and Edgewater Inn.

Donated services, rather than items, are being collected for this auction, said Bruce MacArthur, president of Keep Charlevoix Beautiful. Items were auctioned at the picnic following the Operation: Petunia planting in May.

The services KCB is looking for, MacArthur said, are things such as a gourmet dinner for six or eight, gourmet picnics, cruises, golf outings, luxury hotel accommodations or gift certificates.

KCB would like the donations to have a value of $150 or more, MacArthur said, in keeping with a sesquicenntenial theme.

Persons who purchase tickets on the Mustang will attend the Labor Day festivities, complete with food and dancing. Interspersed in the evening will be the auction.

MacArthur said other people will be allowed to make sealed bids on the auction items, and a list will be published.

Each $100 ticket for the car entitles the holder to two places at the auction-dinner.

KCB raised $4,200 at the Operation: Petunia picnic and has a matching goal at the Labor Day event.

Money is needed because of three major unexpected expenses, MacArthur said.

The first is additional cost of watering and weeding caused by this summer's unusually hot weather. Dale and Marilyn Boss have been watering the five miles of petunias every day, instead of every other.

While organizers of similar events in such places as Cheboygan and Pierre, S.D., have told KCB the weather has taken its toll on their flower beds, the Boss' efforts have kept the petunias blooming with 45,000 gallons of water a day.

In Pierre, the capital of South Dakota, Boss said, the governor's wife is among those who take a turn at the end of a water hose to try to keep ahead of the heat.

While residents have made extra efforts to weed the beds, MacArthur said, the hot conditions have made weeding more troublesome than in past years. KCB has paid for some outside weeders to try to keep up.

Weeding has taken three times the manhours this year, MacArthur said.

A second expense is the new petunia watering truck, MacArthur said. While many of the items – such as the tank – and the paint job were donated, MacArthur said, there have been some higher-than-expected costs.

"We've got a much better truck," MacArthur said, pointing out the showpiece nature of the vehicle, which has represented the city in parades and is expected to appear in the Thanksgiving Parade in Detroit.

Vandalism to the prize Mustang has also been costly, MacArthur said. A new convertible top and new tire must be purchased after vandals punctured both on separate occasions.

The car is now being removed from in front of the Chamber of Commerce at night, he said, to try to minimize further damage.

Tickets for the prize are selling faster than they did last year, said MacArthur, who expects them to sell out within a couple weeks.

People with items or services to donate to the auction may call MacArthur at 547-6960 or write to P.O. Box 1, Charlevoix, by Sept. 1.

Opinion

Letters to the editor:

Town's 1st gas station was at Belvedere-Bridge

Editor,

I beg to differ from the statement made in the Charlevoix Courier that the first gas station in Charlevoix was built in 1106 Bridge Street.

In the early '30s Benjamin Brown and William Wallace purchased the area at the southeast corner of Bridge and Belvedere (where the 7-Eleven store is presently located). The gravel and sand was sold to the U.S. government at $1 a yard in reconstruction of the Lake Michigan piers.

Brown and Wallace constructed a service station that was purported to be the first station north of Traverse City, where Rennie had built one. The pumps were of the visable type where the gas was hand-pumped up into a glass container and would flow by gravity into the tank of the car.

Prior to these gas stations were curb pumps of the above type, one I remember was located in front of Ben Brown's (now the Market Mall).

Before this construction the hill on the southeast corner of Bridge and Belvedere was vacant and I remember Buffalo Bill and Pawnee Bill exhibited their Wild West shows in the summer season.

In the late '20s and early '30s the Highway Dixie Trail turned at Antrim Street then at Sherman and thus to the Barnard Road corner where it turned west in approximately the same location as U.S. 31 now travels.

Bridge Street ended at Carpenter Avenue until the new relocation of U.S. 31 was completed in the early '30s.

Further deponate sayeth Not.

Edgewater improvement over old lumberyard

Editor,

I read with interest the letter to the Editor describing the "monster" on Round Lake which was creeping up Bridge Street. I presume this was a reference to the new Edgewater Inn.

We own a unit in Edgewater Inn. We recently received our yearly tax bill. We visit Charlevoix frequently (even fall, winter and spring!). I support the local merchants and businesses.

I believe that Edgewater Inn is a vast improvement over the decaying lumberyard that existed on the site, and the tax base is certainly increased, and with convention facilities more people will be coming to Charlevoix during the "off season" - if indeed there is one in the north country.

Perhaps a shuttle bus could be used in the winter to take skiers to the ski resorts that are located nearby. Perhaps Waikiki Beach in Hawaii would be prettier as a pristine wilderness but the high rises don't seem to reduce the tourist trade!

Edwin H. Gullekson, M.D.

Northside view of freighter in channel lost forever

Editor,

Last Sunday evening the Calcite II, a 604-foot freighter came through the channel at Charlevoix. When the boat whistled for the bridge, my grandsons called to me, "Will you take us to see the big boat?' and, nothing loath myself, I answered, "Hop in the car!" So my daughter, the two boys, and I drove down the two short blocks to the top of Bridge Street hill, and fell in line with the other south-bound cars.

We waited, while the two boys kept clamoring, "Where is it? Where is it?" Then suddenly I was aware that a terrible thing was happening: we couldn't see the freighter. From the top of the hill we could not see it approach, we could not see it when it was behind the bridge and, worst of all, we couldn't see it as it slowly entered our beautiful harbor where we knew from the past that it would seem almost to fill up Round Lake.

Desperately I pulled the car out of line and in great anger and distress I drove, too fast, almost to the end of East Dixon where I turned on a dirt road and went down the hill so my little boys could catch a glimpse of a sight familiar to me but no longer to be familiar to thousands, only to a few.

Change is good if it accomplishes the greatest good for the greatest number of people. If our council, the governing body of our town, thinks this is a boon to Charlevoix, all of us, their constituents, had better be at the polls next election day.

Edgewater Inn is there forever. Is this the heritage you want to leave your children?

Lyla Arvilla

Hotel or multiple-family?

Editor:

Ms. Sullivan voices an eloquent plea for "condo" development in downtown Charlevoix. I am, however, under the impression that her employer, Mr. Berlage, is asking that the planning commission see his property as botel-motel rather than R-4 which is multi-family housing.

I asked Mr. Berlage to explain why he is making this request at the planning commission meeting. He chose not to answer.

Grandparents alert

EDITH GILBERT

Grandparents' attention! A special concert has been designed for you and your grandchildren by the Northwood Orchestra at 3 p.m. July 30. Ronald McDonald will be in attendance, followed by a reception in the galleries of the McCune Arts Center in Petoskey. Adult tickets are $5 and children's $2.50.

What a delightful way for grandparents to share a summer memory with the younger generation. For all concert information, please call 347-4337.

This is the ninth season that we are fortunate to have the Northwood Symphony in our area. The "Classics," three-week series began Tuesday, July 21 at McCune Arts Center and continues on consecutive Wednesdays at Holy Childhood in Harbor Springs. The Pops" series is being held outdoors at Black Forest Hall in Harbor Springs on three consecutive Fridays at 7:30. Here you may enjoy a bucolic picnic supper on the rolling grassy hills. Bring your own blanket or sit under a tent and enjoy the fragrant setting. Conductor Don Yaeger promises you an outstanding program.

And finally, do mark your calendar for Thursday, Aug. 6. It's the date of the annual Auction for the Arts for the benefit of the Crooked Tree Arts Council. This year the event will be held outdoors, also at Black Forest Hall in Harbor Springs. Sharing the huge tent on alternate evenings with the Northwood Orchestra is good economy, Don't you think?

If you have an attic treasure to dispose of, call 347-4337 for pickup. Or if you are looking for that special something to add to your collection be there on Aug. 6th. Admission is $5, which includes refreshments.

Ernest Dumouchelle, noted auctioneer from Detroit, will be in charge, along with some surprise local celebrities. Be there.

Anyone driving up Petoskey Ave. on the north side, must have noticed the attractive apartment complex nearing completion. There are three separate buildings with 24 one- and two-bedroom apartments. The Teklin Management Corp., based in Grand Rapids, expects to hold an open house in the middle of July.

Each building has its own laundry facilities and in addition to having a playground area for children, there will be an on-site manager.

Rents depend on a person's income. The low range goes from $247 to $280, and the maximum rent could be as high as $400. All this, thanks to the Farmers Home Administration.

Now there's a genuine improvement Charlevoix can be proud of!

Understanding Friday

Clockwise

BY BOB CLOCK

"T.G.I.F."

You hear it every Friday morning around the coffee maker at the office.

"Thank Goodness (or Thank God) It's Friday."

The expression is one of relief that the week's labors are almost over, that Friday night and a nice long weekend lie ahead.

"T.G.I.F" suddenly took on a new meaning for me during my two-week vacation in June. The first Friday was great, but the next two were sort of blah and I realized that work is the only thing that gives any substance to leisure time.

And I suddenly felt sorry for all of the jobless and otherwise unemployed to whom Friday is just another day — not the threshold to a glorious weekend.

Of course, some folks work on Saturday and Sunday. But they also have their Fridays — even if they fall on some other day of the week.

Not long ago I fixed a martini for my sister who is now retired but recalls her working days as a school teacher. She took one sip, leaned back in her chair and relaxed.

"It tastes like Friday night," she said.

I knew what she meant.

VENETIAN NOTES: It is generally agreed that something has to be done next year to beef up the Venetian Boat Parade.

This year, only five boats entered — and four showed up. It had to be one of the smallest Venetian flotillas on record.

Tom Hawley and John Ochs, this year's co-chairmen, tried every trick in the book but failed to get much cooperation from boaters. Some said they were too busy to decorate their boats. Others were afraid they would damage their watercraft with all the traffic in Round Lake. Still others said they wanted to watch the boat parade from shore.

One suggestion is that all the boaters who dock at the municipal marina Venetian Weekend be required to enter the parade. But that sounds too dictatorial.

Another suggestion is that the recruitment of boaters be turned over to the marinas or the Charlevoix Yacht Club. Cajoling and arm-twisting by felow sailors just might work.

One thing is for sure. We have to have more lighted boats in the parade — or change the name of the Venetian Festival to the Fireworks Festival.

The fireworks were the best ever and the record crowd of spectators in East Park was well pleased. The folks from Central Lake gave us a bang all right, just like their T-shirts promised.

SPEAKING OF T-shirts, Detroiters are acquiring a new pride in their home town. During the Venetian Festival I saw three T-shirts boosting Detroit in downtown Charlevoix. Not the Detroit Tigers, mind you, but Detroit itself.

As a former Detroiter, I still have a warm spot for the "City of the Straits" and I'm glad others share my feelings.

AFTER THE STREET parade, Judy commented that Vietnam veterans seem to be acquiring a better opinion of themselves, judging from their relaxed "body language" along the parade route.

Immediately after the war, the vets seemed defensive and defiant — almost to the point of belligerence — whenever they appeared as a group in public.

Lately, however, their demeanor, their confident stride, their "body language" says they have a better opinion of themselves and a healthy respect for the pivotal role they played in American history.

This has been apparent not only in Charlevoix but wherever we have seen contingents of Vietnam veterans on parade.

Which is just great. That war has left deep enough scars on the American psyche.

Beacons of Blessing

A devotional column prepared by the Charlevoix Ministerial Association

Community Church of God

Most cars today have FM radios and more folks seem to listen to FM than AM while they drive. But if you've got a minute, switch yours over to the AM side and tune in WJML (1110Khz) the next time you drive by the airport.

You may be able to hear some Morse code along with the music. The code is sending out the letters C-V-X, the abbreviation for our airport. What you are listening to is a harmonic or a kind of electronic echo of a beacon at the airport that guides pilots. If they follow the primary signal correctly, it will guide them to a safe landing even in bad weather.

Have you ever felt like you needed a beacon, a signal to guide you in your daily living? God has provided just such a signal for you in the Bible. In its 66 books, God through His Holy Spirit has provided us with everything we need for receiving a daily sense of direction and purpose for living.

Get into its pages and be open to God's voice. Yes, God does speak and you will hear Him if your heart is truly prepared to listen. You may discover a passage that you have read many times before suddenly fits a very real situation that you face. As you pray about that passage, your own prayer, prompted by God's Spirit, can open your eyes to His answers. Changing circumstances may be God saying, you trust yourself. Now it's time to trust in Me.

Be observant. In Genessis 22, Abraham was called upon by God to take his son Isaac to the wilderness and sacrifice him. He did not tell Isaac what was going on but Isaac knew something was up. "Where's the lamb, father?" he said. "God will provide the lamb," was Abraham's faith-filled reply. God did provide. Just as Abraham was about to raise the knife over his son, an angel directed him to look up. There was the lamb.

How often when we've needed a sense of direction, has the problem been our failure to look up. We need to be more observant and see the ways God is at work.

Finally, be obedient. The beacon at the airport would be useless if pilots ignored the signal it set out. Don't ask God to help you out of any problems you are facing if you're not prepared to do whatever He tells you. God is not against you. He is for you. His word is not there to confuse you. It is to make everything in life clearer and easier to understand. Don't hesitate to trust God. His wisdom and His love will never fail.

Family

Weddings

Nancy and Peter Smith

MacArthur-Smith

Nancy Olive MacArthur of Washington, D.C., and Peter Jay Smith, also of Washington, were married Saturday evening, July 11, in the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Morgan MacArthur of Charlevoix, and the bridegroom is the son of Robert B. Purdy and Dr. Margot Smith of Berkeley, Calif., and Jerome W. Smith of Anaheim, Calif.

The Rev. Philip G. Schairbaum officiated at the double-ring ceremony, which was witnessed by approximately 130 guests.

Sprays of baby's-breath tied with white satin bows attached to beribboned poles marked each pew.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a short-sleeve gown of white silk shantung with a cathedral train. Triple bands of silk edged the wide V-shape neckline accenting the classic lines of the gown. Her veil was attached to a band of white silk flowers and faux pearls, and she carried a nosegay of white roses, tiny carnations, and baby's-breath centered with rubrum lilies.

Nancy DeBliek of Kalamazoo attended the bride as matron of honor, and three sisters, Laurie R. MacArthur of Flint, and Karen M. MacArthur and Marjorie G. MacArthur, both of Alexandria, Va., were bridesmaids. They wore tea-length gowns of silk taffeta in a raspberry color fashioned with bouffant sleeves and basque waistline. Their bouquets were all-white nosegays of roses, tiny carnations, and baby's breath. They wore matching sprays in their hair.

Norman Montano of Berkeley, Calif., served as best man. The bridegroom's two brothers, Walter Smith of San Bruno, Calif., and Lawrence Smith of San Jose, Calif., and Erik Lundteigen of Charlevoix were groomsmen.

Sgt. Joel Dulyea of the U.S. Army Field Band, Soldiers Chorus sang "And This is My Beloved" with the bride's sister, Karen MacArthur. Elizabeth Humphrey provided organ music for the ceremony.

The bride's parents hosted an outdoor reception at the Michigan Avenue home of their cousins, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick W. VanDuyne. The bride's aunt, Mrs. Addison Fox McGhee Jr. of Anchorage, Ky., was in charge of the guest book.

The bridegroom's mother hosted the rehearsal dinner on Friday evening at 419 Michigan Avenue.

Following a wedding trip to Mackinac Island, the newlyweds are at home at 4000 Cathedral Avenue, Washington. The bride will leave soon for a tour of Japan with the U.S. Army Field Band as a member of its Soldiers Chorus. She is a graduate of Hope College. Her bridegroom is affiliated with the Hewlett-Packard Corp. and attends American University.

Oldest petunia weeder receives award on birthday

Mildred Scott of Charlevoix was given the "broken hoe" award by Keep Charlevoix Beautiful Inc. on her 90th birthday July 23.

KCB gives the award each month to a volunteer who has done an outstanding job of weeding petunia beds along U.S. 31.

Mildred Darnton assisted her mother in hosting a luncheon attended by 30 at LaCroft.

Guests listened to music recorded in earlier years by Scott, who often sang in Charlevoix churches or visits here with her family. They also viewed a quilt she made as teenager.

Scott is the daughter of David Eckinger, a Charlevoix city alderman in the early 1920s and owner of a wholesale-retail fishing business.

She married Roy I. MacArthur of Flint and lived there for many years. After MacArthur's death, she married Hugh Scott. They retired to Charlevoix about seven years ago.

In addition to her son, she has two grandchildren, Don Willis of St. James and Ann Willis of Charlevoix, and one great granddaughter, Ashley Willis of Hillman.

She thanked the more than 80 people who sent gifts, cards and flowers.

Note pad sales aid hospice

The Charlevoix County Hospice has been given two original scratch board drawings by the late Rev. Harold E. Kohn for reproduction on note paper to be sold by the hospice.

Both drawings are wildlife scenes and were printed on high quality paper by Seeley's Printing Service of Charlevoix, which donated part of the printing costs.

All proceeds from the sale of the note paper will go to the hospice operating fund. The note paper is available in Charlevoix at the Mayfair gift shop in the Edgewater Inn. It sells for $2 for a package of 10.
